Why Should You Worry?

WIT is the physic for worry, the antidote for the weather, and the characteristic of a famous group in Atlanta.

Their stories can temper the heat of July to the comfort of a fall day, and make a bleak moment in November as verdant and as burgeoning as the rarest time in April.

Judge Andy Calhoun sat smoking a pipe fashioned after the head of Voltaire, and looked a-far off in pleasant reminiscence.

"I shaH never forget it. Nobody will let me," said Judge Andy. "I was recorder then. You know the funniest things in the world happen in recorder's court, and the saddest. Mary Ann Johnson had hurt Mary Lou Thomson's feelings, not to mention blacking one of her eyes, and pulling out her hair.

"Well, much had been said before opportunity came for Mary Lu to speak. I could tell that she had much to say, standing there with her arms akimbo, patting her right foot, and swelling out like a pouter pigeon. She was not unlike a politician who hasn't uttered his opinions yet at a joint debate.

"'Well, we'll hear from you next," I decided. I was afraid she'd blow up.

"'And I'm goin' ter tell you de truf, jedge.' She siddled up a little closer, and everybody leaned over to listen, because everybody knew Mary Lu had much to tell. 'De whole truf, jedge, jes you listen to me. Dats de meanest woman in our alley. Jedge, she's de meanest woman in dis state. She's so mean she hates herself. Jedge, she's got a little boy meaner any man you ever saw. Mean, he'd steal out of a church plate. And, jedge, listen to me.'

"Mary Lu struggled for breath like a revivalist who's about exhorted himself out. But though she lacked breath it was plain that her brain teemed with a great thought, an unsurpassed bit of comparison. Everybody felt that the climax of Mary Lu's testimony had been reached, that she was about to express the height of Mary Ann's little son's meanness.

CLIMAX OF THE STORY.

"'Judge,' she'd caught her second wind. 'Jedge, dat boy can cuss. He, jedge, he can outcuss you.'

"There was another time when I was used more diplomatically. The bearer of the testimony in this instance was Wesley Scandrich. Wesley was the foremost figure in police court. He got to be as much a part of it as the recorder. Wesley was tried regularly once a week, except for intermissions spent at the stockade.

"It was at the time of one of his periodical residences at the workhouse that I visited the city prison. It was a holiday, and, as recorder, I was asked to addres my brothers whom I had sent to jail. When I had finished, Wesley, who had the tongue of an orator, was told to speak his mind.

"At his peroration, he came to the topic of recorders.

"'Now Jedge ...nderson,' said Wesley, 'he was a mean man, shore. And Jedge Kontz, he was worser yet. And Jedge Calhoun?'

"Wesley recalled all in an instant that I still was recorder, and that inevitably he would again be tried before me.

"'Well, as fer Jedge Calhoun, he does de best he kin, and we has ter bear wid him till his time is out.'

"I guess General E. P. Alexander told the funniest army story I ever heard. Soldiers were working in the trenches at Petersburg, just before the battle of the Crater. Along came a shell, exploded near one man, and blew him high in the air. When he hit he first felt to see if he was all right, and then looked 'round in a dazed but inquiring sort of way.

"'Boys,' he asked, 'have we tuck them or have they tuck us?'

Now, perhaps you've heard the store that Nat Wills borrowed from Walter Taylor, city clerk. This story is said to have added more to the avoirdupois of humanity than any other ever imagined.

HOW THE DOG DIED.

"'Bill—Bill he'd been to Mississippi, to the plantation,' as Mr. Taylor first told the story. "'And Bill had seen all the folks and his master was asking him for the news.

"'Well, yer dog's dead,' said Bill.

"'Dog's dead? Old Dan! that's bad. How'd it happen?'

"'Well, you see, sir, the horse he got scared and he kicked the dog.'

"'Horse scared. That's funny. How—'

"'Fire—'

"'Yes, sir; you see yer barn burned down.'

"'Barn burned.

GOSPEL OF THE PRISON

PANORAMA OF THE ATLANTA FEDERAL PENITENTIARY.

A PRISONER AT THE FEDERAL PENITENTIARY.

"SOCRATES, Columbus, Napoleon, others whom we hail today as great men, were the persecuted and martyred of yesterday. Was not Christ crucified?

"In the beginning, there was a ball of dirt 25,000 miles in circumference hurled through the air. Earth was created from this chaos, and now we find ourselves here. But in the end there will be nothing but the ball of dirt.

"Meantime there is only one real standard of success: Knowledge that you have done your work well—smiled your broadest, gripped hands your heartiest, helped along mankind.

"Brother, shake your grouch, do your work, and be cheerful. The chronic kicker generally has a kick coming—his way."

This sermonette is from the Atlanta federal penitentiary, a part of the Gospel which the men imprisoned there are preaching to their free brothers.

The most remarkable bits of advice, of philosophy, of experience, to be found in any modern publication, are printed in "Good Words," the prisoners' paper.

They describe it as an effort to better the men in prison, but a fitter description would be the "Gospel of the Prison," the new words and the new thought which men of the penitentiary are uttering out of their profound and moving experience.

A CONVICT'S MESSAGE.

A year ago, this month, the prison paper published the editorial upon "Success," in which a convict said that there can be no success except in good work.

"I look on that man as happy, who, when there is a question of success, looks into his work for a reply."

"The failures of today," continued the prisoner, "are oftentimes the successes of tomorrow; yet no man can be a success except at his work, and he who has no work to do will never know success."

And as he went on, he said:

"Cities may be rebuilt, states may overcome disasters, nations may survive defeat and become stronger, but he who remolds his character from the wreck of his life has accomplished more than all these."

His Gospel was good work, good work under all conditions, good work in face of defeat, and, though he was a prisoner, a convict sentenced by the government, he was finding the opportunity to preach his Gospel to the outside world as well as to his fellow prisoners.

This convict happened to be Editor-in-Chief of "Good Words," and in the issues which followed monthly, he repeated, and emphasized, and impressed that message—Good work, good work whether you are prisoner or free man, good work whether you have apparent failure or apparent success.

No. 2331'S EPIGRAMS.

Other convicts were uttering other words which they felt the world well might heed. Register No. 2331, in an epigrammatic way, taking to brief paragraphs rather than to editorials, said:

"He serves God best who serves humanity truest. For:

"Who treats his fellow man most square,
Has prayed the most effectual prayer."

"There are men in this world (we have all seen them) who would not give ten cents to help a man, but who would spend $10 to harm him. Observe:

"The slanderous tongue, the libelous pen,
Have often ruined the lives of men.
Honesty, Energy, Perseverence—these three—
Insure Success and certain victory.
For while he lives, he doeth all things well."

Finally he quoted "Invictus:"

"Out of the night that covers me,
Black as the pit from pole to pole,
I thank whatever gods there be
For my unconquerable soul.

In the fell clutch of circumstance,
I have not winced or cried aloud;
Under the bludgeonings of chance
My head is bloody but unbowed.

It matters not how strait the gate,
How charged with punishments the scroll;
I am the master of my fate.
I am the captain of my soul."
—W. E. Henley.

GOSPEL OF BASEBALL.

Then, Frank L. Stanton's "Some of These Days." Meantime No. 3419 was preaching the Gospel of baseball, and was adding a few epigrams of his own:

"The world owes every man a living, but expects him to hustle and collect it.

"The man who can keep a stiff upper lip has plenty of starch in his make-up.

"Don't borrow trouble; if you must borrow something, borrow a hoe and go to work.

"The man who harbors ill will, will find that's it's an all will that bodes him no good.

"Anybody knows the difference between right and wrong until it means money in his pocket.

"The man who waits until tomorrow to correct his faults will find that tomorrow never comes.

"We suggest that the government give the postoffice inspectors the job of arresting the Mississippi river.

"The man who whines when he is down will find, when he gets up, that he has contracted the habit."

The definition of success, the epigrams, the testimony of the poets was all but a part of one issue, but a very small part of the paper published twelve months ago. In the intervening year, the prisoners of the Atlanta federal penitentiary have written some of the wisest words of advice offered by any men or group of men for the world's consideration. Each month, these federal convicts, through their little four-page paper, have preached the Gospel of the prison.

In the September issue, last year, the editor-in-chief, he who wrote about success, chose to write of grit, nerve, the square jaw that carries a man onward in spite of prisons or any other difficulty.

"The men leaving prison," he admitted, "may suffer from the invisible scars of their disgrace; yet may face the world hiding their mental anguish. They can and they do go out and make good. This world has no place for a quitter. Men must go out and fight, fight for what is good, fight against what is wrong. No man with grit, with the fighting spirit, the proper fighting spirit, will ever fall

Did you tackle the trouble that came your way
With a resolute heart and cheerful?
Or hide your face from the light of day
With a craven soul and fearful?
O, a trouble's a ton, or a trouble's an ounce,
Or a trouble is what you make it,
And it isn't the fact that you're hurt that counts,
But only, how did you take it?

NO. 2331'S SERMONETTES.

In another issue, the October number, Register No. 2331 wrote a few pointed paragraphs each of which was a sermon, a very keen, convincing sermon, in itself:

"A man has learned somewhat when he learns there are yet other things for him to learn.

"The real man—the man made in God's image and after his likeness—is not a mere possibility, but a reality.

"Our progress through life is like a man riding a bicycle: we must either keep going, or get off. There is no standing still.

"Go forward, is the highest behest
Of Nature and of Nature's law.
Whoever stops to sleep and rest,
Must from the race of life withdraw

"It is a common saying among orthodox clergymen, that the 'age of miracles is past.' But the people have learned that not everything said by divines is to be considered canonical. When the age of miracles shall have past, it will be when the age of faith shall have ceased to exist.

"When you see a man has resented something you have said to him, put yourself in his place, and see what you would have done in the premises. If you think you would have felt as he does, then you owe him an apology and apologies, like debts, never look so well as when they are paid.

"One bad apple among a barrel of good ones will make all the good ones bad, but all the good ones will never make the bad one good. Thoughts are like apples in this respect. One impure thought entertained among a host of pure thoughts will pollute them all. If you would keep your thoughts pure, purge them from the impure."

And, so, each issue continued to print advice, bits of experience, all of profound human interest, until the monthly paper reached a sort of climax with the imprisonment at the penitentiary of Julian Hawthorne, son of Nathaniel Hawthorne, the great novelist.

He had written a number of books before he was sentenced to the federal penitentiary, and for one of these, "A Fool of Nature," the New York Herald paid him $10,000.

JULIAN HAWTHORNE'S WRITINGS

But none of his writings are more unusual, more interesting than the prose and the verse he has printed in "Good Words." Last month he wrote a tribute to John Ross, who died on June 13 at the federal penitentiary. John Ross had been sentenced to life imprisonment for killing a shipmate in Yokahoma, Japan, and after serving twenty-two years in other prisons was brought to the Atlanta federal penitentiary eleven years ago. He became leader of the prison Sunday school and president of the Christian Endeavor society.

Julian Hawthorne wrote of him:

"That golden day in June when he broke jail,
No gun's alarum barked, no whistle shrilled;
Launched in the blue, a white cloud spread its sail
To bear the sailor's soul whither he willed!
The sentry on the tower
Yawned through his listless hour,
And saw no prisoner pass, and heard no warning hail.
Since the wild blow that murderous passion dealt,
Eleven years thrice told! The iron door
And doom no earthly power might ope or melt
Closed on him. Green earth, wide-flung seas, no more
To know; man's comradeships,
Or woman's tender lips,
Nor children's voices—naught love breathed, or pity felt.
But God said, Nay, the slayer is victim too!
His angels came and ministered to him.
The soul woke in him and found work to do.
Cain's brand upon his brow was washed as white as snow,
The wild rose lives, while nations rise and fall;
The fragrance of self-conquest and good deed,
Though in a nameless felon's cell, is all
Angels or men can know of Heaven, or need,
Our comrade, who is gone,
In thought and will lives on,
Nearer our hearts because beyond our earthly call."

FOOTFALLS.

Earlier he had written "Footfalls," that poem which has been reprinted everywhere:

"In the cell over mine, at night,
A step goes to and fro
From barred door to iron wall.
From wall to door I hear it go,
Four paces, heavy and slow,
In the heart of the sleeping jail,
And the goad that drives, I know!

"I never saw his face, or heard him speak;
He may be Dutchman, Dago, Yankee, Greek;
But the language of that prisoner's step
Too well I know!
Unknown brother of the remorseless bars,
Pent in your cage from earth and sky and stars,
The hunger for lost life that goads you so,
I also know.

"Hour by hour, in the cell overhead,
Four footfalls, to and fro,
'Twixt iron wall and barred door,
Back and forth I hear them go,
Four footfalls come and go.
I wake, and listen in the nights
Brother, I know!"

Each month since the beginning of his imprisonment he has made some notable contribution to the prison paper, to this monthly preaching of the prison Gospel. So have other convicts.

During the last twelve months, the penitentiary has joined in giving the world's several words of advice.

"'Sparks?'

"'From de big house, sir.'

"'My house?'

"'Yes, sir; you see de wind blowed de curtains, and dey caught fro' de candles.

"'Candles?'

"'Yes, sir; de candles round de corpse.'

"'Corpse?'

"'Yes, sir; your mother-in-law, she died from de shock.'

"'Shock?'

"'Yes, sir; when yer wife run away with de chofer, yer mother-in-law couldn't stand de shock, and de wind blew de curtains over de candles, and that sot de house on fire, and de barn it caught from the sparks and scared de horse, and dat's how de dog came to be killed.'"

This account of the faithful dog's death is given much in the vein of H. M. Patty's famous story of the red-haired helpmeet. It is doubtful, which has brought to the world the most joy, the dog or the wife.

As Mr. Patty tells it, two brothers who for years had sought their fortune in distant states, again met together.

"Married?" asked John.

"Yep," answered Henry.

"That's good," said John.

"Well, not so good,' answered Henry. "She was red-headed."

"That's bad,' said John.

"Well, not so bad,' answered Henry. "She had money."

"That's good," said John.

"Well, not so good,' answered Henry. "We invested foolishly."

"That's bad," said John.

"Well, not so bad," answered Henry. "We saved a few thousand, and bought a home.'

"That's good," said John.

"Well, not so good," answered Henry. "The house burned, every log of it."

"That's bad,' said John.

"Well, not so bad," answered Henry. "Now, I'm a widower."

UNCONSCIOUS WIT.

Andy Stewart, like Judge Andy Calhoun, has experienced the delicacy of unconscious wit.

"George," said Mr. Stewart, "was a deacon in the African Methodist Episcopal church, George was behind in his taxes, and he approached me in a mighty friendly frame of mind.

"I—Mister Stewart,' he said 'You is a mighty nice man.'

"'Thank you, George,' I said.

"'Everybody certainly does like you Mr. Stewart.'

"'I'm glad to hear it, George.'

"'I think you ought to run for governor, Mr. Stewart. You such a nice man that folks would jest naturally vote for you.'

"'Oh, pshaw, George, it takes a big man for governor.'

"'Course, certainly, sir. But you is big enough. It jest takes size, Mister Stewart, it don't take any brains. You'd jest fit the place.'

"I guess it was unconscious humor," said Mr. Stewart. "I hope it was. But we had an instance the other day that I know wasn't meant.

"Two negro gals came in to pay the taxes of their mother who was dead.

"'Where does she live?" I asked. I didn't know she was dead.

"'She don't live nowhere,' answered one. 'She's ceased.'"

This matter of conscious and unconscious humor is one by which Hugh Cardoza also is troubled. The other day he dropped into the Grand for a managerial glimpse of the Irish picture which was turning the screen green. It was one of those talking pictures where the phonograph in the rear is hero, heroine, sob music, and wedding march. The picture machine buzzed, the figures stood out upon the screen, that Irishman of a hero (or vice versa as you please) opened his lips as though to utter the words of Dublin town, but what issued forth was La Paloma played with an unusual Spanish, or perhaps it was Mexican, air. Mr. Cardoza hasn't decided yet whether La Paloma as the utterance of an Irish hero was the operator's conception of humor or merely his humorous mistake.

But why bother over the consciousness or unconsciousness of wit? Take it as you find it, and be sure that it is the lightning of the mind, the cayenne of conversation, and the salt of life.

THE HAPPINESS OF MANKIND DEPENDS ON HUMANITY'S FEET

On a Christmas morning, when you were a boy pop-eyed with delight over your first store-bought sled, did grandpa ever take you out for rides on the dazzling fresh snow, he acting as "horsie?" And did he go to it barefooted, as unmindful of the crystals of frost that cracked beneath his tread as if they had been rose petals?

We know a grown-up whose old granddad did that in the years ago. And other queer things, too. For instance, we've seen him, at the age of eighty, with the thermometer below zero, chop a hole through the ice on the mill pond, strip and plunge to the morning bath, and puffingly emerge, ready for a brisk rub-down and a day's work that would stagger a horse.

There were husky folks in those days. But they lived simply, ate plain food, worked much in the open and didn't try to turn night into day.

We began, however, to say something about feet. Grandpa's feet, which didn't mind the crackling snow or icy water, rarely found themselves rammed into hot, heavy shoes. Mostly he went barefoot. But when he did wear a shoe it was carefully fitted and removed the minute he entered the house. Grandpa also practiced footwashing as religiously as did the folks the Bible tells about.

We don't suppose he did these things because he had any theories to test or fads to exploit. Any school boy today could tell him that the pores of the feet are among the busiest of the body's poison outlets; and that, therefore, it's a good thing to go barefoot now and then, to wade in the dew or to do any of the outdoor novelties which aid nature in its hard task of excrementation. Grandpa didn't know that, for he had never had the chance to study physiology. He only knew that he had a pair of hoofs beneath him that a man could be proud of, and that they performed without failing the functions for which they were intended.

So it's important to care for one's feet. Watch the arch of the foot, that it doesn't weaken or drop. At the first sign of trouble, go to a foot doctor. Use shoes as light, comfortable and low-heeled as you can get. If you have the nerve, go barefoot part of the time. If you haven't, if you're hopelessly fettered by the conventions of society, at least change the hose at short intervals (never longer than once a day) and don't spare soap and water!

Above all, don't be ashamed if your foot is long and wide and substantial or try to jam it for appearance sake into a shoe that will cramp it. Let it be as the good Lord designed it. He knew best.

7 Babies in 14 Months

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

BERLIN.—The wife of Herr Ottmann, a well-to-do manufacturer at Schwenthal, Bavaria, has given birth to seven children within fourteen months.

In April, 1912 four girls were born to her at the same time, and yesterday she gave birth to triplets, all three boys.

Cynical Boy Murderer

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

PARIS.—With revolting cynicism, a boy of eleven, Gabriel Lacroix, has confessed having murdered another boy, aged seven, Pierre Gocan, at Baud.

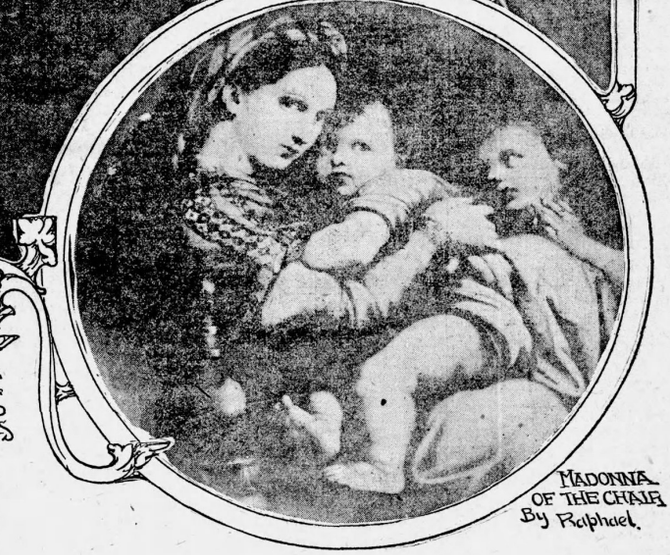
OSCAR PAUSE COLLECTOR OF A THOUSAND MADONNAS

A MODERN MADONNA By Ferrucci



MADONNA OF THE CHAIR By Raphael.

BY WARD S. GREENE.

IN the house of Oscar Pause are eighteen hundred Madonnas.

It is a very ordinary house and as one walks past it near the corner of Courtland and Harris streets the wildest imagination would hardly hit upon the pet hobby of its owner.

The cracked weather-boarding gives no indication of the treasures within, the tin roof is like every other tin roof which covers books and tables and chairs instead of pile on pile of pictures, each a reproduction of the infant Jesus and the Virgin Mary.

Yet take one step beyond the threshhold and the tin roof is forgotten. You walk into a curtained room, a grand piano looms out of the shadows on the left, the dark splotch of a violin case rests beside it, the chintz-covered chairs have a dry musty odor like stale spice, and from every side leap out at you the faces of a thousand Virgins and a thousand Children, on the walls, the chairs, the tables—the Madonnas of Oscar Pause.

He has placed them there to await your coming, for the pride of Oscar Pause is to show to any and all these pictures which represent the labor of years.

Since first Oscar Pause learned to distinguish a Raphael from a Murillo—and that was many moons ago—his passion has been art, and the pulse of that passion has been art conceived in a divine moment and expressed through the idea divinest.

HIS SEARCH FOR MADONNAS.

So he began to collect Madonnas. First a print or two clipped from an art journal, another given him by a friend, again one picked up in some quaint shop of the streets. Year after year the mass of Madonnas in the house of Oscar Pause stacked higher and higher. Now it is the work of a night and a day to count them.

No one has ever tried to reckon the toll of Madonnas that the brushes of century after century of artists have created. There are certainly thousands of them, there may be millions. If any living man has a more diverse collection than Oscar Pause he sacrificed a lifetime to the search for them.

Oscar Pause himself has sacrificed half a lifetime and an unstinted amount of gold and labor. What was first a diversion has become a mania. The lure of the Madonna and Her Child has gripped him and no miser chuckles over the glint of a new coin with greater glee than does Oscar Pause as he adds another picture to his great pile.

But do not think for one moment that his passion has made Oscar Pause different from other men in other ways.

Indeed, as he walks into the room where you are awaiting him, you are, perhaps, struck with his so very human qualities.

He is a stout little German gentleman, with a gray imperial and a head which is innocent of hair. His eyes gleam humorously behind the heavy plated glasses, and when he laughs—well, you cannot help but join the jolly rumble of his deep bass.

MADONNAS OF ALL NATIONS.

Madonnas of Spain, of Italy, of Flanders and France, Madonnas with insipid faces and with faces sheathed in the luminous glory of a hundred heavens, Madonnas the original of which are now mere splotches on peeling canvas and Madonnas that are marked with the most recent of modern strokes.

For the Virgin and the Christ Child have ever been the favorite models of artists of every age. Critics say that they are only just coming into the height of their popularity.

And Oscar Pause is an authority on Madonnas. At one glance he can tell you whether they are from the Schule Spanische or the Schule Romische, whether their creator was a follower of the first or seventh style and exactly which treatment in which of these styles he used.

"See," he tells you, "hier is der Sistine Madonna, der most wonderful of dem all. It iss Raphael's, his sixteenth vun. In der Dresden gallery it iss now gehung. Ein lady she tells me ven she goes into dis gallery it iss like stepping recht into heafen. Dere der Madonna hangs, vun whole side off der wall, a cloud of cherubs in der air, und in der middle dere comes straight to us der Virgin and der little Jesus. She tells me she feel shust like dropping to her knees and praying."

Oscar Pause will show you another of Raphael's Madonnas, with a history which is known to well-nigh every school boy. It is the Madonna of the Chair, the painting which Raphael made on the end of a barrel, a noisy tavern hall for his studio and drunken roisterers crowded close on every side. How it was nearly destroyed and how it hangs today in the Pitti Palace at Florence, is story-book knowledge.

GRAND DUCCA MADONNA.

There is another Madonna which ranks second only to the Sistine in the estimation of Oscar Pause. It is the grand Ducca Madonna of Raphael. It, too, has a story, a legend which has given to it the name of the Madonna of the Journey.

At one time the property of Carlo Dolci, himself a famous painter, it was sold toward the end of the eighteenth century by a peasant woman who little knew its real value. The purchaser, a bookseller, gave the woman five scudi for it and later sold the painting to the Grand Duke of Tuscany, Ferdinand Third, for 571 scudi.

The Grand Duke was so enamored with the beauty of the painting that he would not let himself part with it for a day, took it with him on all his journeyings, and thereby bequeathed to it the name of Madonna del Viaggio, or Madonna of the Journey. It hangs now in the Pitti Palace.

These and many other quaint tales Oscar Pause will tell you as he thumbs over his collection. Each picture is dear to his heart and each has a story connected with it which this man of the Madonnas knows from beginning to end.

Nor are they all of Raphael's and Murillo's. The modern Madonnas have a history equally as interesting as those which have looked down on generation after generation of sightseers.

There is Nicodemo Ferrucci's womanly creation, the Madonna whose tattered hood covers a face of rare spiritual, yet human beauty. And there is the Knaffel Madonna, so-called, which, while it is not a painting, is yet one of the most artistic of the Madonnas.

It is said that the Knaffel Madonna is a composite of two photograps taken by the Knaffel studio in Knoxville. The Virgin is the portrait of a charming girl who is prominent in Knoxville society and the Christ Child was taken from the photographer's little son.

MURILLO NEXT TO RAPHAEL.

Next to the presiding genius of all Madonna painters, the master Raphael, Oscar Pause reveres Murillo. He can pick the work of this artist from a dozen others, the bold, black strokes, the distinctive Spanish features of the Virgin and the Child.

"I haf made a study of der different treatments," says Oscar Pause. "Der work of Murillo stands out from all der rest. He was a great man."

It is the great desire of this citizen of America, yet so German after all, to visit Europe and gaze at first hand on the masterpieces whose poor copies he has poured over day after day.

He has not seen the Fatherland in thirty years. Coming to Atlanta in the early seventies, he has spent most of his life in this city and New York. He is a designer, decorator and painter.

His painting has been confined mostly to scenic work. His hand it was that repaired the well-nigh ruined cyclorama of the battle of Atlanta at Grant park when it was so badly battered fifteen years ago. Oscar Pause considers Atlanta's cyclorama one of the greatest pictures of its kind in the world.

"It iss wort thousands of dollars now," he declares. "In a few years it will be wort millions."

And he denounces the carelessness which marks the keeping of this mighty canvas. In his opinion Atlanta is to suffer the greatest loss in the history of the city unless the cyclorama is moved to a better building, and that right quickly.

LIFE OF BELISARIUS.

Between a big cast of the Venus di Milo and a plaster of Bimarck it rests, large canvas five by four. It is a painting, says Oscar Pause, depicting an episode in the life of Belisarius, a general under Justinian. According to the legend, Belisarius was deprived of his command after winning a score of victories for his emperor and was thrown into prison. Here he was rapidly being starved to death. But soon his daughter began to make daily visits to the old man, her father. She came to him, with full breasts, fed him, the old man lived, and was later released.

Both figures of Belisarius and his daughter are cast in deep shadow. The old white-haired man, his hands heavily manacled, leans forward on his daughter's breast, she a type of noblest womanhood.

"It," said Oscar Pause, "iss a genuine Tintoretto, an original."

Giacomo Robusti, known as Il Tintoretto, the Dyer, was a Venetian painter of the sixteenth century. He was the pupil of Titian and, so the legend goes, was discharged by his master because the latter feared his pupil would surpass him. He was also known as Il Furioso on account of the feverish speed with which he covered immense walls of canvas with tremendous scenic effects in startling shadow treatments.

Whether or not the painting in Oscar Pause's parlor is an original Tintoretto it is hard to say. A New York critic told him that it appeared to be. The canvas, according to Oscar Pause, is too old for it to be a copy. In the left hand corner, where the signature of the artist should be, a patch has been sewn where the canvas was cut away.

Oscar Pause got this picture through a series of business deals in New York City. It cost him close to $4,000, but he thinks it well worth the price. He has received several offers for it, but, as he says, people will offer 25 cents for a painting worth $2,500.

The owner of the Tintoretto, if such it be, is dickering with the late J. Pierpont Morgan's art man for a sale. He has arranged to see him in New York next month and may dispose of the painting to him.

"Und if I do," says the man of the Madonnas, "it iss me for der Vaterland!"

FORTUNE IS BEING SPENT TO ABOLISH THE DEATH PENALTY

NASHVILLE.—"Life Imprisonment vs. the Death Penalty," is the title of a preachment being distributed broadcast in pamphlet form by Duke C. Bowers, one of the wealthiest merchants of Tennessee, who is spending a large part of his fortune in a fight against the fixing of the death penalty by a court or jury.

He designates the infliction of capital punishment as a relic of barbarism, and declares that a so-called legal execution is in reality murder by the people. He cites statistics to prove his contention that the abolishment of the death penalty invariably decreases capital crimes. And he presents figures to bear out his statement that there are more murders per capita in those states where capital punishment is inflicted than in those where it has been abolished.

This wealthy Tennesseean, who is devoting a greater part of both his time and income to the fight he is making against the death penalty, begins his brief with a reference to the earliest recorded murder—the killing of Abel by Cain.

"God was the only arbiter between these two men," says Mr. Bowers. "He was both the political and moral governor of men. Did he kill Cain? 'A fugitive and a vagabond shalt thou be, and when thou tillest the earth it shall not yield her strength—and whosoever slayeth Cain, vengeance shall be taken on him seven-fold.'

"That would seem to be basis enough for any professed Christian to ground a valid objection to capital punishment," says Mr. Bowers. "But that is only a start, the teachings of the Christ all being in line with this first lesson given to man as to the treatment of murderers."

Mr. Bowers has taken a deep interest in the Western Henwood case. He does not pretend to pass upon the guilt or innocence of Henwood, but denounces the manner in which the sentence was imposed in no uncertain terms.

"I do not quite understand what caliber of men they were who sat on that jury," he declared. "Even though they favored the death penalty, that fact would not excuse their jollity in the jury room during the casting of the ballots. I have never in my travels and in my work read of a more barbaric proceeding.

"It seems that the sentencing of a man to the gallows was considered as a joke by nearly half of the twelve men, judging from the manner they laughed and carried on while assessing the punishment."

His pamphlet was printed in the form of a brief during his fight for the abolishment of capital punishment in his native state last winter. He spent a small fortune in literature of this character and in newspaper advertising in an attempt to influence the legislature to adopt his views. That he failed was due, he says, to his refusal to consent to compromise by leaving a statutory crime as the one criminal act to be punished with death.

Since then he has mailed a copy of his brief to every governor in the United States and has received assurances from many of them that they are with him and requesting his personal aid in securing the passage of a law doing away with capital punishment. Five men under bad their sentences commuted until sentence of death in Arizona have a popular vote is taken as to the further enforcement of the capital punishment law there.

MR. DOOLEY ON DRINK AND STATESMANSHIP.

BY FINLEY PETER DUNNE.

"HAVE a glass iv beer with me," said Mr. Hennessy.

"What's that?" demanded Mr. Dooley.

"I said," Mr. Hennessy replied testily, "will ye have a glass iv beer with me—an' on me—or won't ye?"

"I will not," said Mr. Dooley. "How dare ye make such a suggistion to me? If I thought ye had six cints in ye'er clothes I'd sue ye f'r libel. I wud so. I'll have ye to know that these secrit rumors that ar-re circulatin' around about me dhrinkin' habits has got to stop. I do not dhrink beer, butthermilk, pop, ice crame sody, sarsprilly, or tay in anny form. Whin much fatigued be talkin' to ye I sometimes take a glass iv brandy with a tayspoonful iv milk in it. But not often, as I do not like th' taste iv milk. Whin I have a chill or thirst I dhrink modhrately iv a bucket or two iv whisky, brandy, rum, gin, karosene, or gasolene. I niver take champagne excipt whin th' doctor ordhers it, an' if th' dock ordhers it he's got to pay f'r it, too. I niver dhrink champagne. An' there ye have in a few brief wurruds me innocent dhrinkin' habits."

"What ar-re ye talkin' about?" said Mr. Hennessy. "Ye niver dhrink har'ly annything at all."

"I know it," said Mr. Dooley, "but I don't want it to get out. I'm thinkin' iv goin' back into pollyticks again, an' I want th' earnest dhrinkers iv th' counthry to feel that I'm wan iv thim. They're a large an' inflooinchal body iv men an' much niglicted. So if ye hear anny rumors in th' fash'nable clubs that ye frequint that I am not hon'rary prisidint iv th' Ancient Ordher iv Alcoholics, that I don't have th' pain killer piped into me while I sleep, or that me on'y physical exercise is not deleeryum thremens, I want ye to denounce thim as base, false, an' malicious. If they ask ye, 'Did ye iver smell his breath?' tell thim ye have, that ye cudden't help it, livin' in th' same sthreet. If they ask ye, 'Did ye detict th' prisince iv liquor?' tell thim that th' gusts fr'm me pipes is practically ninety per cint pure bensine, with a tayspoonful or two iv breath added. Tell thim iv th' time ye found me on th' sthreet corner thryin' to dance a turkey throt with a lamp post. Tell thim iv the polismen I've bate. Let thim know that whin I go out iv town an' me frinds want to sind me home, which they always do at once, they have to crate me up an' ship me be freight. Tell thim iv th' time ye see me hurl me boot at th' polky dot elephant that thried to get into bed with me. Here an' now, Hinnissy, I appoint ye me campaign manager. If ye do ye'er jooty I'll capture th' intire alcoholic vote, an', judgin' be what I see an' hear on iliction nights, that ought to land me aisy in anny office in our beloved fatherland.

"Sure, it's a sthrange change has come over our pollyticks since I was captain iv me precinct. We ar-re fallen, as Hogan says, on iffiminate days. Th' hardy an' gloryous peeryod in th' histhry iv th' republic has passed, an' th' times whin Hinnery Clay an' Dan'l Webster wud sit f'r hours pushin' th' scuttle to an' fro acrost th' table has gone to return no more. Booze an' iloquence has both passed out iv our public life. No longer is th' gr-reat statesman carried to th' platform be loving hands an' lashed to th' railin' where him an' King Alcohol sings a duet on th' splindors iv th' blue sky an' th' onfadin' glories iv th' flag, but afther atin' a pepsin tablet an' sippin' a glass iv light gray limonade he reads to th' assimbled multichood th' financial repoort iv th' Standard Ile comp'ny f'r th' physical year endin' June first.

"Mind ye, all this was befure my time. In my day I niver knew a gr-reat statesman that dhrank, or if he did he niver landed anny job betther thin clerk in th' weather office. But as Hogan says Shakspeare says, they pretinded a vice if they had it not. A pollytician was a baten man if th' story wint around that he was sildom seen dhrunk in public. His aim was to create an impressyon that he was a gay fellow, a jovyal toss pot, that thought nawthin' iv puttin' a gallon iv paint into him durin' an avenin's intertainment. They had to exercise diplomacy, d'ye mind, to keep their reptations goin'. Whin Higgins was runnin' f'r sheriff he always ordhered gin an' I always give him water. Ye undherstand, don't ye? Ye know what gin looks like? Well, wather looks like gin. Wan day Gallagher took up his glass be mistake an' Higgins lost th' precinct be forty votes. Sinitor O'Brien held a bolder coorse. He used to dump th' stuff on th' flure whin no wan was lookin' an' go home with a light foot while I swept out his constitoocents. Yes, sir, I've seen him pour into th' sawdust quarts an' gallons iv me precious old Remorse Rye, aged be me own hands on th' premises.

"Th' most onpopylar prisidint we iver had was Rutherford B. Hayes—an' why? Was it because he stole th' prisidincy away fr'm Sam'l J. Tilden? It was not. Anny wan wud stale a prisidincy fr'm a Dimmycrat in thim days an' think th' larceny was pathriotism. No, sir, 'twas because whin people wint up to th' white house they got nawthin' to dhrink but sparklin' wather, a bivridge, Hinnissy, that is n[illegible]cher cheerin' nor ineebratin', but gives w[illegible] most inconvanient part iv a deebauch [illegible] th' hiccups. Fr'm 8 o'clock, whin [illegible] down to dinner, to 8:30, facthrers like ye'ersilf. It's more reg'lar. A statesman wud no more be seen goin' into a saloon thin he wud into a meetin' iv th' Anti-Semitic league. Th' imprissyon he thries to give is that th' sight iv a bock beer sign makes him faint with horror, an' that he's stopped atin' bread because there's a certain amount iv alcohol concaled in it. He wishes to brand as a calumy th' statement that his wife uses an alcohol lamp to heat her curlin' irns. Ivry statesman in this broad land is in danger iv gettin' watherlogged because whiniver he sees a possible vote in sight he yells f'r a pitcher iv ice wather an' dumps into himsilf a basin iv that noble flooid that in th' more rugged days iv th' republic was on'y used to put out fires an' sprinkle th' lawn.

"I pick up th' pa-aper an' r-read: 'Prisidint Wilson has ast th' corryspondints to deny th' malicyous rumor circulated be th' preedytory inthrests that he takes vanilla ice crame in his sody wather. Th' prisidint does not aven dhrink sody wather, excipt on a dhruggist's prescription. His fav'rite bivrage is skimmed milk.' 'Th' sinit havin' closed th' sinit bar as sinful has abolished th' Turkish bath as onnecessary.' 'Willum Jennings Bryan on his return to Wash'nton f'r a day's rest fr'm his arjoos jooties invited th' foreign ambassadures to attind a dinner an' an*nounced that he wud give thim on'y th' pure an'* onferminted juice iv th' grape to dhrink. Th' ambassadures held a hurrid meetin' an' cabled to their home govermints f'r insthructions. They were ordhered to attind in th' inthrests iv peace, but th' Fr-rinch ambassadure resigned. At th' dinner th' sicrety iv state toasted peace in a dipper iv th' toothsome suds. In attimptin' to dhrink th' toast th' English ambassadure was attacked with a vilent coughin' spell an' was onable to respond, but was undhersthud to say that there was worse ways iv dyin' thin on th' field iv battle. In th' mist iv an otherwise joyous dinner th' German ambassadure turned suddenly pale an' complained iv a horrible pain in th' stomach. He was able to lave th' festive boord an' be his own directions was assisted to a neighborin' ratskellar, where at 4 o'clock this mornin' he was restin' aisy. Whin th' dinner broke up at 9 o'clock th' guests were most enthusyastic, an' whin th' Jap'nese ministher proposed to sing, "F'r he's a jolly good fellow," siv'ral iv th' diplomats bust into tears.

"'Misther Bryan was much plazed with th' success iv his innovation. He has dhrunk grape juice f'r manny years, sometimes consumin' as manny as forty glasses a day. In fact, he sildom ates a piece iv pie without washin' it down with me frind Tiddy Rosenfelt goes up to Mitchigan an' sues th' iditor iv a story-an'-a-half newspaper f'r libel f'r sayin' that he was well known to be a white hope among th' pethrolyum rasslers iv th' wurruld. If he'd been in pollyticks as long as I have an' was as active an' as prom'nent he wudn't have noticed th' insult. He'd know that in pollyticks th' worst men ar-re often libeled, so what can th' best expict? It's a good thing, too, f'r it keeps sinsitive an' thin skinned men out iv public life an' dhrives thim into journalism. An' if he'd known all th' things that's been said about him be th' more substantial iv his fellow citizens he'd've sint this iditor a letter thankin' him f'r his support but askin' him not to overdo th' language iv flow'ry complimint. Whiniver he turned out a message to congress an' a banker reached down in his jeans an' found that th' dollar he'd put in there th' night befure was now on'y fifty cints, th' financeer wud assimble other financeers around him an' they'd discuss th' failures iv Tiddy Rosenfelt. He was this an' he was that. He niver shot a grizzly bear. It was notoryous that he pizened thim. He was not at th' battle iv San Joon hill. Whin that affray was over he was discovered be a naygur throoper undher a wagon disguised as a Spanish grandee an' moanin' feebly, 'Take me home to Eyesther Bay.'

"'I've always known he was crazy,' says wan his fav'rite bivrage, onless pressed be business. Th' sicrety gathered th' corryspondints together yisterdah afthernoon, an', givin' them each a glass iv grape juice, which they consumed ex officyo, asked thim to convey to th' wurruld th' news that it is undhersthud in officyal circles that th' sicrety iv state has niver dhrunk booze, smoked or chewed tobacco, took snuff, swore, gambled, fought chickens, or danced th' jelly glide.'

"To show ye how times has changed, there's wan iv his tanthrums. I wud be willin' to go on th' stand an' swear that he was howcome-ye-so wan day whin I see him on a horse jumpin' a fence. Anny man that jumps a horse over a fence must be dhrunk.'

"Ye see me hurl me boot at th' polky dot elephant that thried to get into bed with me."

"Well, this here honest iditor heerd these stories, an' it was his plain jooty to publish thim, f'r ivry iditor, especyally an iditor in Ishpeming, has heavy responsibilities in keepin' wicked or intimprate men out iv th' White House. Besides it looked like a millyon to wan that this gr-reat journal iv civilization wud escape th' eye iv th' Jawn B. Gough iv Eyesther Bay. So he popped in his cheerful little item, sint th' pa-aper to pr[illegible]s, an' wint home an' thought no more about it ontil lo an' behold! Tiddy Rosenfelt, escoorted be an army iv witnesses, descinded on him an' sued him fr' libel.

"I read ivry line iv th' tistymony, an' I will say this that there'd be no money f'r me in havin' Tiddy Rosenfelt as a customer aven whin [illegible]tinded be a physician. I run no dairy, Hinnissy, an' th' amount iv milk consumed be this statesman to escoort into his system a couple iv spoonfuls iv brandy wud keep a herd iv cows wurrukin' nights. It appears fr'm th' ividince that at times he was compelled to dhrink be a wicked doctor. This here evil inflooince stood at his elbow whin he was weak an' suffrin' an' compelled him to debauch himsilf with wan spoonful afther another iv brandy. 'I can't do it, dock,' he pleaded. 'Don't ask me to pollute this serene an' beautiful milk with th' accursed stuff.' 'Dhrink,' says th' inflexible agent iv th' divvle. 'Dhrink or die,' he says. 'But won't wan spoonful be enough?' begs th' prisidint. 'No,' says th' dock in a hollow voice. 'Ye must take two.' 'Thin pull down th' curtains so that me example may not corrupt an innocint wurruld,' says th' gr-reat man, an', writhin' in pain, he consumes th' nauseous mix*ture, an', flingin' th' glass fr'm him, falls* onconscious on th' flure.

'Th' sight iv a bock beer sign makes him faint with horror"

"All th' witnesses corrobyrated him. It seems fr'm their testymony that durin' th' Rosenfelt administhration a pretty custom prevailed at th' White House called 'Sniffin' f'r booze.' Wan iv th' prisidint's intimate frinds wud dhrop in on him iv an afthernoon, an', afther exchangin' th' usual civilities, wud requist th' prisidint to blow in his face. He wud thin take out a note book an' jot down: 'June 5. Still no thrace. Called afther dinner an' made repeated assays. Results mostly nigative, but found indications iv what may be Rhine wine.' Hundherds iv witnesses that had subjected his excillincy to this test wint on th' stand an' swore that they'd never got anny results.

"'Did ye or did ye not,' thundered th' lawyers, 'iver detict alcohol on th' prisidint's breath?'

"'Niver, as hiven is me judge,' declared th' witnesses in ringin' tones.

"Whin it come th' turn iv th' poor iditor man he wasn't able to presint a single witness to prove that Tiddy was a dipsomanyac. No, sir; iv all th' people that were ready to take their oath that they'd seen our hayro whin he was fitter f'r an ambulance thin an office, divvle th' wan turned up at his call to go on th' stand. So he was obliged to do th' manly thing iv readin' a docymint containin' an account iv his own noble life, with a few wurruds on th' circylation iv his excellent pa-aper an' its value as an advertisin' meejum, an' acknowledgin' that he had tossed off th' lie undher th' imprisson that it was th' thruth, because it was in th' heat iv th' campaign an' he didn't expict to be sued, but he was glad he had been, an' there was nawthin' f'r him to do but admit that his witnesses had run out on him an' he cudden't prove annything. This handsome apology was accipted, th' jury give a verdict iv six cints damages, th' colonel says, 'A gloryous victhry, be George,' th' iditor sint over an' borrowed th' money fr'm th' foreman, an' th' colonel, attinded be his cavacade iv breath investigators, returned home with th' cash junglin' in his pockets—vindicated.

"I wondher what it's comin' to? Next year I expict to see banners in front iv headquarthers sayin', 'Vote f'r Higgins. His breath is ba'my,' or 'Sullivan an' sody,' or th' like iv that. Will it come about that whin an orator gets up to advycate a candydate he'll be compilled to say whether he has or has not made a personal invistigation iv th' candydate's exhalations? Will a comity be called befure th' convintion to repoort that they have made a searchin' inquiry into th' candydate's breath f'r two months, an' without goin' into other deetails they are prepared to say that it has showed no signs iv alcohol? If so, Hinnissy, I'm goin' out iv pollyticks an' into dentisthry.

"But what I can't undherstand, Hinnissy, is why if this here shellac that beams down on us fr'm th' shelves is so bad to take, th' govermint shud go into partnership with thim that sells it. Here's me frind Dock Wilson an' me frind Willum McAdoo an' me frind Willum Jennings Bryan settin' together discussin' th' repoort iv th' sicrety iv th' threasury. 'Mack,' says th' prisidint, 'I hope ye don't dhrink.' 'I sincerely hope so, too,' says th' sicrety iv state. 'I dhrink very little,' says th' sicrety iv th' threasury. 'Don't do it at all,' says th' prisidint. 'It's a tur-rble habit. Dhrink is th' curse iv modhren civilyzation. It fills our citizens an' it fills our jails an' our pinitinchries, our insane asylums an' our wurruk house[illegible] with our citizens. Stop it now. Ye say ye had on'y wan glass iv claret at dinner? It is wan too manny. Remimber th' rapids ar-re below. We will now take up th' financyal repoort,' he says. 'Well,' says th' sicrety iv th' threasury, 'to begin with I'm glad to tell ye that th' intarnal rivnoo receipts f'r th' comin' year will be about a millyon dollars more thin they were last year. I base these figures on th' increasin' thirst iv our people.' 'How splindid,' says th' prisidint. 'I mane how tur-rble. How tur-rbly splindid. It manes much to th' administhration,' he says. 'This is good news indeed,' says Willum Jennings Bryan.

"An' there ye ar-re. I can't make it out, but there's lots iv things in th' wurruld that I can't make out. I suppose th' govermint is like mesilf. No wan is more iv a timp'rance advycate thin I am, f'r I've had expeeryance. If ye think 'tis a pleasure f'r me to stand here ladlin' out this household ammonya an' listenin' to th' harsh sounds it causes ye to mistake f'r convarsation ye don't know me. If I had me way an' didn't love th' beautiful sthream on whose banks I've lived these manny years I'd take all th' stuff in thim bottles an' poor thim into th' Chicago river. I wud so. I don't undherstand how anny wan pays me f'r it. It wud be just as raisonable f'r ye to say, 'Here, take two dollars an' hit me over th' head with th' bung starter.' It wud be more so, f'r in that case ye wudden't come back f'r more. But what am I to do? I s'pose th' govermint an' mesilf a[illegible]re in th' same box. We both have to be supported, an' this is th' on'y way we know. An' it's a pretty good sign that th' people ar-re slowin' down on th' stuff whin our statesmin ar-re askin' all th' wurruld to step up an' have a smell. F'r a statesman, Hinnissy, is a fellow that finds out which way th' procissyon is goin' an' thin runs out an' grabs th' stick away fr'm th' dhrum major."

"Ye don't think T. R. iver dhrank too much, do ye?" asked Mr. Hennessy.

"I've been a student as well as an insthructor iv th' dhrink habit f'r manny years," said Mr. Dooley, "an' I'll tell you this: I know fr'm obsarvation that no ardent collictor iv specimens iv rum can keep on goin' fast. He can go fast sometimes, but he can't go far an' go fast. At best he's a quarther horse, an' ofttimes whin he thinks he's gone a mile he's ra-aly been left at th' post."

THE CORRECT DRESS FOR SUMMER EVENINGS

THE Parisienne realizes fully the value of modish evening dress, and spends the greatest amount of time and money upon this portion of her wardrobe. The couturieres best display their artistic abilities when creating models for evening wear, and this season they have far surpassed the standards of beauty set during previous years. The exquisite materials and wonderful dyes contribute an excellent foundation upon which the designers are able to build the marvelous gowns which delight the eyes of femininity the world over.

The designs on this page were selected from among those recently displayed at the leading salons, and represent the best results obtained by such masters as Beer, Paquin, Poiret, Drecoll, Callot and Doucet.

One of the favored modes at present is the pleated peplum of sheer material, and the charming example of palest pink satin is worthy of your attention. The bodice is cut to form a deep U-shaped yoke, which is filled in with pale pink mousseline de sole. Folds of sapphire blue tulle are drawn from beneath the girdle in suspender fashion over the shoulders, and the short sleeves are of the tulle lined with pink mousseline de sole. About the waist is drawn a pointed girdle of sapphire blue velvet. Over the draped underskirt of the satin falls the tunic of pleated sapphire blue tulle, the pointed ends of which are weighted with long bead tassels.

Flung over the shoulders is a wrap of palest pink satin, untrimmed and sleeveless. The arms are slipped through slashes at the sides.

This gown will offer a suggestion for remodeling one of last season's evening costumes, for a tunic of colored tulle can be used successfully over a silk or satin foundation of pale yellow, blue, white, mauve or green.

The white gown is always in excellent taste, and the model holding a rose wears a stunning costume of white crepe de chine. White mousseline de sole is swathed about the hips and drawn over the shoulders and sleeves to produce a surplice bodice. The decolletage is filled in with heavy white lace. A girdle of black tulle ornamented with a fancy topaz button supplies the note of contrasting color so necessary this season. A narrow band of black velvet studded with pearls is worn in the hair. If preferred, the tunic drapery can be fashioned of pale yellow, blue, pink or green mousseline de sole. The smartest evening wrap worn is the manteau of satin or chiffon, and this one is developed of deep coral-pink satin with a lining of flowered mousseline de sole in tones of mauve and coral. The rather full sleeves are gathered into a dropped shoulder seam, and the skirt of the wrap is drawn tightly about the bottom, the fullness being gathered into a band of deep purple velvet, which borders the sides and neck line of the wrap.

This manteau can be duplicated in any color scheme you prefer, and is unusually simple in construction.

To decorate the coiffure two aigrettes of osprey and ostrich plumage are used.

Black satin is used for the foundation of the fascinating gown with the gipsy sash. Over the satin is arranged a tunic of beige-colored dotted tulle. This soft material is drawn over the corsage and sleeves in graceful folds, and the V-shaped decolletage is filled in with white mousseline de sole. The tunic overdrapery forms an irregular line at the bottom, and the satin foundation terminates in a pointed train. About the waist and hips is drawn a broad gipsy girdle of black satin with one long end.

The last of this collection of smart gowns is fashioned of white tulle and dark blue satin. Over the dark blue satin is draped the tunic of white tulle, and dark blue tulle is effectively used to trim the bodice and sleeves. Cream lace is introduced on the bodice and tunic, which extends below the knees. Encircling the waist is a softly folded girdle of dark blue tulle.

If you prefer other color combinations, you will find orange-colored satin and white mousseline de sole, pale pink and dark blue or violet and pale yellow effective.

These models were selected because of their simplicity of construction, and should be of invaluable help to the home dressmaker. Almost every woman has an evening gown which is past its first freshness, and this will answer admirably for the foundation. The tunics require little material, so the frock will be surprisingly inexpensive when completed.

Visit the remnant counter and purchase enough material to make the tunic overdrapery; then from the old frock form the foundation, and you will soon possess a stunning new evening gown.

Remember that a woman, as a rule, appears at her best in evening attire; therefore, supply your wardrobe with an assortment of summer evening gowns.

French Fashion Notes

PARIS, July 10.

WITH the season in full swing here and at the watering places, interest in smart attire is paramount. Weather conditions are so ideal that fashionable Paris has lingered longer than usual, and the races, Armgnonville, Pre Catalan and the cafe concerts in the Champs Elysees are lodestones that attract all pleasure-seekers—and what Parisienne is not of this class?

Evening costumes demand the lion's share of attention at present, for the fragile materials used in their development necessitate a frequent replenishment of the wardrobe.

Brilliant color combinations, picturesque draperies and jeweled embroideries are the characteristic features of the an evening gown which is past its first freshness, and this will answer admirably for the foundation. The tunics require little material, so the frock will be surprisingly inexpensive when completed.

Visit the remnant counter and purchase enough material to make the tunic overdrapery; then from the old frock form the foundation, and you will soon possess a stunning new evening gown.

Remember that a woman, as a rule, appears at her best in evening attire; therefore, supply your wardrobe with an assortment of summer evening gowns.

Madame Paquin has created an evening gown of marvelous beauty by draping alencon lace over an underrobe of pale green charmeuse lightly veiled with a single thickness of chiffon of the same tint. The lace is deep cream in color and is arranged to form a long tunic-like drapery in front, which gradually widens toward the back, finally terminating in a train. A broad scarf of emerald-green satin starts from the center of the waist at the back and is drawn around to the front below the knees, where the folds are caught up at the center front with a motif of rich embroidery.

The bodice is particularly modish, and has a foundation of charmeuse veiled with the chiffon. The latter material is drawn over the shoulders in fichu folds to form the sleeves. Across the front of the decolletage are drawn soft folds of palest pink maline, and a broad girdle of embroidery, to correspond with the motif used on the skirt, extends in a point to meet the maline in front.

The three-quarter length coat-wrap for evening wear has supplanted the popularity of the full-length coat, and the favorites are fashioned of soft damasks and brocades. One of the handsomest wraps displayed at Bechoff-David's is carried out in purple brocha, with a pale purple background shot with gold threads and the conventional design of a deeper tone. Gold tissue is used for the lining, and the wrap has a deep shawl collar and cuffs of black satin. An upstanding frill of pale lavender chiffon softens the effect of the collar.

Evening coats of fine black net closely woven with glittering beads are worn extensively. Jet, steel, crystal and moonlight and sapphire blue are employed alone or in combination. Some of the handsomest wraps are shaded from black through sapphire blue, gray and white.

Tailored suits of garnet or burgundy-red serge are considered smart. On one model the short bolero jacket is knotted together in front instead of buttoned. White pique with a heavy wale is used for the collar and cuffs. Pale pink-and-white-striped linen trimmed another stunning model.

Millinery is ever an interesting story, and the hats for midsummer are more lovely than ever.

The large garden hats of leghorn, maline and lace are trimmed with black velvet ribbon, which is drawn about the crown and, passing through slits at the back, is tied in a flat bow at the back. A single flower is placed at the side near the edge of the brim. Frequently chin straps of maline or velvet are a feature of this dainty confection. An excellent example of the latter hat is a Marie Louise model of white tagal trimmed with finely pleated frills of tulle held in place through the center with a wreath of dainty handmade flowers of white tulle with yellow centers.

Pleated peplums of maline, net or mousseline de sole appear on many of the smartest frocks, and these are stiffened with a thin wire or a ruching of taffeta at the bottom so that they extend beyond the frock.

A flight of four flat bows of black velvet caught up the skirt draperies of one smart gown of English eyelet embroidery, which is the favorite fabric for lingerie frocks.

Louis XV and Pompadour modes seem to prevail, and millinery as well as gowns borrows its distinguishing features from that period.

Smoke-gray ratine fashions a child's coat of unusual beauty, and the collar and cuffs are of plaid in tones of old blue and yellow. Large gunmetal ball buttons are used to fasten it.

A handsome afternoon gown is developed of black supple silk and the blouse and skirt are pleated.

Three pleated flounces form the skirt, and the blouse is enlivened by a collar and cuffs of white tulle.

ELOISE.

CONCERNING HEALTH and BEAUTY

By MRS. HENRY SYMES

THE CORSET to SELECT
This Gives a Corseless Effect
Reduces Large Hips
The Brassiere Beneath the Bathing Suit
Freedom for Tennis
Suitable for Horseback Riding

IN THE privacy of one's room it is possible to exercise without wearing a corset or other tight clothing, but when one is too stout to appear in public without having a firm support for the figure, one should be sure to select a model that is comfortable and appropriate for the occasion.

How many of my readers, I wonder, possess more than one corset? The woman who is fond of outdoor exercise and games should have for such times a corset that will allow her freedom of movement. Not much physical benefit is derived, nor can a great amount of fun be enjoyed, if the body is bound so tightly that you are conscious of an uncomfortable feeling every time you move a muscle.

In order to prevent misfits, it is advisable to have your corset made to order. I know that you will hold up your hands in objection to this suggestion, but let me ask that they be put down until you read what reason is given for making it. I know that the cost may seem exorbitant at the start, but the good lines and the comfort gained by taking such a step make it worth while to sacrifice little unnecessary luxuries until your accounts are square again. At least a fitting of a purchased one should be made by a specialist.

When a woman has her corset made especially for her, she can see to it that it follows the lines of her figure and that the bones are not so long that they press against the bones too hard. The measurements must be taken with the corset removed.

After you have paid a large price for your corset, you, of course, will not feel like discarding it as soon as the material looks soiled. It will not be necessary for you to be so extravagant. Lay your corset on a board or table and scrub it with a 5-cent handbrush and warm soapsuds. Rinse it thoroughly until every trace of the soap has gone and then hang it in the fresh air to dry. There is no excuse for a girl to wear a soiled, sour-smelling corset. The process of cleaning one is so simple that any one can do it.

I have known of girls who never unlace their corsets from the time they are first worn until they are discarded. Now, my dear readers, this is a great mistake. The corset should be put on with the lacings wide open. After the supporters are fastened, begin to lace the corset from the lowest point to the waist line and from the top to the waist line. When the strings are finally tied and slipped beneath the corset the lacing should resemble a V, with the point very elongated. If, when the strings are untied, the corset separates at the top you may know that it is laced too tightly.

Have you ever worn a corset that seemed to slip up on the figure instead of remaining in its proper place? A corset that behaves in such a manner is either too long-waisted, too tight over the fullness of the hips, or in the back and sides at the waist line there is not sufficient curve.

The woman who is inclined to be round shouldered should avoid the corset with a high back. This type is apt to accentuate the curve.

Are you one of the many women who dislike to go in bathing without wearing something to support the body? If so, let me say that instead of confining your trunk in a corset wear a brassiere. This you will find just as satisfactory.

A model that is more on the girdle type is best to wear for tennis, golfing and most of the outdoor sports. It allows freedom of the hips and the upper part of the body.

For horseback riding the corset pictured is admirable. The open space at the front of the model insures comfort, whether one rides cross or side saddle. The lower part of the back of this corset is curved so that it will not interfere with the saddle.

The reader who has large hips should wear a model which well covers them. A corset low at the bust should be worn by the woman who is short-waisted. If you are of this type and hesitate to wear such a model because your bust is too large, you can manage to wear one if you will cover the top with a well-made brassiere.

The corset shown without hooks or laces in the front is made of silk elastic and is slipped over the head and laced up the back. The absence of bones in this model makes it an appropriate one for the new gowns which call for the corseless figure.

When adjusting the corset, be sure that it is not laced too tightly. Too great constriction of the internal organs will cause serious trouble.

ANSWERS TO BEAUTY QUERIES

REPLIES to letters sent to the writer of this department will be printed in regular order; but no replies in print may be expected in less than three or four weeks.

Correspondents desiring immediate replies to queries may get them by inclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope. Personal inquiries will receive prompt attention if accompanied by a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

To Remove Pimples

Dear Mrs. Symes,

I have quite a few pimples on my face and should like to know what to do to remove them. K. T.

No doubt your blood is in a bad condition. I advise you to consult a physician and have him prescribe a tonic. Bathing the pimples with hot water and then applying the cream for which I am sending the recipe will help to remove them.

Fosatti Cream for Pimples

Extract of violet	10 drops
Sweet almond oil	1¼ drams
Sulphur precipitate	1¼ grains
Lanolin	1½ drams
Oxide of zinc	1½ grains
	2 scruples

White Spots

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Why do I have frequently have white spots on my nails? Will you please tell me what these come from and how to remove them? NORTHERN GIRL.

Ill health is sometimes the cause of the white spots, but more frequently small injuries produce them. Injudicious use of steel instruments for cleaning will cause the nails to bear the ugly little white spots. These spots can only be cured by removing the cause.

Hair is Brittle

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will you kindly tell me what I can do for my hair, which is very brittle? CARRIE.

Massage your scalp daily, rubbing into it a few drops of castor oil. After the massage brush the hair well to distribute the oil and to remove the dust and dandruff from it.

For Freckles

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Kindly tell me what I can do to remove freckles from my face. WINIFRED.

Obstinate Freckles

Oxide of zinc	½ dram
Subnitrate of bismuth	½ dram
Dextrine	1¼ drams
Glycerin	1¼ drams

Spread the paste upon the freckles at night before going to bed. In the morning remove what remains with a little powdered borax and sweet oil.

To Reduce the Hips

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will you please tell me what I may do to reduce my hips? UNSIGNED.

Rolling over and over will reduce the hips. All exercises must be taken with all tight clothing removed. Another helpful exercise is to stand erect and then bend at the waist line and not at the knees, and touch the floor with the palms of the hands. Do this ten times every night and morning.

A Wire Brush

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Do you advise me to use a wire brush on my hair? It is quite lifeless and needs a good washing. SUSAN.

Wire bristles are not good for the hairs; they are apt to split it. Get a brush with good firm bristles and brush the hair daily with it. This will remove the dust, massage the scalp and improve the appearance of the hair.

The Thin Person

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Do you think a thin person requires more sleep than a stout one? I am very thin and wish to increase my weight. I do not retire very early. S. G.

Possibly your late hours are keeping you thin. You should retire at nine or half past, and let nothing prevent you from following this rule. Thin people require plenty of sleep. It is also important that they do not overwork or worry. You should drink plenty of milk and cream, and abstain from tea and coffee.

Freckles

Dear Mrs. Symes,

My face is covered with freckles every summer. Will you please tell me what to do to get rid of them? AGNES.

Before going out of doors it is wise to rub a little good cold cream well into the face. After a few minutes wipe off the excess cream with a soft cloth. Then apply a pure face powder or a toilet oatmeal.

You should never go out bareheaded in the sun. Wear a shade hat or carry a parasol. It is a good plan to wear a chiffon veil when motoring, driving or going for long walks.

To fade the freckles apply lemon juice to the skin several times a day.

Skin Trouble

Dear Mrs. Symes,

I have a great deal of trouble with my skin. After I eat certain things my face breaks out terribly. Is there anything I can do for this? MARIE.

You should be most careful in the selection of your food. I shall give you a list of foods which you may eat and those which you should avoid.

MAY TAKE

Soups—Fresh fish soups, vegetable broths —clear.

Farinaceous—Cracked wheat, oatmeal, rice, sago, brown or whole wheat bread or biscuits, rye bread, graham bread or rolls, gluten gems, dry toast, milk toast, macaroni, spaghetti.

Vegetables—Mashed potato, green peas, string beans, spinach, cabbage, cucumbers, cream soups, celery.

Desserts—Plain milk pudding, junket, rice and milk, tapioca and milk, stewed fruits (all without sugar).

Drinks—Tea, coffee (no cream), milk, buttermilk, toast water, pure water (cold or hot).

MUST NOT TAKE

Veal, pork, goose, duck, turkey, salted, dried, potted or preserved fish or meat (except fat bacon), eels, mackerel, crabs, salmon, lobster, eggs, rich soups, gravies, butter, tomatoes, sweet potatoes, asparagus, mushrooms, rhubarb, lemons, pickles, vinegar, fried or made dishes, rich puddings, spices, pies, pastry, sweets, cheese, nuts, fruit, tobacco, coffee, cider, malt liquors, sweet wines, champagne.

A Cream

Dear Mrs. Symes,

Will you please give me the recipe for a cream containing harmless ingredients? My skin is too dry. G. C.

Here is a recipe for a harmless cream which will improve the condition of your skin:

Honey and Almond Cream

Honey	1 ounce
White wax	½ ounce
Oil of sweet almonds	12 ounces
Oil of bitter almonds	½ dram
Oil of bergamot	½ dram
Oil of rose	7 drops
Balsam of peru	½ dram
Liquor potassæ	½ dram

Mix the honey with the balsam, then mix the honey with the soap in a mortar and add enough of the potassa to produce a nice cream. Add this to the first mixture and continue to beat until you have a thoroughly incorporates emollient.

Blackheads

Dear Mrs. Symes,

I have very good features, but am very much embarrassed on account of blackheads. Will you please tell me what I can do to get rid of them? BLANCHE.

Soap and water, good digestion and plenty of exercise in the fresh air are necessary if the blackheads are to disappear. To remove the specks, follow these directions:

Tincture of green soap	2 ounces
Distilled water	2 ounces

Let this mixture stay on only a few moments, then wash off with hot water.

Apply a cold cream.

Green soap may be purchased at any drug store. It is not a regular "coke soap," but is of about the consistency of custard.

Open each sebaceous gland with the point of a fine camphoric needle. The hardened mass must be pressed or picked out. The empty skin of the gland should then be bathed with a little toilet vinegar and water, or with a very weak solution of carbolic acid and water. Sterilize the needle before using it by dipping into boiling water as the case may be any instrument, unless the skin as well as the needle is thoroughly cleansed, is always dangerous.

Hands and Hair

Dear Mrs. Symes,

What can I do to improve the condition of my hands? I want something to whiten and soften them.

My scalp is very dry. I should like to know what to use on it. ADA.

To keep your hands in good condition, rub them in ordinary oatmeal after washing and drying them thoroughly. This will whiten and soften the skin.

I advise you to rub castor oil on your scalp daily. When applying it part the hair at frequent intervals and rub the oil on with the finger tips.

A Depilatory

Dear Mrs. Symes,

What can I do to remove superfluous hairs from my arms? I cannot afford the electric needle. ERNESTINE.

Following is the recipe for a depilatory which you can use on your arms. This will give temporary, but not permanent, results:

A Depilatory

Sulphide of soda or calcium sulphide	100 grains
Chalk	100 grains
Starch	1 ounce

Mix thoroughly, and keep dry in well-corked bottle until wanted for use. Take enough to cover the part to be depilated and add warm water to it until the proper consistency is secured. Spread over the hairy surface, and allow to remain for from one to five minutes, according to the nature of the growth and the sensitiveness of the skin; then scrape off with a blunt blade or paper knife and wash promptly. It should be removed as in every case with a depilatory, when the hair is first produced. Too long contact with the skin should be avoided, and immediately after the hair has been removed the depilated surface should be gently washed with warm water and a cold cream or a bland oil applied to prevent irritation.

Thin Hands

Dear Mrs. Symes,

My hand is very plump, but my hands are too thin to be attractive and the skin looks thin and drawn. What can I do to improve their appearance? HANNAH.

A skin food will do much to improve the condition of your hands. A very excellent food is made of:

Cocoa butter	1 ounce
Oil of sweet almonds	1 ounce
Oxide of zinc	1 dram
Borax	1 dram
Oil of bergamot	3 drops

Heat the cocoa butter and oil of almonds in a double boiler, and when thoroughly blended add the zinc and borax, stir well, it cools and add the oil of bergamot last. Rub into the hands at night.

A Skin Lotion

Do you have the recipe for a lotion which I may use on my face to soften the skin? W. S.

Following is the recipe for just such a lotion as you desire:

Stearmacet	13 grains
White soap, in powder	45 grains
White wax (emulsified)	45 grains
Almond oil (sweet)	45 grains
Jordan almonds	2 ounces
Pure alcohol	2 ounces
Distilled water	2 ounces
Attar of roses	2 drops
Oil of neroli	3 drops
Essence of jasmine	½ dram
Essence of white rose	½ dram

Blanch the almonds and beat them into a smooth paste, adding some water gradually to form a thin cream. Melt the wax, stearmacet and almond oil together, and to this add the soap, previously rubbed down with one-half ounce of water. Mix this add, in small quantities, to the remainder of the water, assiduously stirring. Then add the strained almond cream, and finally the alcohol and the perfumes.

A little of this milk may be rubbed into the skin several times during the day. The effect is permanently beneficial.

ADVICE ON SOCIAL CUSTOMS

Mrs. Chester Adams most cordially invites her friends to bring to her these Social Problems and Perplexities by letter at any time.

[If a personal reply is desired, a self-addressed stamped envelope should be inclosed]

WHEN TO INTRODUCE

AT A large social affair, where the number of the guests prevents separate introductions, guests need not wait for a formal presentation of others. It is taken for granted that a hostess would not invite any persons to her home who would be undesirable. The presence under a roof is sufficient ground for a polite exchange of courtesy. This custom is especially observed in England. In some of our American cities a more strict formality is the rule. You will have to decide about this yourself.

There is an obligation to introduce all guests to each other at a small dinner party. This must be done before the time for dining, so that each man may escort his dinner partner to the table. At a larger dinner the hostess should make known to each other as many as she can, and gracefully bring the names, interests and favorite stories of others into the general entertainment at the table, so that every one will feel at liberty to address guests by name. Never interrupt a conversation to introduce a guest, and do not make introductions when a guest is departing.

At her day at home a hostess who receives should introduce guests to others who are near. In the case of a large reception, however, guests should be introduced to the friends who are assisting in receiving. The hostess should not leave her position to make guests known to each other.

When giving a private dance, the guests are introduced by the hostess to her daughter or any friends who may be receiving beside her, and during the evening as many introductions as possible are made among the invited guests. When a dance is very small, there is less formality. The entertainer should make it her business to introduce possible partners, to promote sociability in all possible ways and, above all, to rescue women from a wall-flower fate.

Public dances or balls do not entail the same obligations. Guests do not expect to be introduced to patronesses, and should dance with members of their own little circle.

In public, introductions should be made if a prolonged conversation follows a meeting. Otherwise a short halt before a public building, a church or a public vehicle needs no introduction. Always consider the stranger in this case. If there is any sign of embarrassment, relieve the situation by introducing. Kindness should be the chief motif for all social observance. "Manners," says Emerson, "is the kind way of doing things."

If you find that there is a tendency to omit a name of a stranger from a conversation in which he is addressed, it is a gracious little thing to bring the name into the conversation. You can surmise that possibly it has been missed, forgotten or that others are hesitating for fear of making a mistake. A little remark like, "Mr. Benson, you said a minute ago," or "Tell us, Miss Cresson, how you found the little villages in Maine," will give all others the name for which they perhaps have been waiting.

Remember that an ability to introduce is acquired. Every woman can do it gracefully, effectively and creditably.

SOLUTIONS TO SOCIAL PROBLEMS

When Introduced

DEAR Mrs. Adams,

Is it necessary to say any more than "How do you do?" when being introduced to any one? INQUIRER.

Wedding Invitations

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Please give me a form which may be used for my daughter's wedding invitations. The wedding is to take place in a church. W. D.

Following is a form which you may use:

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Smith request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter Mary
to
Mr. Theodore D. Hunt, on Monday afternoon, August the fifth,
at half after twelve o'clock,
Saint Saviour's Church
Boston.

Returning Calls

Dear Mrs. Adams,

When is the proper time to return a call? IN DOUBT.

First calls of the season should be returned very promptly on the next reception day of the person who has made the call, if she has a reception day; and if she has none, then at any convenient time within a week or fortnight. After this exchange of civilities, a longer period between visits may be allowed to elapse, though it is never courteous to wait from six weeks to two months before returning a call.

To Make an Introduction

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Is it proper to take a girl to another part of a car to introduce a man to her? I was confronted with such a problem one night when riding on the trolley car. WILL.

No. You should have waited for the man to come down to the girl. If you were anxious to make the introduction, and the man hesitated to take the initiative, you should have gone after him or made some motion to let him know that you desired him to come.

Anxious for Reply

To Fernette—If you will send me your queries I shall be very glad to reply to them.

Trouble With Neighbors

Sensitive—I think you are very foolish to allow the actions or gossip of your neighbors to distress you so much. Pay no attention to their affairs, but keep to yourself and your friends, and then you will not know what the person living next to you is doing. There is so much opportunity to do, hear and say good things that you should let it be your benefits any one to spend much time on the things that are annoying.

Wedding Queries

Dear Mrs. Adams,

1. I am going to be married at 6 o'clock in the afternoon and will wear a long gown. The ground is a pleasant. Should he not wear a Prince Albert coat?

2. Would it be proper for the ushers to wear frock suits? Would tuxedos be in order?

3. If I should enter with an older sister, what kind of gloves should she wear? If with a brother, how should he be dressed?

4. Is it out of good form for bride and groom to ride together?

5. Is it not best to have gloves and shoes to match the wedding suit? If persons have used white gloves, and this is to be the first wedding, should they, after the ceremony, enter the church with my brother, or should they go alone? If the latter, what does the bride do with her bouquet?

6. Is it customary to pay the organist and soloist for their services? P.

1. Yes.

2. The tuxedo coat should not be worn until after 6 o'clock in the evening. The cutaway or double-breasted frock coat is proper for the afternoon wedding.

3. It is not customary to walk to the altar on the arm of one's sister. As a rule, the bride's father or her nearest male relative is her escort. Frequently the mother "gives the bride away," but in this event she does not walk in the church with the bride, but takes a seat with the rest of the family, and at the proper moment rises and gives her consent when the preacher asks "Who gives this woman, etc.

If your brother escorts you, the bride would wear the coat described in answer No. 2, and he should also wear gray trousers.

4. Yes.

5. Black shoes or shoes to match the suit, provided it is a modest color, and white kid gloves should be worn.

6. No. After he performs the duty of giving you away he walks to the family pew and remains there until he is free for the guests to depart. The minister departs from the church by himself through a door at the side or back of the church.

7. Throws it among her bridesmaids, or she may wear it if she pleases.

8. It is customary for the bride to give them something for their services. It may be in the form of money or a gift for personal use.

Sending Thanks

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Kindly advise me in your paper what would be the correct thing to say to thank for an engagement present—a calling card or a correspondence card? If the latter, what should I write on it? B.

It would be quite a breach of etiquette for you to use a calling card for such a purpose. Use a correspondence card or note paper. On it should be your sincere expression of thanks. You can use the following form as a guide:

Dear Helen,

How can I thank you for the beautiful luncheon set you sent me? I am sure it shall be put to good service as soon as we are in our little nest; and many happy recollections of the pleasant times we have had together will it bring to me.

Please come to see me soon, so that I may confide some of my plans and tell you personally how much I appreciate your gift.

Sincerely, etc.

A Prevention

Dear Mrs. Adams,

What can be done to prevent the cream from dripping from the pitcher to the table cloth? HOUSEKEEPER.

Butter can be rubbed over the spout of the pitcher, or a napkin can be used to catch the drops.

Using the Fork

Dear Mrs. Adams,

To settle an argument, will you please tell me in which hand the fork should be held to transfer food to the mouth? GRETCHEN.

In the right hand.

Walking to the Altar

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Is it necessary for a male member of a bride's family to "give away"? If not, with whom does she walk to the altar? BRIDE-TO-BE.

It is not necessary, and under such circumstances the bride walks alone to the altar, followed by her maids and possibly flower girls.

Not at Home

Dear Mrs. Adams,

When a man announces that the woman on whom one is calling is not at home, what should one do? IN DOUBT.

The caller should leave a card with the maid and may say, if she wishes, "I am very sorry that Mrs. Smith is not at home."

Church Collection

Dear Mrs. Adams,

When a man friend escorts me to church should I put money in the collection? DOUBTFUL.

Should a man carry a girl's wrap when out walking and it is too warm for her to carry a coat? CARRIE.

Yes, a coat.

The Bouquets

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Is it the duty of the bridegroom to provide all the flowers for the wedding, including the decorations and the bouquets for the women of the bridal party? BOB.

The groom provides the bouquets, but the bride's parents provide the flowers for decorations.

The Time to Arrive

Dear Mrs. Adams,

When one is invited to a 6 o'clock dinner, how soon should he arrive at his hostess' house?

Is it proper to fold the napkin after the dinner?

You should arrive from five to fifteen minutes before the hour stated in the invitation.

What to Say

Dear Mrs. Adams,

What shall I say when introduced to a young man? I am rather backward and can never talk much when with a number of persons. W.

It is sufficient for you to say, "How do you do, Mr. White?"

Send Your Card

Dear Mrs. Adams,

When sending flowers to a girl, should my card be inclosed with them? D. G.

Yes.

Unable to Attend

Dear Mrs. Adams,

When I am invited to a reception to which I am unable to go, what course should I follow? THOMAS.

You should send one of your cards for the host and one for the hostess so that they may arrive while the affair is in progress. If the reception is given in honor of any person or persons, a card should be included for each one of them.

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

THE GIRL AND MOTHER PROBLEM.

"HER mother has no influence over her at all! She tries to keep her at home, but she will run the streets with the other girls, and there seems to be no way of restraining her."

The friend who made this remark was sitting with me on the veranda of her home in a little town. Pretty houses and pleasant verandas stretched about us, before us was an attractive park or common, and off to one side hung a low line of smoke which marked the location of the "plant" which employed most of the wage earners of the town.

The girl to whom we referred was an attractive young thing of perhaps 19 or 20 who had passed the house while we were talking, laughing and chatting rather loudly with a knot of her companions. I had met her before and the recollection of the pleasing impression she had then made upon me had called to my lips the wonder that her mother did not keep her at home in the evenings.

"But that seems dreadful to me," I said. "The idea of a mother being unable to restrain a girl of that age! It is the time the child needs her mother's influence most.

"And frequently it is the time when she has it least!"

Is there any one reading this who has not had the chance to observe this painful feature of life in our small towns and villages? I know one may notice the same sort of thing in large cities as well, but the little country town is supposed to be preëminently a place of homes. There are not the allurements and temptations there which are supposed to attract the girl from her small, close room in the great city.

If there is one locality where family life at its best is needed it is in the little town. Yet it is there that the lowest order of morality is often found among the young people; it is there that least restraint is exercised by the parents over their sons and daughters.

"You mustn't think there is anything really wrong about Janet!" my friend broke in upon my musings. "She is a perfectly good, straight girl, but she is desperately headstrong and does as she pleases without listening to any one."

Common Sight on Nice Evenings.

During the fortnight I spent with my friend I had the same sight brought to my eyes every pleasant evening. Clusters and couples of girls roamed the streets until all hours of the night, apparently unafraid of late hours, despite the fact they must rise at 6 the next morning at the call of the factory whistle.

The small "ice cream parlors" were filled, the park benches were crowded, and men and women sprawled on the grass in pairs and in groups. Never a vestige of a chaperon, never a recognition of the necessity or desirability of one. The alleged freedom of the young girl was raised to its highest dimensions and did more to reconcile me to the tutelage and espionage of old world methods than anything else I had ever seen.

"Isn't it rather late for you girls to be out alone?" I ventured one evening when a trio had stopped at our gate with a message. A late moon was just rising over the hilltops and the town clock was striking 10.

"Not on such a night as this," said one of them, and they strolled off down the shaded road, to be joined a few steps further on by a lanky youth whose appearance was the signal for an outburst of giggling from the whole party. And again my thought was, "What can their mothers be thinking about?"

I have related these incidents as they befell in a factory town among the children of working people. The same sort of thing is to be found in farming communities, and education or lack of education does not seem to affect conditions. The boys and girls in their last years at high school and in their early—or late—years of college comport themselves in the same manner.

Among them, too, will you find the coarser methods of flirtation—the side glance in passing, the loud giggle or the remark made to attract attention, the dropped handkerchief, the wave of the hand—all the banalities by which the untrained young of the human species have from time immemorial tried to draw to themselves the notice of the members of the opposite sex. Alike in country and city do such abuses flourish.

What Are Their Mothers About?

I have been told that this sort of thing is as natural among youths and maidens as is the preening of the male or female bird.

Some of the mothers do not see the harm of allowing their children such freedom—possibly because of confidence in their young people, probably through sheer carelessness. All the other girls and boys do the same thing and the fact that there have been some terrible tragedies, some cruel shipwrecks of lives which might have become an honor and blessing to the community, does not seem to move the parents from their torpor.

Then there are some mothers who appreciate the risks run by their daughters, but like the mother of the girl of whom I spoke at the beginning of this talk have no influence with their children.

"How do the mothers lose control of their girls?" I asked my friend one day.

"By overworking their influence on unimportant matters" she said promptly. "From the time the children are old enough to know anything they are nagged and scolded and forbidden to do harmless things until at last when the time comes for the parent to forbid something actually wrong the children have lost all confidence in her judgment. If you fuss with a girl as to what shoes and stockings she shall wear and make a big fret over non-essentials you can't expect her to pay much attention to you when you try to check her in the way she behaves in public or the boys and girls she chooses for her companions and friends."

Had Confidence in Mother.

"It all seems so strange to me," I mused. "When a girl I often did things of which my mother would not have approved, I am afraid—small things, to be sure—and I frequently longed to go my own way and to choose intimates she would not have altogether liked. But if she had once come to me and said tenderly that she feared this or that friendship or habit was not for my best good and asked me to believe she knew what was wise for me and to have confidence in her—why, I cannot imagine my withstanding her for a moment!"

"Because she had never let you slip away from her and had taken the trouble to retain your love and trust. A great many mothers don't seem to recognize the necessity of this and when they have occasion to call on your belief in them it is not there to respond to the call. It's hard work being the right kind of a mother, you know!"

Perhaps it is, and yet doesn't the effort pay? What is there in the world that pays better, after all?

vicarious joys in the lives of our children. What a mistake we make if we fail to provide happiness for our old age by bringing up our children to be the men and women we wish them to be!

Youth Not Naturally Bad.

And when we look at the matter carefully, how much do we have to renounce of our own will and way in order to hold our daughters close to us? Why should we not keep young with them and share in their friendships and in their interests? We cannot take part in every pursuit, to be sure, but we can keep their confidence on all that concerns them and listen with unfeigned eagerness to their accounts of what they are doing or planning to do. We can welcome their friends to the home and make the children so much happier there that running the streets will cease to be attractive.

I do not for a moment believe that our sons and daughters are naturally bad and headstrong. They may want their own way, to be sure—I have known men and women much their seniors who had the same peculiarity—but if we can make that way pleasant as well as profitable and walk in it with them ourselves, I have a strong persuasion that they will not care to wander into bypaths of their own choosing. Perhaps because the lure of the balmy air and the sweet sounds and smells of out of doors are powerful it seems harder to induce our children to stay with us at home in summer than in winter. In cold weather it is a simpler thing to draw them about us in a snug room. In the summer we must seek other methods for detaining them near us when we are persuaded that they get no good by wandering off by themselves or with companions of their own age.

We must plan for things they will like to do if we want to hold them at home. Young people have upon them a great desire for activities. Watch a tennis match or a baseball game in the broiling sun, notice the boating parties on days when you would think any sane persons would yearn for shade and idleness! We must see and meet conditions if we don't mean them to get the better of us. Moreover, youth seeks youth, and it is natural for young things to wish to play together.

"When my children were small all I had to do was to find a place where they could have a clean place to play," a mother said to me not long ago. "Now that they are grown I must pick out a summer boarding place where the boys and girls can have fishing, and boating, and swimming, and dancing, and other sports, and meet pleasant young people they can play with. I have had to adapt myself to their change of view."

All of us cannot take our young people away to such spots as this in their vacation. Many of them have no vacation to speak of, but must keep on with the work by which they earn their living, summer and winter alike. The more reason why we should provide diversions for them when they are weary after the day's toil and yearn for relaxation. If we don't give it to them they will seek it for themselves and choose what they want, not what we believe would be best for them.

How do you meet your problem, you wise mothers who keep your children off the streets and who hold their trust and love? Won't you tell us about it?

"There Should Be a Spirit of Comradery Between Mother and Daughter."

When we are young we naturally look forward to events affecting us personally which the future may have in store for us. As we grow older we appreciate the fact that our first hand sensations are things of the past. We have known the joys of youth, of love, of marriage, of motherhood. Life holds no great novelty for us, unless it may be that of pain, but we have the sweetness and blessedness of

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

THREE letters of the same type have reached me at approximately the same time.

"I turn to you for help and advice. I am in the beautiful city of Los Angeles, a recent widow, trying to forget my sorrow in this glorious country and to find new interests in life. I wish I could find some other woman, left alone like myself, to whom I could be a helpful companion. I am 50 years old, in fairly good health, of pleasing address, neat habits, and others have said I am of an amiable disposition and good company. It is the lonesomeness that eats the heart out of me. I walk the crowded streets of this beautiful city, all about me strangers, and go home without having spoken a word to a soul all day. Do you know of any societies or lodges in town which I could join without having to pay too high dues? I can furnish good references. T. B."

As I have often said before, it is impossible for me to make through this column applications for paying positions. If T. B. seeks a position as salaried companion there is nothing I can do for her, but from the tone of her letter I think she is seeking a friendly association which will lessen the loneliness from which she suffers. Can any of our Los Angeles members answer the queries about the societies and lodges? I hold T. B.'s address and will be glad to give it to any one who can supply information that may cheer her life a little.

The second letter is from Eagleville Mo.:

"Do you know of a woman between 25 and 35 who would be glad of a good home and what clothes she needs and would be willing to help or rather to do light housekeeping? There are but three of us in family—my husband, my little girl, and myself. My little girl is 6 years old. My husband is away from home for all meals except breakfast and I away from 8 in the morning until 8 in the evening. We live just one mile from town and are thinking of moving into town. Of course, the main thing is to get some one who would be kind to my little girl. She is nice to get along with. I could furnish references as to this. I want some one who is honest, clean and cheerful, also who likes children. If there is any question to be answered further I would be glad to write. I would want good references from any one who came and I would furnish the same. I am sure the right person would not be sorry for answering this. MRS. W."

If the writer of the first letter and this applicant could only get together it might be possible for them to arrange a partnership. I print the letters of both close together, and if no partnership comes of it they may make other relations which would be satisfactory.

Wants a Place to Stay.

"I am an orphan and just convalescent from an operation for appendicitis. I would like some place to stay for company in exchange for my board with some widow who lives alone or with some married woman whose husband is away a good deal and who does not like to stay by herself. I can do my own cooking and dishwashing and would be willing to do the woman's patching, etc. I can furnish the best of references and would like a place in Los Angeles or Pasadena. I prefer the latter. R."

Another chance for companionship for some lonely one, and this time a splendid opportunity for the writer of the first of the three letters I have put here together. Please observe that all three writers request and offer references.

Inexperienced but Energetic.

"Will you kindly tell me how an inexperienced but energetic woman of 40 can find employment? Would there be any opening in the cities for such a woman in settlement work? If so, how could she procure the position? Until now I have been one of the homemakers, but am entirely alone, with only a small income. I can furnish the highest references as to my integrity, etc., but am not trained for any special line of work. I am well educated, but have no particular talent unless it is to fill a position of trust with good common sense, honesty and determination to drown sorrow in hard work. If you will give me advice I will be greatly indebted to you. JANET NAMELESS."

No name and address accompany this communication, and all the help I can give must be through this printed page. My advice to you is to go to some bureau connected with the Young Women's Christian association and see if they cannot suggest a field for your ability. You ought to have no trouble in filling the place of matron in a home or something of the sort, or in being a parish or district visitor in connection with church or charitable activities. As to settlement work, I have my doubts. My decided impression is a certain amount of training is demanded now of those who take such posts, and that mere good will without preliminary drilling is no longer sufficient. Can any of our readers make further suggestions that may aid this correspondent?

Substitute for Olives.

"I have seen directions for preparing green plums to take the place of olives, but cannot remember the process. Will you please give the recipe for olives made of green plums and also for the genuine olives? MRS. E. S."

For instructions for this I must turn to our California constituency. I have to own frankly that I have never heard of making mock olives from green plums and wonder very much if they would have the peculiarly nutty flavor that marks the true olive. The preparation of this for eating is also outside my knowledge and I would be glad to receive directions for the work and print them here for the benefit of others who may own or manage olive orchards.

Recipe for Sour Meat.

"Some time ago a woman asked for a recipe for making sour meat, as she called it. I wonder if she would like my way of making what we call sour hash? We think it is just fine. To make it I call for a 10 cent soup bone with meat and not much bone—boiled meat or leftover meat may be used; cook it till tender and remove from the fire. When cold cut into small squares. Brown a heaping tablespoon of flour in a frying pan over a not too hot fire, and stir into a cup of soup stock until you have it the consistency of a cream gravy; put in four tablespoons of good cider vinegar, three tablespoons of sugar, a small lump of butter, salt and pepper to taste, a good sized onion, minced fine; boil all together and add the meat. Bring to a good boil and it is ready to serve. You can use water instead of the soup stock and more or less vinegar, as you prefer.

"Will not you give a recipe for a good lobster salad and for green peppers stuffed with rice? MRS. L. A."

Thank you very much for the recipe. Other directions have been sent to me for sour meat of various kinds, but yours appeals to me especially. I am glad to give you the recipes you request.

LOBSTER SALAD—If you cook the lobsters yourself, select rather large ones, plunge them head downward into a pot of boiling water and cook for about forty minutes. Break the shells carefully, reject the stomach, the spongy fingers between the claws and the shell and the vein in the tail. Cut the meat into neat pieces, mix with it a little mayonnaise, arrange on lettuce, pour a mayonnaise dressing over it, garnish it with the claws of the lobster and with a hard boiled egg cut into eighths. Serve cold.

GREEN PEPPER STUFFED WITH RICE—Cut the stem end from sweet green peppers and remove the seeds with a spoon or small knife, taking care not to bring your fingers into contact with them any more than necessary, as they burn. Parboil the peppers for ten minutes, drain them, set them on end, and fill them with boiled rice. Moisten this with a little gravy or stock or with melted butter and set them in the oven, covered, until they are hot through—about ten minutes. If you wish you can mingle a little meat with the rice or pour tomato sauce over it after it is in the peppers. Serve with or without gravy poured about the peppers on the dish.

Some Fruit Combinations.

"Here are some fruit combinations we like. When apples are plentiful we can them and cook parings and cores for juice, canning it and using it as needed. We use the sauce strained with gooseberries, plums, or cranberries, taking one part apples and two tart fruits to make a mild, easily sweetened sauce. One part plums and one part apples make a much better butter or jelly than plums alone. One pint wild cherries and one quart apple juice cooked and strained are fine made into jelly. Dried apples, raisins, or prunes and dried apricots, or three parts of apples or other mild fruit and one part of apricots prepared as you would any other dried fruit alone, make good combinations.

"MRS. A. U. A."

As the fruit season comes upon us we all appreciate any suggestions for good ways of using or of preserving our supply. I am glad to have my own habit of making use of the cores and peelings of apples indorsed. Only the other day a woman rather snubbed me for my economy of making apple sauce of unpared apples. To me the practice means something more than economy and that is added flavor to the apple sauce. The best part of the fruit lies close under the skin and you frequently lose it by peeling the apple before cooking.

Needs a Wheel Chair.

"Is there space in your Corner for this request? An old man 78 years of age has lain for two years in a small back room with only one window. He is paralyzed from the hips down. If he had a wheeled chair he could enjoy life a little better. Isn't there some one of a benevolent turn who will give a chair to one so afflicted?

"MRS. M. M."

As I sit here at my window and look out on the sweet greenness of the country and feel the delicious air that blows across grass and flowers I try to think of what it must be to lie in what the poet Heine used to call a "mattress grave," and my heart aches with pity for the poor man and with thankfulness for my own blessedness. Isn't there some one who can help this poor old prisoner to have a change from his bed and a chance at some life outside of his "small back room"?

As Mother Made Them.

"Reading your reply to 'Westfield' brought back to me memories of those luscious mahogany colored pumpkin pies. My mother always cooked the pumpkin in the way described in that letter and although years ago I can taste them yet. This is the way she made them: Use a deep ribbed dark skin pumpkin, cut in slices, peel, remove seeds, and put in an iron kettle with one cup of water, cover closely, and cook until tender. Remove cover and cook slowly, using a wooden potato masher to mash and stir and to keep from burning. When the pumpkin is dry like mashed potatoes and a very rich brown take from the fire. The next morning put through a colander and proceed as we do in these days.

"Here is the original recipe, used for years: One cup pumpkin or half cup pumpkin, and one tablespoon of flour, little salt, pepper, ginger, and cinnamon [no cloves, unless you wish it very dark], two tablespoons sugar, one egg; beat well, add milk to make a thick custard, and one teaspoon melted butter. This will make one pie. I hope some one will try this recipe and report upon it! A. M. L."

So do I. I am a little afraid of that pepper and ginger combination. Doesn't it make a pretty hot pie? Once I knew a man who said that the best pumpkin pies were made of Hubbard squash and I have eaten some of them which inclined me to think he had right on his side. At the same time I am glad to have the recipe for the old fashioned dark pumpkin pie and shall await with interest a report upon it for some of our Cornerites.

Received Help from Corner.

"I send you an excellent recipe, which I hope you will publish. I am the woman who wrote to you last fall asking for bits of calico and have received much needed assistance through your corner. I have eight children, the baby now 18 months old. I have a certificate and will teach school next winter at $55 per month, and we certainly are glad to be able to help ourselves to some extent. A. A."

Thank you for the recipe, which will appear in another column. I am glad to print your acknowledgment of help received and the news of your promising position. It does me good to record any good fortune that comes to our brave women who make the best of what they have.

Care of Figs.

"Can you or some of the Corner advise me regarding the care of figs, both for home and market. My husband has purchased and we have moved on to a fruit farm, and the fig crop will be large, of which we know nothing.

"MRS. H. C. F."

Have you thought of writing to the department of agriculture for advice? I think you could get it from there; or can some of our fruit growing friends counsel you through our columns or by personal correspondence? I have your address and will furnish it to any one who can assist you. I wish I could.

Planting Under Moon's Influence.

"I am writing to you relative to planting under the moon's influence. I have found a scientific farmer and seed man who publishes a book on the subject and sells it. I ordered one and am well pleased, as I had heard so many different opinions on the matter. Such vegetables as potatoes, beets, etc., should be planted at one time in the moon or you may have more vines than vegetables. Peas, beans, tomatoes, and cucumbers must be planted at another time of the moon. Celery, corn, parsley, onions, etc., at still another. The writer proves his theory by pictures of tomatoes planted in different times of the moon, when they have reached the same age. Cucumbers for table use should be planted in a different time of the moon from those for pickles. I will surely let you know how we succeed with our garden after following his directions.

"If the citron can be grown it can be used after being candied in fruit cake the same as the fruit we buy from the shop I would like the recipe, also for preserved citron.

"MRS. G. T. A."

As I have already said I know nothing positive about planting in the different phases of the moon, although I have heard theories about it all my life from farmers who believed in it absolutely. I shall be interested to know how it works in your garden. As to the citron, the melon we put up under that name is an entirely different thing from the citron of commerce, and while an excellent preserve, could not be used in the place of the other citron in caked or mince pies with similar results.

German Doughnut.

"Can you give me a recipe for a German doughnut which English speaking people call windbags? The Germans call it windebel, and when I asked what it was in English I was told 'I do not know certainly, but I think they are called windbags.' If you can give me the recipe you will oblige me greatly. A READER."

Here is an opportunity for some of our skilful German housemothers to give us some help. I do not think I have ever appealed to them in vain and there is every probability that I shall receive as full an answer and as many recipes for "windbags" as I did when I asked the American contingent how to make cornmeal stuffing and butterscotch pie.

Mid-Summer Frocks Seen in Paris

By Mary Buel

Drawings from Exclusive Paris Photographs by Les F. Wilson

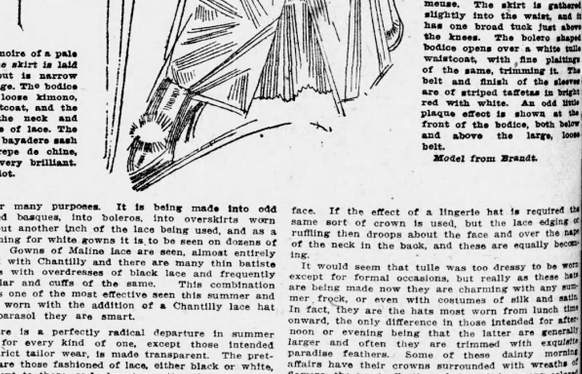
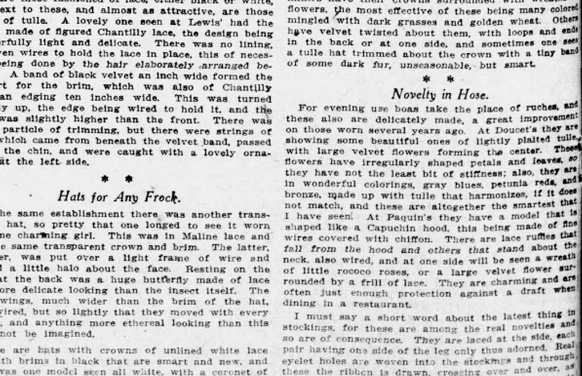
Model from Paquin.



Gown of supple moire of a pale yellow shade. The skirt is laid in large plaits, but is narrow about its lower edge. The bodice is an extremely loose kimono, with a tulle waistcoat, and the plaitings about the neck and on the sleeves are of lace. The shaped collar and bayadere sash are of printed crepe de chine, the colors being very brilliant.
Model from Callot.



Gown of pale yellow chamoise. The skirt is gathered slightly into the waist, and it has one broad tuck just above the knees. The bolero shaped bodice opens over a white tulle waistcoat, with fine plaitings of the same, trimming it. The belt and finish of the sleeves are of striped taffetas in bright red with white. An odd little plaque effect is shown at the front of the bodice, both below and above the large, loose belt.
Model from Brandt.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Cold, rain, fog, hot wind, and brilliant sunshine have been what the weather man has alloted to Parisians this past week, and so one has been treated to the greatest variety of toilets, from tailor costumes with furs, to the thinnest of summer costumes. For the races on Sunday there was almost perfect weather, and therefore most of the women present wore their best gowns and hats that were marvels of chicness. In frocks white was the prevailing color, this being the first time this season that this has been the case. Lace gowns, chiffon, crêpe, de chine, cotton crêpe, and sponge all were to be seen, each made according to the material, and each as smart as could be.

There was one thing, however, to be noted in connection with all these white toilets, and that was that each and every one was trimmed in a color or was combined with black. There were not half a dozen all white dresses worn, and these were mostly in tailored suits, but there was every sort of other combination that one could think of.

Some of the prettiest of the frocks were those made of lace, only the flimy variety being chosen for these. They were generally draped over satin underskirts and were provided with wide sashes. The bodices of these were so simple that they are nothing to describe, lace over muslin, open necks and sleeves to the elbow finished with ruffles. The sashes really made the dresses, for they were the most pronounced thing about them. These were made of pompadour silks, changeable taffetas, plain colored satins, or velvet brocaded ribbons in stunning effects.

The newest sashes come down well about the hips and are drawn closely with many folds and plaits. Some are knotted carelessly at one side, others are brought about the hips, cross in the back, and are then brought around again to the front, where they tie in a bow nearly at the hem of the skirt. A noticeable frock had a sash of cerise colored satin, which was half a yard in depth about the hips and was fastened at the left side of the front, the fastening being accomplished with huge jeweled buttons. There was no end, only the hip drapery. The dress itself was of maline lace, two deep flounces falling over a skirt of peach colored satin and having the bodice made of the same colored chiffon veiled with the lace.

Striking Black Charmeuse.

Another race gown, which was striking, was made of black satin charmeuse and point d'Angleterre lace. The skirt, all of satin, had a short train and was drawn up slightly in front, so as to produce a panier effect, but below, instead of above the knees. Over these fell an overskirt of lace, open in front to the waist and hanging very full in the back. At the top of the skirt there was a girdle of rose colored velvet ribbon, and this was so loosely arranged about the waist that it was scarcely defined at all. The bodice was all of lace over white chiffon, with long sleeves of the same, these showing a banding of black satin ribbon, one about the wrists and another at the elbows. As with all these thin gowns the throat was open and was finished with ruffles of tulle, these being used exclusively in preference to lace or chiffon.

Most of the crêpe de chine frocks seen were of the material brocha, this being much more used than the plain. One pretty model had the skirt arranged in four plaits back and front, the plaits turned inward. In the front the skirt was lifted five or six inches from the ground, this being done at the waist and not in the draping. The bodice, kimono shaped and loose, had long sleeves, and the front, which was cut out in waistcoat shape, was filled in with tiny puffings of white tulle, six or eight on each side. The gown was ivory colored, and the high girdle of taffetas was in a lovely shade of apple green, and in front it had a double row of small diamond buttons, awfully pretty.

In cotton crêpes at the races I noticed some that had plaited skirts, with overskirts made of filet lace and bodices of the two combined. One novel one had the lace overskirt, which reached just below the knees and was straight, wired about its lower edge, making it stand out several inches from the gown. The wiring was extremely fine and was bent in here and there, producing an irregular effect. This same frock had the lace collar wired, so that it stood away from the throat, the shape of this being round. With this gown was worn a flowered sash and there was an oddly shaped little collar, with tie ends, that appeared below the lace collar, also of flowered silk. A darling little cap shaped hat of filet lace accompanied the frock, this having a wired out frill to edge it, but no other trimming.

Odd Jumbling of Styles.

As the season advances it grows more and more difficult to say what is the prevailing mode and what especial period the dressmakers have gone back to for their inspiration. There is an odd jumbling of styles, but one must say that the best of several periods have been selected and that sometimes several are combined with splendid results. Some of the couturiers have adopted the Grecian art and are making frocks with long draperies that produce a statuesque effect, while others have borrowed from such recent days as those of 1820 and have gowns that are trimmed with ruchings, short overskirts, and puffed sleeves. There are any number of Louis XV. and Louis XVI. costumes, some of the new figured materials being especially adapted to these styles.

In evening frocks there is the greatest latitude and one may really wear anything from ruffled tulle ball gowns to silver and gold brocaded satin. In this last I saw at Worth's the other day one that was lovely. The skirt, which was mounted for perhaps three inches, was of black shot with silver and in addition it was brocaded over with huge silver flowers. It was as narrow as it could be worn, opened slightly at the bottom on either side of the front, and had a train that was nothing more than a point, so small and narrow was it. The bodice, low in the neck, was of flesh colored tulle, over which was draped some yellowish lace, and in place of sleeves there were some wonderful ornaments made of jet and silver that were fastened on the shoulders and then fell in long festoons over the arms.

There was a charming gown, for a girl, made of white tulle, the skirt having three flounces, each edged with full ruchings. The upper part of the bodice was nothing but a series of ruchings, these, of course, being made of tulle, and the lower part of silver brocaded cloth, which was laid in two deep folds. The sleeves of tulle reached somewhat below the elbow and they had as a finish now after row of ruching, all as light and dainty as possible.

At dinners in the fashionable restaurants there are some lovely gowns being worn and in these one is surprised at the number that are in all black or in black with just a touch of white. I saw a most useful one the other evening made of charmeuse, with a plain short skirt and an overskirt that suggested the washerwoman style of several years ago. This, however, must have been stiffened out about its lower edge, for it stood away from the skirt in a way that only could be produced by wires. Where the material was draped up in front there was a beautiful ornament in fine jet, and in the back, where the ends of the overskirt were tucked under the girdle, there was another ornament, both having long swinging loops and ends. The bodice of the frock was simply a surplice shaped piece of the charmeuse, the points of the neck being filled in with folds of white chiffon and the draped sleeves being of the same.

Another black evening gown had the corsage made of Chantilly lace, draped over sulphur colored tulle, with a skirt of satin, which was elaborately draped and had a short train. There was a sash of sulphur satin, this being loosely wound about the waist and having the ends falling low on the left side of the skirt, these being finished with huge beaded knobs that were left most noticeable. Black broche crêpe de chine is enormously used for dinner dresses, the skirts of these being generally draped and rather elaborately so.

One model seen recently had such a skirt, draped to look like a double skirt. The material was brought up on to the corsage, this having two deep upward points in front, and above was soft white lace, veiled in black Chantilly. There was a narrow fold of rose satin about the waist, with two ends of the same falling at the left side and in place of an ornament of any sort these were edged with Chantilly lace.

This lace has never been as fashionable as it is this season and a lot of the large dressmakers are using it for many purposes. It is being made into odd shaped basques, into boleros, into overskirts worn without another inch of the lace being used, and as a trimming for white gowns it is to be seen on dozens of such. Gowns of Maline lace are seen, almost entirely veiled with Chantilly and there are many thin batiste gowns with overdresses of black lace and frequently a collar and cuffs of the same. This combination makes one of the most effective seen this summer and when worn with the addition of a Chantilly lace hat and parasol they are smart.

There is a perfectly radical departure in summer hats, for every kind of one, except those intended for strict tailor wear, is made transparent. The prettiest are those fashioned of lace, either black or white, and next to these, and almost as attractive, are those made of tulle. A lovely one seen at Lewis' had the crown made of figured Chantilly lace, the design being wonderfully light and delicate. There was no lining, not even wires to hold the lace in place, this of necessity being done by the hair elaborately arranged beneath. A band of black velvet an inch wide formed the support for the brim, which was also of Chantilly lace, an edging ten inches wide. This was turned directly up, the edge being wired to hold it, and the back was slightly higher than the front. There was not a particle of trimming, but there were strings of lace, which came from beneath the velvet band, passed under the chin, and were caught with a lovely ornament at the left side.

Hats for Any Frock.

In the same establishment there was another transparent hat, so pretty that one longed to see it worn by some charming girl. This was in Maline lace and had the same transparent crown and brim. The latter, however, was put over a light frame of wire and formed a little halo about the face. Resting on the brim at the back was a huge butterfly made of lace and more delicate looking than the insect itself. The large wings, much wider than the brim of the hat, were wired, but so lightly that they moved with every motion, and anything more ethereal looking than this could not be imagined.

There are hats with crowns of unlined white lace and with brims in black that are smart and new, and there was one model seen all white, with a coronet of black aigrettes resting against the white turned up brim. Tulle hats are as light as feathers, for these, too, have transparent crowns and standing ruffles all of the same lightness. In some the crowns are large, shaped somewhat like a Tam O'Shanter, while others are small and fit closely over the hair. The ruffles, or sometimes bias bands put on so as to stand straight, are generally tall and they are most flattering to any face. If the effect of a lingerie hat is required the same sort of crown is used, but the lace edging or ruffling then droops about the face and over the nape of the neck in the back, and these are equally becoming.

It would seem that tulle was too dressy to be worn except for formal occasions, but really as these hats are being made now they are charming with any summer frock, or even with costumes of silk and satin. In fact, they are the hats most worn from lunch time onward, the only difference in those intended for afternoon or evening being that the latter are generally larger and often they are trimmed with exquisite paradise feathers. Some of these dainty morning affairs have their crowns surrounded with wreaths of flowers, the most effective of these being many colored mingled with dark grasses and golden wheat. Others have velvet twisted about them, with loops and ends in the back or at one side, and sometimes one sees a tulle hat trimmed about the crown with a tiny band of some dark fur, unseasonable, but smart.

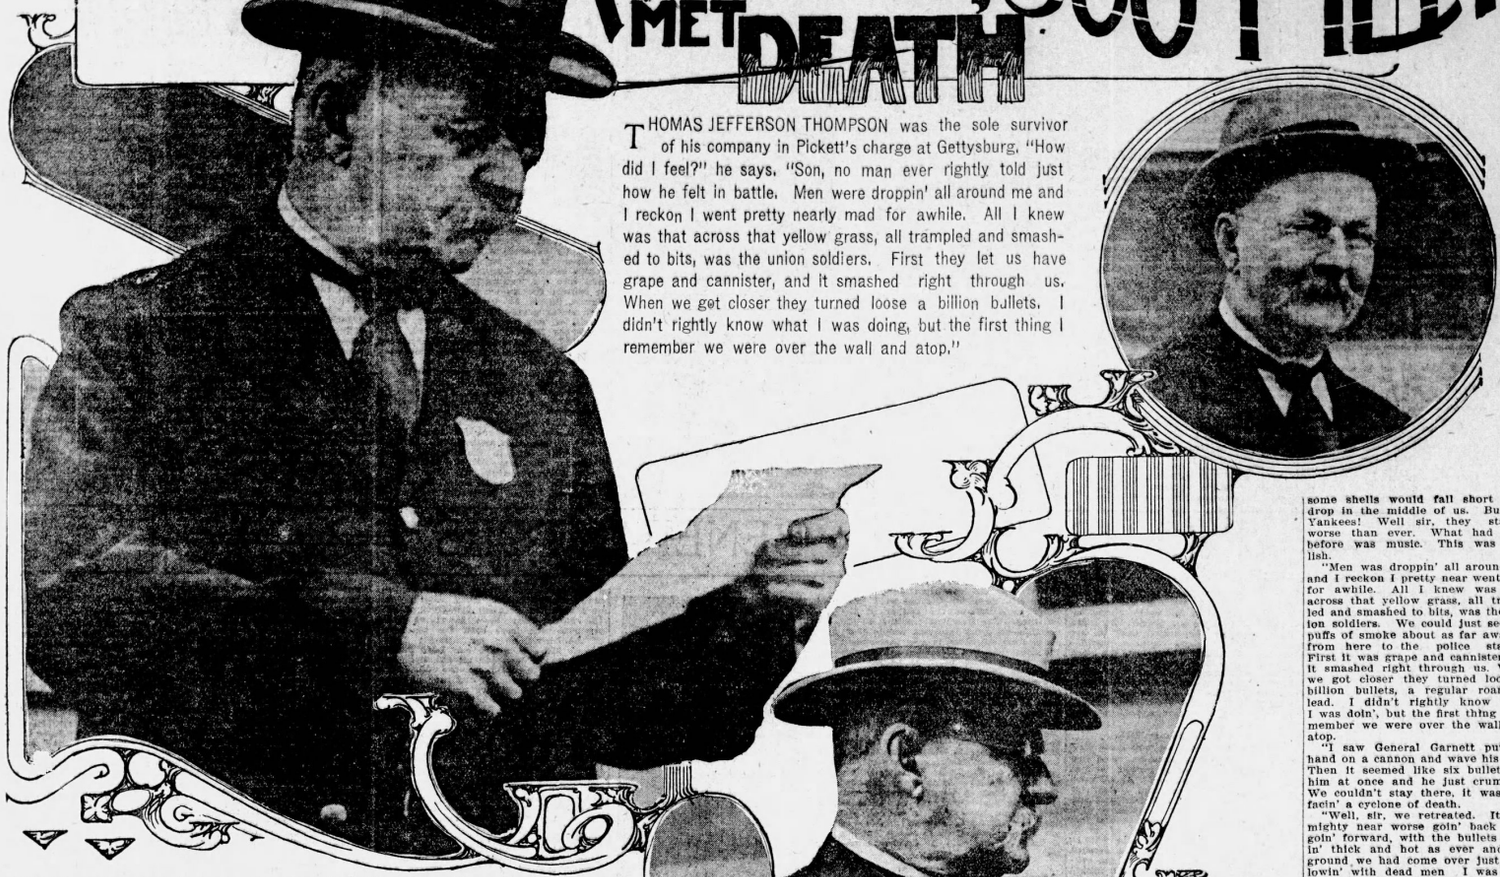
Novelty in Hose.

For evening use boas take the place of ruches, and these also are delicately made, a great improvement on those worn several years ago. At Doucet's they are showing some beautiful ones of lightly plaited tulle, with large velvet flowers forming the center. These flowers have irregularly shaped petals and leaves, so they have not the least bit of stiffness; also, they are in wonderful colorings, gray blues, petunia reds, and bronze, made up with tulle that harmonizes, if it does not match, and these are altogether the smartest that I have seen. At Paquin's they have a model that is shaped like a Capuchin hood, this being made of fine wires covered with chiffon. There are lace ruffles that fall from the hood and others that stand about the neck, also wired, and at one side will be seen a wreath of little rococo roses, or a large velvet flower surrounded by a frill of lace. They are charming and are often just enough protection against a draft when dining in a restaurant.

I must say a short word about the latest thing in stockings, for these are among the real novelties and so are of consequence. They are laced at the side, each pair having one side of the leg only thus adorned. Real eyelet holes are woven into the stockings and through these the ribbon is drawn, crossing over and over, as one would lace a shoe. Just below the knee there is a bow with ends. As a rule the lacing is done with ribbon of the same color, but I have seen some worn when a bright contrasting shade was used.

The idea, of course, is that these stockings will show their decoration with the present fashion of open skirt, and as a matter of fact it is with these gowns that I have seen them worn.

WHEN 3,500 MEN MET DEATH



THOMAS JEFFERSON THOMPSON was the sole survivor of his company in Pickett's charge at Gettysburg. "How did I feel?" he says. "Son, no man ever rightly told just how he felt in battle. Men were droppin' all around me and I reckon I went pretty nearly mad for awhile. All I knew was that across that yellow grass, all trampled and smashed to bits, was the union soldiers. First they let us have grape and cannister, and it smashed right through us. When we got closer they turned loose a billion bullets. I didn't rightly know what I was doing, but the first thing I remember we were over the wall and atop."

AND that," said Thomas Jefferson Thompson, "was the closest call I ever had."

He leaned back in his chair in front of Atlanta's city hall building, in his eyes a far-away expression. Perhaps he was scanning a misty vision of a long gray line advancing across a mile of land ploughed by grape and cannister and swept from end to end by a screaming yellow hell of batteries.

It is a long call from a position on Atlanta's police force to Pickett's charge at Gettysburg and a place in the leading battalion as those "lean-locked ranks went roaring down to die."

Yet Thomas Jefferson Thompson was one of those who charged with General Pickett and has lived to tell the tale. He is the sole survivor of his company of one hundred and twelve who were among the 14,000 men who dared death on the third day of July, 1863.

In those days he was Private Thompson, Company I, Nineteenth Virginia, Garnett's brigade. Now he is Officer Thompson, guardian of the city hall.

Officer Thompson's closest call was the closest call of thousands and the death knell of 3,500. He has had many a wild experience in his thirty-five years' police experience in Atlanta, but never, he says, has he felt the clutch of death's fingers as on that hot July day.

PICKETT'S CHARGE.

It was the third day of the battle of Gettysburg that witnessed the greatest charge of modern times, the charge that for pure pluck and fearlessness puts into the shade the charge of the Old Guard at Waterloo and the rash gallantry of the Light Brigade at Balaklava.

The noble Six Hundred and Napoleon's Flower of France were on horseback, and with all due honor to their bravery and courage it is still a question as to whether they could have helped leaping into the jaws of death once their steeds went mad with the battle smell and the roaring cannons on every side of them.

The men of Pickett were afoot. They could have turned back at any moment from the time they left the Confederate lines and started for the Federal trenches a mile away. Yet in the face of a blinding sheet of flaming bullets they marched, not running, standing up every step of the way, straight into inferno, and grappled with the very mouths of belching cannon.

For two days the men of the north and south had been at each other's throats, the "two greatest and gallentest armies ever assembled on this continent."

The first day's fight had seen General Ewell and the advance brigade of the Army of Northern Virginia batter back the strongest corps of Meade's army to entrenched positions on Cemetery Ridge.

The second day had witnessed the backbone of the Confederacy broken at Little Round Top. Hand-to-hand fighting with clubbed muskets, bayonet, sabre, bowie-knives and stones, Yank and Rebel sobbed out their life blood around the little hill, the possession of which would have meant final victory for the Confederates. General Warren held it, the line of gray was slaughtered back, and the tide had begun to turn.

THE THIRD DAY.

The morning of the third day dawned blistering hot. Over on Cemetery Ridge General Meade had massed battery after battery, a mile away, on Seminary Ridge, General Lee had clustered a hundred guns, each so well manned as to be capable of firing from four to six times a minute.

The world's greatest artillery duel followed. A thousand shells a minute were ripped from the smoking cannon mouths; guns were knocked to flinders and cannoneers torn into shreds, only to be replaced by others; two volcanoes turned their craters sideways and threw their blasts of fire at each other; a flea could not have lived two minutes on the open space between.

Hour after hour the guns roared, and hour after hour the infantry of the north and south lay gasping in the burning trenches, lying flat on their bellies, unable to join in the fighting.

Toward the middle of the afternoon, as the sun, a great red heart, smoked its way into the sooted sky, the terrific bombardment began to decrease. Then Lee ordered Pickett's charge.

Fourteen thousand of the "best infantry on earth" rose from behind the Confederate trenches and strode forth into the hate of a crimson Tartarus. They had a mile of bullet-drilled field before them and at the end of it a strongly entrenched enemy. That enemy they were expected to reach and to drive out.

They did it. With great gaps smashed every minute in the quivering line of gray they crossed the battlefield, reached the earthworks, climbed over them, and stood their ground. For but a moment, however. No support was given them, the survivors who reached the ridge were not numerous enough to hold it, and back they went, still harried by the crash of grape and cannister.

They left 3,500 men dead and dying on the field behind them.

That was what Thomas Jefferson Thompson went through fifty years ago. Let him tell it in his own words:

"We had been marching for two days to get into position," he said, as he grasped his wooden cane and rested it on the tiled floor in front of him. "We were a half-starved lot of scarecrows, I reckon, but God knows, we were chock full of hope and courage even though our stomachs were empty of bacon and bread.

"Saturday night we got into position in the trenches on Seminary Ridge. I was in General Garnett's brigade, part of Pickett's division, composed almost entirely of the best blood of Virginia.

"That Sunday morning was as hot as today, a regular scorcher. Right after sun-up the guns started firing. They kept it up for hours. They say you could hear 'em roaring for pretty near a hundred miles and I know the earth trembled and quivered around us like it would rock to pieces.

"It kept gettin' hotter and hotter, and all we could do was to lie there flat on our faces, with the bullets whimpering overhead every time the thunder of the artillery would let you hear 'em whimper, and the shells bursting up there on the top of the works. Every now and then somebody would get hit, blip! and all he could do was lie there and die."

"HOW DID I FEEL?"

"How did I feel? Son, no man ever rightly told just how he felt in a battle. My throat was all parched up, though, and the water in my canteen was so bilin' hot I couldn't drink it. It was literally hot as hell!

"When the guns were fairly wore out with the blasting away they ordered us to charge. Up we got and climbed over the trench. We were in martial order and I reckon it was pretty as a picture when we first stepped out like a parade across that torn ground.

"Our guns stopped firin' altogether. You see, they were scared some shells would fall short and drop in the middle of us. But the Yankees! Well sir, they started worse than ever. What had gone before was music. This was devilish.

"Men was droppin' all around me and I reckon I pretty near went mad for awhile. All I knew was that across that yellow grass, all trampled and smashed to bits, was the Union soldiers. We could just see the puffs of smoke about as far away as from here to the police station. First it was grape and cannister and it smashed right through us. When we got closer they turned loose a billion bullets, a regular roar o' lead. I didn't rightly know what I was doin', but the first thing I remember we were over the wall and atop.

"I saw General Garnett put his hand on a cannon and wave his arm. Then it seemed like six bullets hit him at once and he just crumpled. We couldn't stay there, it was like facin' a cyclone of death.

"Well, sir, we retreated. It was mighty near worse goin' back than goin' forward, with the bullets comin' thick and hot as ever and the ground we had come over just wallowin' with dead men. I was near dead myself when I got back.

ESCAPED UNWOUNDED.

"But I've never been wounded yet," he added.

Officer Thompson was one of six brothers who fought for the Confederacy. Two of them were killed in the first battle of Manassas. One still lives, besides the officer. All through the war Thomas Jefferson Thompson was with Lee's army, taking part in most of the big battles of the great struggle.

He got closest to the Yankees, he says, during the campaigns around Richmond that marked the twilight of the Army of Northern Virginia.

"Our outposts weren't five feet apart," he says. "And one day I saw a bunch of Yankee cavalry start out of the woods. Well, sir, I threw away my gun and cartridge belt and lit out for the timber. I knew I was captured if I didn't make the trees. They were right behind me two of 'em, shoutin' at me to halt and firin' their pistols. Did I run? Well, just as I dove into a bunch of brush I heard one of 'em say, "My God, I never saw a Johnny Reb run so fast before!"

"But as it happens," continued the officer, "it didn't make much difference whether I ran or not, as General Lee surrendered two days later. When he came ridin' down through our lines on old Traveler, his face so sorrowful and all the men cheerin' and cryin' at the same time, it was fair heart rendin'."

Officer Thompson looked as if he might have been one of those who cried himself. He rose and thumped with his cane.

"Wish I could talk over old times with some o' Pickett's men," he said. "So far as I know I'm the only one of 'em in Atlanta and I suppose there ain't many of 'em left in the United States."

A DAY WITH JUDGE BROYLES IN ATLANTA'S POLICE COURT

BY H. W. ROSS.

THE public knows the police court as a source of many sad stories, and a few humorous ones. There its knowledge ends. Not one man in a hundred would undertake to tell the procedure of this tribunal, nor its exact function in our complex civilization. He knows only by hearsay of its existence. He reads about it in the papers, and that is all.

"Give me," said O. Henry, "a day to see a city, and I will spend one-half of it in police court."

So, since O. Henry has called our attention to it, this story has been written about Atlanta's police court and the man who rules it. Let us enter.

Being of that vast class of society which calls itself respectable, we have never been in police court before and, therefore, shocked by what confronts us. Negroes—scores of them—banked up on tiers of benches on one side of a railing which divides the room in half, a policeman lolling in chairs, and the judge's rostrum on the other side—all this is disconcerting. It is not even a pleasing sight. But we are out to see the police court! So we will subdue for the nonce our first and decidedly respectable inclination to leave, and take seats among the policemen.

Court has begun. The clerk from beside the judge's chair calls a name without looking up from his docket. An attache automatically opens a door on one side of the room and repeats the name raucously. His tone grates on our nerves. And then we have the opportunity of seeing one of those notorious people, a police court character.

He comes out through the door—out of the cage—blinks, glances furtively around and then, probably having been there before and knowing the way, walks straight up to the judge's stand. He looks human, that is about all we can say for him.

It doesn't make any difference to us what the charge is against him. His case is interesting just the same.

A policeman gets up from a chair and walks to his side, and they stand in front of the judge. That is the arresting officer. Captor and captive each call their witnesses and these come up and surround the two.

The judge starts to take evidence. It is a complicated task. Everybody tells a conflicting story. There is not a case on record where a defendant has admitted his guilt and agreed that he ought to be punished. If he don't deny it outright he always has an excuse. But the judge, because he is a conscientious judge, listens and questions and sifts. Probably he finds the prisoner guilty. For policemen usually don't arrest police court characters for doing nothing. Maybe the judge gives him a jail sentence or a fine. It doesn't matter much. The police court character, unless it is one of those rare times when he is "flush," can't pay a fine anyhow.

As the police court character goes back to his cage that bump of pity which is buried in us all, wells up and we feel sorry, somehow, for this human being. Maybe we even criticize the judge. But, if we do, we take it all back later. We get to thinking that this man is better in jail than at large. Probably the judge has this same feeling of pity. But above all things a judge must be stern, and punish where punishment is needed.

EACH CASE DIFFERENT.

And so we see and hear the cases on down through the session. They are all different. Versatility is the police court's specialty. There is humor and pathos so commingled that we don't know when to laugh and when to weep. Our emotions are always on edge.

There is no person on earth adept enough in the use of words to describe what we have witnessed. Veritably, we must see this police court to appreciate and know it. Nobody can tell you about it and transmit the local color.

It is an endless stream, this flotsam and jetsam of life that drifts through the police court. Its way and destination are as uncertain as clouds wafted by the wind. Neither the judge, nor any other mortal man, has the power to turn its course. He can only direct it for a time; influence it, as it were.

Judge Nash R. Broyles is the ruler of this Atlanta court. He is the man we have seen in action. He is known throughout the United States. Sociologists study him and his theories. For Judge Broyles, as a city recorder, has been one of the most successful in the country. His court is unique among the courts of the land.

Judge Broyles has presided over Atlanta's recorder's court for something like fourteen years back. He has sat through more than 8,000 sessions and heard and passed judgment in more than 150,000 cases. Think of it! By O. Henry's standards the judge ought to be given a degree as bachelor of life.

A JUST JUDGE.

Ever since the first day Judge Broyles sat on the bench in Atlanta's lowest court he has exerted a potent influence. He has made himself felt. He believes that the proper administration of justice is the only thing that will keep the country from anarchy. He admits that there is something wrong with the law as it is dealt out in this country. It is not justice! And, because the judge is a just man, he sometimes strains a point of law to give justice.

People can be divided into two general classes, the offender and the offended. Courts are maintained to punish the offender for the protection of the offended. But it is the theory of justice that the offender must be prosecuted, not persecuted. There is a fine distinction. And upon the clear discernment of this subtle difference depends civilization itself. An unwise or an insincere judge has limitless power to ruin; a competent, conscientious judge has a boundless opportunity to do good.

Quick and sure punishment—and justice, is Judge Broyles' slogan.

It is a treat to hear Judge Broyles try a case. He has a way of getting at the truth and the whole truth. Sometimes he is prosecutor, defending attorney and judge, all in one. He wants to know all about everything. And he is boss of his court. If you don't believe it sta-t something! There is none of this monkey business, as we call it, if Judge Broyles is on the bench. It is said that a man stands as much chance in his court with a lawyer as he does without one. This is true so far as Judge Broyles is concerned. There never was an attorney who could influence or deceive or bluff him. After the judge makes his decision, though, the lawyer may get his prisoner out of court on a technicality. But he doesn't if Judge Broyles can help it!

If the judge believes that a man is guilty he is going to do all in his power to punish him. There are cases on record where he has ordered the arrest of an offender who he thought might escape his deserts.

If one man is shot by another, the man that did the shooting ought to be punished for the offense whether the wounded man wants it done or not, thinks Judge Broyles. For the crime is against the commonwealth just as much as it is against the individual. Who knows who the gunman may shoot next?

Twenty-five years ago the judge—he wasn't a judge then—graduated from Georgia university at Athens. He had an ambition, and a diploma setting forth that he was a full-fledged lawyer. He wanted to be a judge.

A twelvemonth later found him with a shingle up. A few years more and he was installed on the bench as United States commissioner, and four more saw him city recorder. And he has held the job down ever since. He has had to fight sometimes, but the judge is nothing if he isn't a fighter.

In speaking of laws, he says:

"The proper and indiscriminate enforcement of the law is the only things that awill hold the United States together. There is too much delay in the law and too many technicalities. We need quicker and surer trials. Punishment where punishment is needed, is what we want."

And so on. The judge is interesting when he talks, believe us.

He is the kind of a judge who believes in sentencing a man even if a lawyer does find that there is a comma missing from the code under which he was convicted.

MR. CARNEGIE AND THE CHURCHES

BY BISHOP W. A. CANDLER

MR. ANDREW CARNEGIE in his recent communication to the Chancellor of Vanderbilt University stated most unequivocally his opposition to the ownership and control of colleges and universities by any church whatsoever, "whether the organization be a Methodist Conference, or a Presbyterian assembly, or a Catholic order". This is nothing new. For years Mr. Carnegie has held and published this view, and he established the Carnegie Pension Fund on the basis of this idea. Whatever may be said of him concerning this matter, he can not be charged with any want of candor. He knows what he wants and tells plainly what he wants. He wants no church schools in the United States.

He does not seem to be over-well informed about the history of education; for he seems to ignore or condemn the vast work of the churches in the field of education for a thousand years. It is quite possible that Mr. Carnegie knows more about making millions of money out of steel combinations than he knows about education, and that his financial accumulations have ministered to a certain conceit of universal knowledge upon his part. It not infrequently occurs that a man who has made much money indulges the delusion that his information is as extensive as his fortune and his intellectual ability as great as is his monetary success. Mr. Carnegie assumes to intermeddle with all knowledge, and often shows himself more confident than wise.

But let all this be as it may, Mr. Carnegie knows what he wants and gives millions to get it. On the other hand, the churches also know what they want, and they are beginning to see that they must make a square issue with Mr. Carnegie and his followers. The issue is already joined, and it will be drawn more sharply from now on.

For example, early in the month of July the Educational Association of the Roman Catholic Church in the United States met in the city of New Orleans. Among other resolutions passed by the body are the following, which manifestly are aimed at Mr. Carnegie and his methods.

"Whereas, liberty of education has always been recognized in our country as a basic principle, and

"Whereas, the right of the parents to educate is one of those fundamental rights which cannot without injustice be interfered with; and

"Whereas, the continued recognition of this right is essential to the preservation, of a most cherished prerogative of American citizenship; be it

"Resolved, That the Catholic Educational Association views with alarm the activities of certain individuals and corporations whose utterances and efforts are calculated to interfere with the just liberties of private educational institutions.

"Whereas, the Council of Education of the American Medical Association has elicited the aid of the Carnegie foundation in the examination and classification of hospitals; and

"Whereas, said Carnegie foundation has shown a spirit antagonistic to institutions under religious control; and

"Whereas, there are more than 500 hospitals in the United States under the direction and control of Catholics; be it

"Resolved, That we hereby protest to the American Medical Association against the action of the medical council; and be it

"Resolved, That we protest the American Medical Association to intruct its Medical Council to discontinue the services of the Carnegie dation.

The association all but denounced Mr. Carnegie's educational schemes as an attempt to form an educational "trust," as will appear from the careful reading of the following:

"We hold that the life and well-being of our republic depends on resisting the influence of centralizing and devitalizing methods that have throttled enterprise in industry and has created our trusts, and that In the name of efficiency are now applied to education and are in danger of stifling initiative and private endeavor."

This action of the association is not without justification. A few years ago it was announced that the Rockefeller Board and the Carnegie Board would cooperate very "sympathetically." Several persons are members of both Boards. Mr. Carnegie himself is a member of the Rockefeller Board; and when he accepted membership on that Board Mr. Rockefeller expressed his gratification at the fact in these words:

"If a combination to do business is effective in saving waste and in getting better results, why is not combination far more important in philanthropic work? The general idea of co-operation in giving for education, I have felt, scored a real step in advance when Mr. Andrew Carnegie consented to become a member of the General Education oBard."

The country knows perfectly well what Mr. Rockefeller means by "a combination to do business." It is the dialect of the Standard Oil Company and the Steel Trust that phrase has meant to destroy all competitors in the oil and steel market, and now you like well the market. Shall we have that sort of thing in the educational world? The Federal Government has been prosecuting "trusts" and "trust-makers," but here is forming before our eyes the most dangerous of all trusts. Already the Carnegie Foundation is undertaking to dictate educational standards and methods to the whole continent, and to "black-list" schools which do not bow to its standards. Not much of "Carnegie units" and the like.

The purpose to dominate education in the United States has been distinctly and unequivocally announced by the Rockefeller Board, of which Mr. Carnegie is a member, and which is in close alliance with the Carnegie Board. At the time of the organization of that Board it was announced in statements of identical form in the New York papers what was intended. In view of the fact that the same notice appeared in several papers it is fair to assume it issued through all the papers from a common and authoritative source. In It appeared these words:

"While certain colleges will be selected for donations or endowments, forming a chain across the continent, others not so favored will be left to their fate, as it were, and many of them will be, it is expected, forced to close their doors in the face of such strong support of their fortunate rivals."

About the same time the OUTLOOK, Dr. Lyman Abbott's periodical, spoke as follows editorially:

With this financial power in its control, the general board is in position to do what no body in this country can at present, even attempt. It can determine largely what institutions shall grow, and in some measure what shall stand still or decay. It can look over the territory of the nation, note the places where there is a famine of learning, and start new educational plants of any species it chooses, or revive old ones. It can do in many ways what the government does for education in France and Germany. Its power will be enormous; it seems as if it might be able to determine the character of American education. The funds it holds represent only a fraction of the amounts which it will control; by giving a sum to an institution on condition that the institution raise an equal or greater amount, it will be able to direct much larger amounts than it possesses."

There is disclosed the scheme to dominate education in addition and it is open and fully exposed to view. That such a scheme is good for the country can not be believed. Let the motives of the men who are promoting the purpose to control the higher education of the United States be what they may, no such power is safe in their hands or the hands of any body. That most able paper the NEW YORK JORUNAL OF COMMERCE states the case suggestively in an editorial from which this extract is taken:

"A system of giving which has its own rules and customs, which is governed by principles of selection laid down in the beginning, which ramifies throughout the country and embraces especially those smaller institutions that are dependent by narrow means, is an infinitely more powerful force in the shaping of opinion than any single capitalist who makes separate and often unconditional gifts to be controlled and invested by the institutions themselves could ever be. As a mechanism for controlling academic opinion there has, perhaps, never been anything in the history of education that would compare with the Board system of subsidizing larning."

"Gifts to educatin are like campaign contributions in that they are best made in relatively small amounts and from many sources. Under such circumstances they are likely to leave the recipients in position to choose their own course in matters of opinion and teaching. If they must be large, it requires greater force of character to maintain independence of thought and action. Such freedom has been lacking in too many quarters. The spectacle of a university president preaching the maintenance of some of the worst abuses of capitalism and another meekly bowing the knee to receive the money offered by those abuses has in the had but lately suggested social ostracism as a penalty is not edifying. Instances can be given in abundance where the mere prospect of an immediate gift has changed the whole current of a college administrator's thought and made him trim his sails or even alter his course so as to catch the favoring breezes of prosperity. The craze and competition for large numbers of students has greatly crippled those who would uphold the older traditions of independent economic thinking. Increasing numbers mean increasing expense, and college administration and lead to growing dependence on wealth of doubtful origin. This, among other reasons, is ground for thinking that endowments, which of the past few years, whether as pensions, endowments or annual gifts to colleges, may put our academic thinkexs into a moral straitjacket at the same time that they are freed from the cramping influences of limited means."

In the last national campaign President Wilson and his friends avoided large contributions from individuals and corporations. Dominating donations to colleges and universities are likewise to the most desirable; and when they come through incorporations with cumulative power, they are positively dangerous.

Herein is the value of having colleges like those of the churches,—institutions which owe their life life and support to a large number of pious people who by their gifts aim at nothing but the intellectual culture and moral welfare of the country. Such institutions stand in the way of institutions dominated by boards established and controlled by a few rich men.

They are stumbling blocks in the way of the avowed purposes of Mr. Carnegie. Can he put them out of the way? Hardly.

The churches are not going to die, they are going to live. They are not going out of the work of education; they are going to do more work in that field. Mr. Carnegie does not understand churches as well as he knows politics and steel-making. He will find that he can not overcome the churches. They can not be bought, and they can not be over-awed. They are not going to allow Mr. Carnegie nor anybody else to mottle their educational policies, or pull down their institutions of learning. And they permit their colleges and universities to be dominated by Mr. Carnegie and his board. The people are fully awakened to what is going on, and the answer to all these schemes will be vigorous and emphatic. They will answer with both words and works. The gifts of thousands and tens of thousands of devout people can not be despised.

That the churches are awakening to the menace of Mr. Carnegie's schemes is evident from the resolutions of the National Association of the Catholics at New Orleans. The members of that association have sounded a true note, but the beginning of what will speedily follow Mr. Carnegie and his board have under-rated the power and purposes of the christian churches.

THE JEWS---OUR BENEFACTORS

By REV. JAMES W. LEE

THE following interesting article was written by Dr. James W. Lee, pastor of St. Johns' Methodist church in St. Louis, who has thousands of friends and admirers in Georgia, for "The American Israelite." Dr. Lee was formerly pastor of Trinity Methodist church in Atlanta and prior to that he served Park Street Methodist church. He has written a number of books on religious subjects and is as widely known as a writer as a minister.

By REV. JAMES W. LEE.

Mr. Benjamin Altheimer has rendered valuable service to the community by his efforts to bring Jews and Christians together, for the observance of Flag Day. The flag represents national unity. When it is honored, everything good in the republic is honored. When the peo*ple meet together to honor it in patriotic* service of praise, prayer and discourse, goodwill is fostered among them. Those who sit down together in church or temple, to worship the God and Father of All, andto develop loyalty to the flag, the national symbol of the dependence, and relatedness and oneness of all will realize their kinship the one to the other, as they could in no other way. Division, strife, prejudice between one race andanother, between one class and another, are due to lack of knowledge on the part of one race of another race or one class of another class. Charles Lamb once said that he did not want to to be introduced to a certain person, for he said: "I do not like him, and if I were to know him, I would be sure to love him." This means that the reason we do not love one another better, is because we do not know one another better. When we meet and commingle and companate and exchange greetings and ideas with one another, we see all at once that we are united in a thousand interests for every single respect in which we are divided. We learn by the barest association that we are subject to the same diseases, temptations, sorrows and heartaches. We learn that we face the same problems of doubt, fear, sin and death. We come back with a meeting with some one from the ends of the earth, and we see with the knowledge that after all we are infinitely more like that person than we are different from him.

NEED OF SYMPATHY.

All of us, whether we hail from China or Russia, or Mamchatka, need fire to warm us, shelter to protect us and food to match our hunger. We all need sympathy. The material universe around us is so cold and hard and mechanical, that each of us needs to find a center of light and warmth and fellowship—which it takes all of us to make. All this has been said with a view to apecializing along the general trend of the needs of the race, as the reason for the nearness and yet far-apartness of Jews and Christians. How can we account for that subtle something that seems to divide Christians, living in the same country, as distant to the one from the other as if they occupied different shores of the ocean. Whatever the sentiment may be that keeps them apart—it is not rational; it is wholly stupid. It is clear that the Jews are not a poverty-stricken race. On the other hand, they are the purest-blooded people on the face of the earth. Certain high-born English families are proud to trace their line of descent to William the Conqueror—or further down the ages, to Constantine the Great; but the obscurest Jew in St. Louis can trace his lineage back 4,000 years to Abraham, the Father of the Faithful. The irrational feeling of opposition, so many ignorant people cherish against the Jews, is now based upon the fact that the Israelites are a lawless, improvident, immoral people. In fact, the Jews are the most obedient law-abiding people on the face of the earth, and have been ever since Abraham left Ur of the Chaldees, to settle in Canaan. It was recently said that there is one divorce to every ten marriages in the city of St. Louis. The records of Jewish domestic life will show that there is not one divorce to every hundred marriages among the Israelites in St. Louis. The Jews are not improvident. It is not often that one ever finds a beggar among them. *It one is discovered, the Jews them*selves soon have him in charge and help it, if he is sick and needy—or put him to work if he is strong enough to labor in any of their lines of activity.

THEIR CHARITY.

Everybody knows that the Jews are the most charitable of our citizens. They give more than all other people any and Sunday in proportion to numbers, by four times than do other races among us. The Jews are not ignorant people. They have been leaders in the highest levels of philosophic thought from the time of Philo Judaeus *of Alexandria, Egypt, in the first cen*tury, to that of Henri Bergson, of Paris, France, in the twentieth century. What then is the matter with the Jews that they should be held at arm's length by the Gentiles in school, among the children, or on the streets among the grown people? They are patriotic, law-abiding, intelligent, thrifty, charitable, pure in domestic life, and have a pedigree dating back to the beginning of civilization. They have given us Moses, the greatest law-giver of all the ages. They have given us the prophets who have been the teachers of the Christians for nearly 2,000 years. More than all, our Lord Jesus Christ was a Jew, and all the disciples He called to build up the Christian church were Jews. If any race of people on the face of the earth, by reverence, the respect and the persistent, genuine good will of the Christians it is the Jews.

THE JEWS IN HISTORY.

Take the Jews out of history and you take Moses out of ethics; you take Isaiah out of prophecy; you take David out of song, and you take down the cross from the Hill of Calvary. Take the Jews out of history, and you take Matthew, Mark, Luke and John out of the New Testament, and you take St. Paul with his Epistles, out of civilization. Take the Jews out of history and you take Dante, Chartres, Amiens and the other great piles of beauty, created by faith in Christ, out of architecture; you take the great visions of the painters out of the art galleries; you take the great oratorios out of music. Take the Jews out of history and down will go all the hospitals, orphan asylums and homes for the poor and the blind, built by love inspired by Christ.

Take the Jews out of history and you will have to go to the cemeteries all around the world and with chisel and mallet, cut out every word taken from the Scriptures and carved on the tombstones above the dust of sleeping Christians. Then, why not cherish the deepest affection and kindness towards the Jews? Nearly everythinf we have that dignifies us and sweetens us and refines us and makes us significant as a people, has come to us from them. The people from whom our Bible has come and our Savior has come, and our Christian civilization has come, are—of all races—entitled to our goodwill. To ignore the Jews, to dislike them, to resent their presence, is to convict ourselves of the most base ingratitude. Among English-speaking peoples more hospitality is shown the Jews than is found among other races. But whatever prejudice there may be remaining among us, we should, by careful training of our children, and by right thinking In regard to God's Chosen People, seek to remove, root and branch, out of our national life.

AN AMAZING MIRACLE

If I were asked to name a miracle, live and amazing, now living on the face on the earth, I would point to the presence of the Jews among us in the year 1913 after four thousand years of the most bitter, malignant and senseless persecution, any people were ever called to meet and overcome. That they have not been utterly destroyed is the wonder of history.

John Addington Symonds said it was easy, from a first visit, to say something obvious and striking about Venice; that the influence of that sea city, when first seen, is unique. Immediate and unmistakable; but that to express the sober truth of those impressions, after the first astonishment of the Venetian visit had subsided, after the visit to the place had been harmonized through familiarity with one's habitual moods, was difficult. The picture Symonds paints of sunsets, embiazoned in gold and crimson, upon cloud and water—of violet domes and bell towers etched against the orange of the western sky—of moonlight silvering breeze-rippled stretches of blue—of islands shimmering in sun-litten haze—of statue-fretted palace fronts, are taken in at a glance. Their definiteness and wonder fade if we stay long enough to become familiar with them. Something like this one feels when he undertakes to write even a word about the Jews! If one could be thrown into the middle of a subject like this all at once, he would be overwhelmed with the wonder of it. But we have lived with the Jews so long that their history, more amazing than any other race, has been harmonized through familiarity with our habitual moods; and, though living by our side, we do not grasp the meaning and significance of their existence. But it is a pity that one living in Venice all his days is never able to see the center of art and wonder; that he can really never get a glimpse from a gondola of canals, of the most picturesque spot on earth and bring on the place. So we may say of the Chosen People who happen to be our neighbors—it is a pity that we cannot detach ourselves from our immediate surroundings for a little while, just to get a first impression of this great people, with their thousands of years of history, achievements and sufferings. It is a pity that the little girl in the school who refuses to walk by the side of a little Jewish girl is so familiar with Abraham about whom she is taught in Sunday school, and with Moses, whose Ten Commandments she is required to learn, and with Christ, whose love she is taught to breathe every day, does not see that by her discourtesy she wounds the spirit of Abraham, of Moses and of Christ.

The Man Who Made the Pictures Talk---Edison, the Wizard, at Work

By SMITH CLAYTON

IF a man had said thirty years ago that pictures would be talking in Atlanta before 1913 he would have been put in a lunatic asylum. Still the pictures are here, and they are talking.

THE WAY NOT EASY.

This fact recalls a visit which I paid Thomas A. Edison little more than a decade ago at Menlo Park, New Jersey. It was the first time that I ever had the pleasure of interviewing this wonderful man and I had some trouble in getting to him. I had been staying for a time in E. Orange said to be the most aristocratic port of Little Jersey and happened to run against Menlo Park. It is about the biggest electric plant in the world I reckon, and the minute my eye lit upon the very wide gateway which forms the main entrance and a very small gate-keeper who was guarding the way to the Wizard's working ground I made up my mind to pay Thomas A. a call.

Long experience in the interviewing line had taught me that the boldest way is the best. I knew that it was no easy matter to tackle the Wizard in his mysterious realm, but I walked straight up to the big gate and said:

RUSHING IT.

"Is Mr. Edison in?"

"Yes, he's in," replied the neatly-dressed and pleasant voiced little sentinel," but don't you see the sign. There's no admission to any one except on special business."

"Wel that hits me exactly. Tell him a newspaper man wants to see him on special business and would like to look through the plant, not a harpsonian reporter from New York, but a newspaper writer from the south with a scientific turn who is very much interested in his work."

"All right, I'll tell him but don't think he'll see you. Have you a card?"

"No—don't carry 'em—just take this," and I scribbled my name on a blank envelope and handed it over, not forgetting to add "From the South."

THE RETURN.

Pretty soon the vidette returned. He was smiling and looked awfully pleased.

"You, too,' he said. "Mr. Edison says come right in."

I followed the guard into a long building with metallic sides and roof, I think. There were all sorts of curious machines on all sides and some of them were operating and shedding showers of electric sparks.

THEY ARE SPARKS.

The men at these machines were bright-looking, quick-as-a-flash, brainy fellows, as electric workers ought to be. Some of them catch brilliancy and rapid action from the business. As Shakespeare, who never made a mistake in human nature, said.

"Our natures are subdued to what they work in—

HIS PEN.

Presently we stopped before a little door, and as it opened the wizard came out and shut it open. He received me pleasantly and while we were shaking hands I glanced through the door into a small darkened room with a severely plain-looking couch in one corner. This was the famous couch upon which Mr. Edison reclines when he engaged in deep thought or very tired.

THE NAPOLEON OF INVENTION.

I certainly felt honored in being admitted to the presence of the greatest man since Napoleon, and was charmed with his manner and appearance.

Everything about him, in deed, was Napoleonic except his clothes, which were not a bit martial or flashy. From his great head, his fine face "Sickled over with the pale cast of thought"—his deep piercing eyes, his very small but firmly-knitted stature, you get the idea that he was in the Napoleonic class.

The greatest of men have been small. Julius Caesar, for instance, Napoleon, Shakespeare himself was only medium sized—well, Thomas A. Edison is as great in his way as any of them. The fact is that he is the greatest man in his class who ever lived and there is only one in the class.

FASHION AVAUNT.

There was nothing shocking in his apparel. Genius don't lie in clothes. His hair was neat parted in the middle, either. Brains don't reside in hair. It was not parted at all, but as I recollect was rumpled, looked like a soft scramble all over his great head. His suit, which was very, very plain, was not an exquisite fit by any means, and there were creases that showed carelessness as you looked him over. It was a seven-dollar suit, color seven-cent sugar. The very carelessness in his attire, considering the genius of the man, showed how little attention he gave to mere trifling externals, and confirmed your lofty opinion of the grand brain which throbbed in tune with the highest progress and the advancement of civilization, under the broad-brimmed felt hat which looked every minute as if it felt like slouching.

He struck me as being a truly great man. He was very modest and very sincere, but had not much to say, but the little he said was right to the point, and there was not the slightest sign of vanity or showboping over.

ON THE WIRE.

First, he showed me quite a number of telegraph instruments. Some of them were pretty queer looking. He had worked with most of them. They were in a long side room and are perhaps the most interesting collection of instruments of the kind in the world.

THE GRAPHOPHONE.

But what interested me more because I could understand it better, was the graphophone upon which he was then working. He said that he had been experimenting with it a long time and it was by no means perfect yet. I could see that, for he took up a record, placed it, and the delivery from the horn was nothing like as clear, precise and distinct as it is today.

It was a rough-looking horn.

He said, however, that the time might come when the graphophone could speak a record so powerfully and clearly that it would sound like an orator addressing an audience of say, 5,000 in a big hall.

After entertaining me as best he could with the graphophone in the imperfected state which I saw me now I would like to look at the biograph.

CURIOSITY.

"What is that?"

"Oh, it's a machine for the production of moving pictures by means of a film representing a series of photographs taken." That is my recollection of his definition. I is the best that could be given, I think.

THE BIOGRAPH AS IT WAS.

We went around to a small building with a big piece of canvas swung up at one end of it. It was not of the whitest and the light was not of the brightest; but he explained that these temporary quarters were simply provided for experimental purposes.

HE WORKS.

The wizard put the machine to work himself and as it threw picture after picture on the canvas I was dee-lighted. One, I remember, represented a bathing, and the flash of the sabers and dust kicked up by the cavalry caught me completely. Another was an express train that seemed to rush at full speed out of the center of the canvas and rumble off into space. Like the witches in Macbeth these pictures came as shadows and so departed!

A LITTLE SHAKY.

The charm of the novelty, for such it was at that time, led me captive.

"They are still rough, these pictures" said the wizard, "but they are getting better every day. You notice that they wobble. I am working to remedy that, and shall not be satisfied until the glimmer is all gone and they are as steady as the North star."

PRETTY GOOD.

That was not bad!

He got the graphophone, or phonograph, down fine enough to suit him. He got the biograph so perfect that the visitors wondered at its variety, its clearness, its steadiness.

But he was not satisfied with sending the human voice down to future ages and bequeathing the scenes of today to the last syllable of recorded time!

Oh, no; he worked on, on. on.

The wedding.

Well, not so very long ago there was a most interesting wedding, which was heralded all over the world to the amazement of the peoples who knew the high contracting parties.

They were Mr. Phonograph and Miss Film. This famous pair together made a moving picture which talked.

And Thomas A. Edison performed the ceremony.

There were no cards.

THE SUMMER DIETARY

ANDREW M. SOULE

NOW that summer weather is upon us in earnest, there is a tendency for the appetite to lag. Cooking also becomes a considerable burden to the housewife. There is a craving for something dainty and appetizing. The knack of the good housewife is concentrated on an attempt to supply this need and desire of the family. Naturally, she realizes that overeating in hot weather is extremely undesirable and fraught with various ills and much needless suffering to humanity. To and where shall she turn to secure something that will enable her to utilize the vegetables of the garden which are always cooling and healthful? If she studies modern dietetics as now understood and appreciated by our best physicians and domestic science teachers, she will quickly learn that one of the most wholesome additions to the dietary will be found through the utilization of some kind of vegetable oil as the basis of her cookery and for the preparation of salads.

We may learn much from history which is to our material advantage, and the observation of the practices of peoples living in a climate similar to ours is also worthy of consideration. In Italy and southern Europe, for instance, oil has been used as a staple article of the dietary for many years. The Anglo-Saxon living farther north has not used it so extensively for the reason probably that he has not been acquainted with its virtues until recently, and also on account of the fact that his climate did not favor the production of a vegetable oil suitable for human consumption. As the south was largely settled by people who came originally from the British Isles, they naturally brought their traditions and ideas of cookery with them, and hence it is only lately that attention is being directed to the use of vegetable oils as substitutes for animal fats in frying, shortening and the preparation of salads. It is not surprising that this condition should have been observed in the past, for it is only in comparatively recent times that satisfactory methods of preparing a suitable table oil from a home-grown product have been perfected, and those acquainted with educational processes realize that it takes a long time to break down long-established custom and to overcome what frequently is nothing but foolish prejudice.

Rapid progress in the utilization of cotton seed oil in southern households may now be anticipated, however, because of the large number of domestic science courses established in our institutions of learning and because of the more general knowledge afforded the public through the writing of the savants and the efforts of the press with reference to what constitutes a desirable system of dietetics for our people. In this connection it is well to emphasize the fact that cotton seed oil is not only useful in cookery, but may be consumed directly by the human being as a substitute for other oils in building tissue and restoring the body when attacked by disease. One of the most pernicious diseases to which humanity is heir. It has the advantage of being equally wholesome, according to the testimony of eminent physicians, and is also cheaper. Besides that, it is a home-grown product, and its consumption in the south means to add to the annual output of the raw material from which it is derived and to stimulate our industries in a variety of ways.

Cotton seed oil has been much abused by those whose interests were opposed to its extensive utilization in the home. It's great rival has naturally been olive oil. Of course, this is a very wholesome product, but it is not produced in anything like sufficient quantity to meet the world's demand, and moreover it is a much more expensive oil, and experi*ment has now definitely* established the fact that it is not better in any respect for cooking purposes, the preparation of salad dressings, etc., than a high-grade properly refined cotton seed oil. In fact, it may be stated on the best of authority that great quantities of cotton seed oil manufactured in the south are shipped abroad, refined and sent back to the United States as olive oil. Possibly it has been blended with a small quantity of olive oil. It is hardly worth while under existing conditions, therefore, for the southern housewife to pay a dollar a quart for what she can get for 35 cents, and surely she will not continue to do this. It is doubtful if many epicures could tell any difference between a well refined cotton seed oil and olive oil if various dishes prepared from each were set before them.

It is a fine thing to be patriotic even at a pecuniary sacrifice. How much more desirable is it to be patriotic when it is economy to do so, as is shown to be the case in this instance. Cotton seed oil also has this material advantage, that it is the result of no convenient size and easy to handle. It also will keep for any reasonable length of time where properly handled. It may be used directly as a substitute for lard or other animal fats in the frying of meats, and as a constituent in the making of rolls, waffles and pancakes it is unexcelled. In the preparation of all kinds of salads it is one of the most convenient and wholesome materials which can be used. It affords a satisfactory basis for a French dressing which may be prepared at the table in a few minutes. In the preparation of mayonaise dressing it is indispensable, and as all know, this is one of the most attractive and wholesome salad dressings which can be used.

Why not utilize a home-grown product more extensively in the preparation of the human dietary in the future? Certainly to do so will be beneficial to both the consumer and producer. The farmer is benefited by the increased value his seed command; the manufacturer finds a ready market for his products at home; the *housewife uses these mate*rials with economy and for the benefit of her family. Thus the circle of co-ordinated interests is completed.

BLOODY MILK.

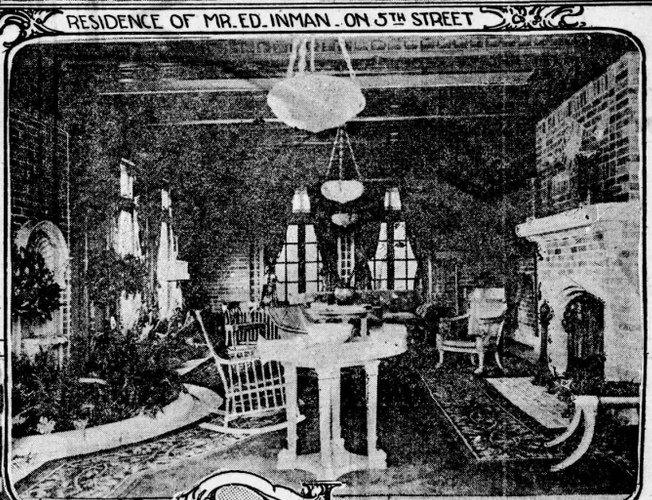
N. W., St. Charles, Ark., writes: We have a cow that gives bloody milk out of two of her teats but they do not seem to be sore. I would like to know what is the matter and what to do for her.

The bloody milk about which you write is probably due to an escape of blood with the milk because of some injury to the udder. This may be due to a blow or to congestion or inflammation. Richer and more abundant food sometimes causes bloody milk. Disease may be the cause of this trouble, and sometimes the eating of acrid or irritating plants, such as ranunculaceae, may produce it. In case of congested glands, the best treatment is to give one pound of Epsom salts, and daily thereafter one-half ounce of saltpetre with a dram of chlorate of potash. Bathe the bag with hot or cold water and rub with camphorated lard. Where a ration high in protein is being fed, it should be reduced. If there are acrid plants in the pasture, they must be removed. We believe that attention to these matters and the following out of the treatment suggested will relieve the trouble, unless it is due to some more or less chronic form of disease which may or may not now be making itself evident.

HOMES REVERTING TO English AND Italian Styles

FOUNTAIN IN SUN PARLOR

RESIDENCE OF MR. ED. INMAN, ON 5TH STREET



SUN PARLOR

DINING ROOM

SPACIOUS HALL

By W. E. Browne

My ain fireside, my ain fireside,
O, there's naught to compare wi' ains ain fireside.

ALTHOUGH England has always stood pre-eminent as the "Land of Homes," America might well bear away the palm when one considers the superb homes built everywhere over the United States in the past twenty years. Like true Americans in building, as in all else, we have taken the best points of the houses of all countries and adapted them to our own use. Substantiality, convenience and beauty in home and landscape architecture go to make up the American estate. It is but natural that the English type of architecture should be much in evidence in the south. Here is where the true descendants of squire and lord of "Merrie Old England" are to be found. And some lingering shadow of far gone days floats over the mind of the southerner and sets him longing for "Baronial Court and Hall." And, too, the new south is building to endure. And what more typical of endurance and repose than the English home!

The Italian style also is seen in American architecture. In fact, the chief characteristics of American homes is the revival of the Italian and the English styles.

Atlanta is the possessor of a number of true English types that are unsurpassed in this country. No better example of the commingling of the best points of English architecture can be found than the home of Edward Inman, on Fifteenth street, in Ansley Park.

The Entrance Hall

This part of Mr. Inman's home is a most attractive room in early English style. The trim is oak finished in dull rich brown. The color scheme is in blues and greens. The walls are done in a rich old blue, with a slight decoration of old gold. The hangings are of a rich old blue brocaded silk. The floor coverings are Austrian hand-tufted rugs in special design and coloring, which carry the same color tones as the walls and hangings. The carved oak furniture is rich in detail and the effectiveness of color is obtained by the covering used.

The Dining Room

Here we have a splendidly balanced room, rich in color and delightful. Wainscoted in paneled oak to a height of five feet, with upper walls in a fine old Flemish designed tapestry. A beamed ceiling with attractive indirect lighting arranged where the light glows softly through amber glass. The richly carved oak furniture finished to match the soft brown of the oak trim. A soft rug, with a border recalling the tapestry colors of the walls. Brown Tennessee marble set in a very attractive and well-designed mantel. All goes to make up a rich and beautiful room in every detail.

The Sun Parlor

"The wind blew wide the casement and within—
It was the loveliest picture.

What could be more pleasing than this sun parlor, a living room in the true sense! The walls in bluff colored brick with a clever detail of lattice in verde green. The floor of Cuban tile in soft tan and brown, and covered with a hand-tufted shaped rug of special design. The perfect lighting of this room is a special feature, being an indirect glow of light through bowls of Italian alabaster. The hangings of Chinese Chippendale design, with large flowers, birds and leaves printed on a black ground lend much character to the color scheme and beauty of the room. The soft trickle of the fountain on the one side of the room and the large commodious fireplace opposite are attractive features. The Pompeiian furniture finished in the dull old green, with cane and overstuffed pieces, gives the room style and comfort. This is one of the first rooms in Atlanta where the very popular black ground scheme has been employed. The rug has for a border a black background with leaves and stems in colors taken from the hangings. The old Chinese vases on the mantelshelf in black and green are a pleasing color effect. The special feature of this room is the sunken boxes for palms and flowers which run across the entire side, with the fountain in the center. Such rooms "as charming in winter as in summer," are being given much thought and study by architects and decorators.

ENGLISH architecture began with the feudal castle, which stood upon a hill, or with the fortified house in a hollow surrounded by its moat, and by the strong wall which enclosed the principal house and the domestic buildings. But after a time, the classic spirit manifested itself and led to the great English houses of the late Tudor and Stuart times.

This classicism has manifested in many beautiful types. It has given rise to such form of graceful embellishment as panelling and plasterwork. It sometimes tends to large forms of construction, in which one wing of a house may be constrained for symmetry's sake to correspond to another, in which the chimney stacks often are hidden away behind balustrades and parapets. Sometimes it has led to such adornments of the interior as walls painted to represent a landscape, with trees and a lake, with an archway through which may be seen a mountain picture with a castle and a river and with a fireplace in the form of a grotto.

English Home

It is said of English architecture: "That it has undergone no revolution, but only gradual progress from rudeness to finished work, only the silent change, scarcely perceivable, of style and methods, bringing new adaptations, the expression of slowly developing tendencies in social life, the effect of the greater security which came with later times and the introduction of the larger comforts which became available through wider opportunities and the growing wealth of the country.

"The hall of the Tudor or Stuart gentleman is no more than the later form of the great hall of the Norman baron, wherein he sat at table with his family and guests in patriarchal relation to his retainers and serving men. The long galleries and drawing rooms of the succeeding spacious times were the outward expression of the increasing refinement of the people.

"In the times shortly after the Conquest, the hall was the great feature of the house and continued to be the principal apartment from those days to Stuart times. In the twelfth and thirteenth centuries the host received his visitors there, and their meals were eaten in common, the guests sitting above the salt and the meaner people below.

"But changes soon set in and continued rapidly. "In English Homes," a description of historical English dwellings, it is told how a house at Toddington, in the reign of Henry III, had its hall, chapel, bed-chambers and other buildings covered with lead, and how everyone wondered at this innovation.

Quadrangler House

"But up to the sixteenth century, the common plan of manorial houses continued to be quadrangular. The hall was on one side, the entrance gateway was opposite, and the domestic buildings and sometimes the stable completed the enclosure.

"In the sixteenth century, however, there was a tendency to abandon the quadrangular plan. Often the enclosure was completed by a handsome balustrade. Greater attention was devoted to the convenience of the corridors and the galleries which gave admission to the rooms. The idea of the hall as a common living room passed away, and it was used chiefly for Christmas revels and great entertainments. The household retired to private rooms, often upon the upper floor, and gave their entertainments in the long galleries. About this time, or a little later, great skill was shown by the worker in wood and plaster. The craftsman also gave much attention to the mantelpiece, both in designing and executing it. Next came the great staircase, enriched by balustrades, curious lamps upon newel posts, or by heraldic beats or human figures.

"Improvements followed, one upon another, great architects added bit by bit to the magnificence of the great English homes, then simplicity and comfort began to have their effect upon architectural styles until we find the English homes as they are today—such homes as that of Mr. Inman."

Americans Are Best Looking

BY BILLIE BURKE.

THE SAVOY, LONDON, Eng.—Of course, they are not! !

English women are not as good looking as American women, for they lack animation and, besides, most of them, being more or less loyal subjects to Queen Mary, feel that they must follow her mode of dressing—and this style is of the vintage of her illustrious grandmother-in-law, Queen Victoria.

There is a tradition that English women always have the finest complexions in the world, and so they have up to the age of forty; after that most of them have too much color. They grow red and mottled or yellow and parchment-like.

The young English girl of a good family shows breeding always, and the damp air keeps her skin beautiful. She is not afraid of rain or mist and she walks from five to twenty miles every day, rides and practically lives outdoors. She looks healthy and usually has red cheeks and white skin. Besides this, she has always with her a splendid skin beautifier and that is a most equable temper and a splendid poise.

You did not know that would affect your skin?

Almost the first thing an English girl is taught is repression. I have often been called cold and lifeless by my girl admirers in America simply because my education in England was begun with repression, carried on with repression and ended when I went on the stage with repression.

An English woman of birth considers it bad taste to show her feelings. The "Lady Clara Vere de Vere" type is what every English girl strives for as much now as when Tennyson's "country clod" told her "where she got off," to drop from poetry into the vernacular.

And when one must do one's hair in the bath bun style and wear hats perched on top of it because Queen Mary wears her hair that way and makes her own hats after some forgotten Victoria formula it is no wonder that the Englishman with an eye for beauty goes over to America and picks up our fairest.

If the English girl would leave off about half her hair and comb it flat to her head as the average American girl nowadays does and wear her hats on her head instead of perched on top of her funny pompadour, she would look much prettier and much more stylish.

Here is the difference between English and American girls—American girls have a subtle fascination about them even when they are not beautiful. They always look "smart," but not always well bred. English girls have splendidly wholesome complexions, but they never wear their clothes well, never look "smart." They always have an air of being "to the manor born," however.

PICTORIAL REVIEW

THE soldier who is aiming at Harry Welchonce's kneecap is one of the regulars of the 17th infantry, and the three who are taking a pot shot from the grass are also members of the 17th. It is the theory of the war department that drilling and dress parades aren't all that a soldier needs to inform himself of the proper procedure in war. So, mebers of 17th have of late been engaged in mimic warfare.

AT the top of the page are athletes in the Olympic games which wehe held on July 4 at Piedmont park. It was surprising what strength and dexterity of muscle was shown at this athletic contest. The result of the games went to prove that excellent athletes are being developed in Atlanta. Much attention is given here to atheletics, and many are attaining, not only robust health but also unusual skill in athletic games. This skill holds true in gymnastics, in tennis, in water sports. At the games at Piedmont Park, the Atlanta Athletic club was well represented, so was the Y. M. C. A. and other organizations which give attention to athletics.

The group of six are members of the 1908 class of the University of eGorgia, which held its quintennial reunion at the commencement exercises of the university. The are, reading from left to right:

Prof. W. T. Turk, of Athens; George M. Battey, Jr., of Atlanta; Eugene M. Ransom, of Columbus; Frank H. Martin, of Atlanta; Sidney O. Smith, of Gainesville; and Sanders Jones, of Atlanta. Mr. Jones, formerly secretary and treasurer of the class, was elected President, succeeding John A. Davison, of Comer, and Mr. Battey was elected secretary and treasurer to succeed Mr. Jones. The picture was taken in front of the eGorgian hotel, where '08 established headquarters.

The batter is Henry Welchonce, center fielder of the Atlanta club, and the originator of the "phychological moment." Other ball players and pursuers of other pastimes have proved themselves equal to emergencies. But Harry Welchonce surpasses all others in grappling with the "psychological moment." Suppose the bases are full, and the umpire has given the other team two more than Atlanta's finest have earned by skill and valor. What would you say that Harry would do? Why of course he would hit a three-bagger and win the game. Maybe he would knock a home run, and add one more than the needed tally, just to make the score safe and certain. He finds that he never hits the ball so soundly, so completely on the nose as when the moment is crucial, and the fans are on top-toe. Then, he steps up to the plate, as cool as cucumber just office, and hits the ball so had you might think that he had a grudge against it.

THE very much battered and abused safe is the one which was cracked recently at Kirkwood. But the yeggman chose unwisely, for his effort brought no results except capture by the police. Post-office inspectors say that the business of cracking safes is becoming a lost art. Safes still fall in the way of mischance, but the yeggman of this day are bunglers, they are no longer artists. Old Bill Miner, who is serving 20 years at the state farm, says the same thing of highwaymen. Altogther it seems that burglary, from an artistic viewpoint,, is decadent.

But swimming at Piedmont park is an art that is waxing instead of waning. Here you see one of the hundred or so [illegible] who go swimming there daily. It is a matter of wonder now how Atlanta ever got along at all without the lake at Piedmont. Not such a great while ago, there was no public place whatever for bathing. Now, the lake at Piedmont is the most popular means of amusement that the city has to offer. The young and the old, lads and lassies, all go swimming there, and find pleasure and health from a plunge in the cool waters of the lake.

This view from the north walk shows the magnificent proportions of the building with its ivy garlanded dome. The groups of happy girls are suggestive of the varied forms of amusement and recreation enjoyed at Cox College. Tennis, outdoor basketball, motoring are all popular and health giving forms of exercise.

Rev. C. W. Bryan, D. D., of China, who visited Cox College last fall and lectured to the young ladies, said: Of the 17 colleges I have visited, I consider Cox College with its ideal location, beautiful campus, splendid buildings and equipment, to be the best.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

WHEN the kindergarten bill providing for the establishment of free kindergartens in the state, comes up for its third reading in the house of representatives, the women of the city who have been specially interested in securing the passage of the bill, will endeavor to have the galleries filled.

The bill has already been reported favorably by the senate committee, and will come up in the house this week.

Those interested in the educational progress of the state are particularly anxious to see it passed, and inasmuch as the bill asks for no appropriation, there is no legitimate reason why it should not be passed.

The best read and most thoroughly informed members of the legislature are in favor of the bill, and doubtless they will be in the majority when the vote is taken.

MRS. William Lawson Peel will preside at the suffrage meeting which will be held Tuesday evening at Taft hall. Mrs. Peel is keenly interested in the subject and expresses herself as having as yet formed no opinion on either side. She is studying suffrage from all viewpoints and, being in charge of the forthcoming meeting, invites a discussion of suffrage by any who may care to give their views.

Equal suffrage, whether one is for or against it, is an inevitable outcome of the interest the modern woman has shown in civic affairs and the development of the gifts she exercises outside of her home life and the domestic duties which, at one time, gave her her only opportunity for exhibiting any of the talents which today make her able to compete with man on his own ground.

American women will never be forced like the English woman to become militant for she won her spurs in pioneer days and the American man believes not only in her ability, but in her judgment and courage as well.

The American man wants only the best for his womankind and if he sees that suffrage is a good thing he will hand it to her as a gracious gift and not reluctantly as the spoils of war. In case he takes too long to see, she will find the ways and means of showing him how to see.

Doctor's Boyish Face Reveals Skin Renewer

I heard the other day the story of the physician with so admirable a skin that all his women patients asked the secret. He told one, who generously told others, that knowing the remarkable absorbent property of ordinary mercolized wax, he concluded this substance would make an excellent complexion renewer and preserver. Knowing the wax could not harm his skin, he began using it after shaving. He soon observed that the old, withered, colorless cuticle was being gradually absorbed and replaced by younger, healthier skin. This was the simple secret of the silver-haired doctor with the boyish face.

The secret became public property. Now women everywhere use mercolized wax, applying it nights like cold cream, washing it off mornings—continuing until the complexion is entirely renewed. An ounce of this wax, procurable at any druggist's, will banish the worst complexion.

Another valuable rejuvenator used by this doctor was a wrinkle-remover and preventive in the form of a face bath, made by dissolving an ounce of saxolite in a half-pint witch hazel. This also has become famous.—Aurelia in Fashion Review.—(Advt.)

The Embarrassment of Ignorance

"I have one of chiffon-cloth," said one woman.

"Mine is point d'esprit, I think it is so much daintier," said another.

"Mine has the cutest little rosebuds on it," said a third. And so the stream of comments ran on.

Finally a new voice joined in with the question, "What are you all talking about? What IS a camesole?"

Every face was turned toward the questioner. The gentle stream changed to a torrent of inquiries.

"Don't you know? Where have you been? Where are your eyes? Haven't you read THE JOURNAL?" etc.

There is nothing so embarrassing to a woman as finding herself ignorant of some new thing that her friends are not only discussing but wearing. If this woman had read the advertisements of THE JOURNAL regularly she could never have overlooked the existence of camesoles.

Do you know what camesoles are? If you don't you may find yourself in her position at any moment. Better begin now to read THE JOURNAL advertising columns closely, so that you won't be caught in a similar predicament on that or any other subject of apparel.

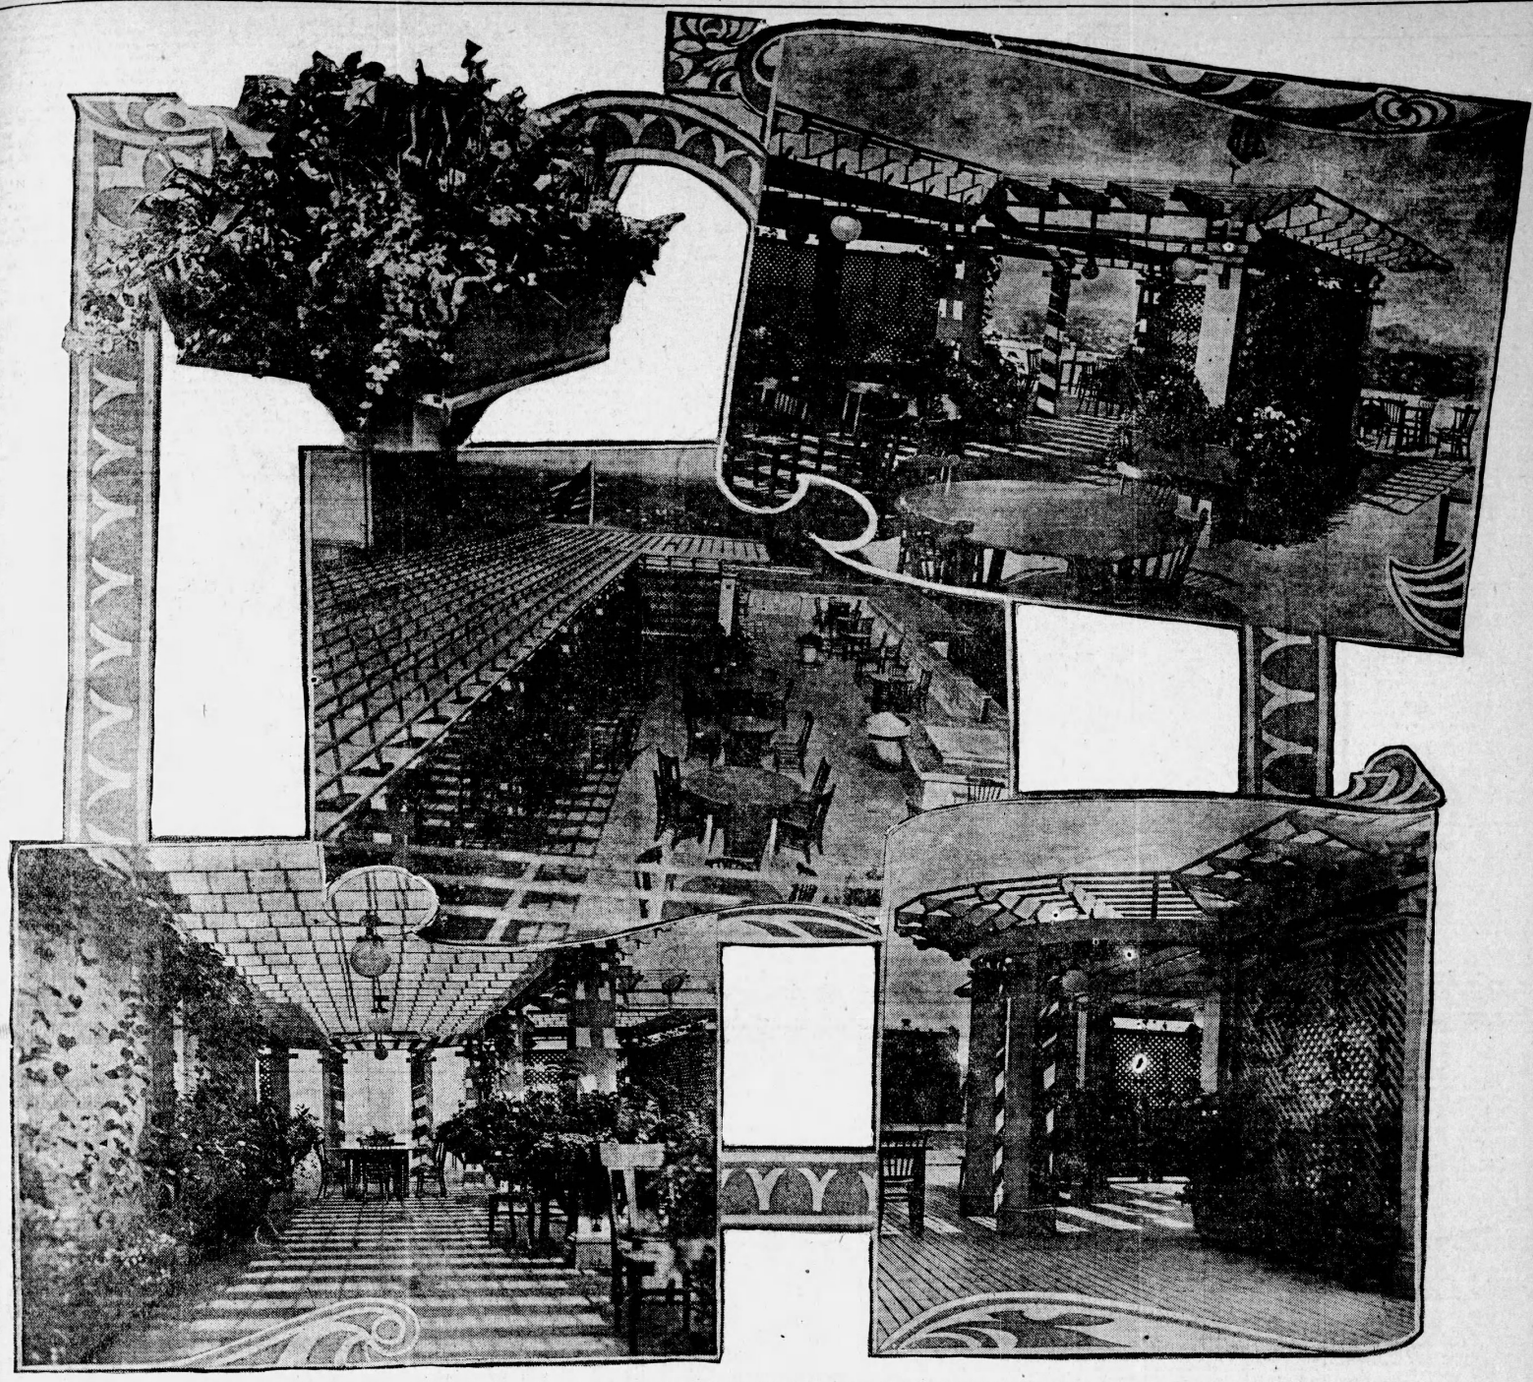
THE COOLEST SPOT IN TOWN, WHERE BREEZES ALWAYS BLOW



PICTURES BY WINN SHOWING CORNERS OF CAPITAL CITY CLUB ROOF GARDEN.

The roof garden of the Capital City club is the coolest spot in town, and every evening there are congenial parties stopping at the club for a refreshing drink at one of the small tables of the garden, which is fanned by breezes which come from the fringe of hills which show beyond the tree tops of Atlanta's horizon. Just now there is a glorious summer moon to add to the beauty of the flower-bright roof and a summer sky of stars duplicated by the many lighted windows of the big office buildings which show toward the south of the club.

THE WEEK IN RETROSPECT

THE hot weather for the past week has made the small informal affairs at one or the other country clubs, the only possible form of entertaining with the exception of the swimming parties in the private pools of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Brandon and Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Adair. The beautiful moonlight nights have made the evening swimming parties particularly enjoyable, jolly parties meeting at the East Lake Country club and the Capital City Country club for a cooling dip followed by an informal little supper afterward.

Among the younger set congenial parties have been entertained at the summer home of Mr. R. W. Tidwell, his grandsons, Mr. Howard McCall, Jr., and Mr. Reuben Tidwell, entertaining at a series of swimming parties through the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Adair will give a swimming party Tuesday of this week, the lovely pool at the rear of their home in Druid Hills, being an ideal place for a dance, enclosed by a columned pavilion, fitted with dressing rooms for the bathers.

SIX o'clock usually finds the terrace at the Driving club filled with gay groups chatting over refreshing drinks at the small tables, the more energetic having the tables for an occasional dance in the big, cool ball room.

Friday afternoon Mrs. W. W. Gray and Mrs. Dozier Pou were the out-of-town guests in a congenial little party, including among others, Mrs. Hunt Chipley, Mrs. Alex W. Smith, Mrs. Walter Howard, Mrs. Don A. Pardee, Mrs. Frank Callaway, Mrs. Robert Alston, Mrs. Reid Hobson and Mrs. Samuel Weyman.

THE week has seen the departure of a number of well known people whose absence will further deplete the ranks of the stay-at-homes. Among those who have left are Mr. and Mrs. Roby Robinson and family, who will spend the rest of the summer at their place at Sharbot Lake.

Toxaway is daily claiming its share of Atlanta visitors, among those leaving this evening to be Mr. and Mrs. Milton Dargan, Miss Helen Dargan, Miss Ada Alexander, Miss Eula Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sciple and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Alston.

The presence of Mrs. Hugh Foreman and Mr. Foreman at Toxaway is welcomed by their friends here. As Miss Josie Stockdell, Mrs. Foreman was one of the most popular young women of Atlanta and she is equally charming and attractive as a young matron.

Mrs. Edward Peters and Mrs. Leverette Walker will leave the first of August to join the Atlanta colony at Toxaway.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant and family, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Paine and little Miss Douglas Gay Paine and Mr. and Mrs. Doughty Manley and family will leave this week for Greenbrier White Sulphur Springs, Atlanta always being delightfully represented at that famous old resort.

Wrightsville Beach has drawn a large number from the city, among the young matrons who have taken part in the seawater pleasures for the past week including Mrs. J. Frank Meador, Mrs. John H. Kiser, Mrs. Harry Stearns and a group of the younger set, Miss Margaret Northen having been a popular girl there for the past two weeks.

Miss Mildred Harman and Miss Dorothy Harman, leaving this week with their mother, Mrs. Harry Harman, will be attractive acquisitions to the unmarried set at Tate, both young women being fond of the outdoor sports, which add to the pleasure of those at Tate.

MRS. SAMUEL DICK, who was formerly Miss Ruth Tribble, one of the prettiest girls of Georgia and a belle during the past season in Washington, where Congressman and Mrs. Tribble spent the winter, was the honor guest at a lovely tea which was one of the largest events of the week, Miss Jennie D. Harris being the hostess of the occasion.

Mrs. Tribble spent the week with her daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Dick being one of the several young couples who have apartments at the Sumner.

THE Thursday evening dinner dance at the Country club was a delightful event, the moonlit evening and dinner on the broad porch overlooking the lake coming as a refreshing contrast to the hot day.

A number of parties were entertained, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell entertaining the country colony, the guests being seated at a large table beautifully decorated with crimson and rose pink gladioli.

Miss Anna Montgomery, mistress of one of the handsome homes which have made Augusta typical of the old south, was the honor guest in a party at which Mr. and Mrs. John S. Cohen entertained.

Miss Montgomery is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Clarke, and has been delightfull entertained during the past week, Mr. and Mrs. Lowry Arnold entertaining for her at dinner at their home at East Lake Wednesday evening.

Miss Warfield's Swimming Party

PROMINENT ATLANTIAN TO DISCUSS EQUAL SUFFRAGE

"To Vote or Not to Vote."

To say that the announcement of this meeting has attracted attention throughout, not only the city and state, but far beyond its limits would hardly give an idea of the interest expressed," said Mrs. Peel.

"From all around I have received letters, cards and circulars, either congratulating me on being a suffragist or imploring me to stand fast by the old south and its traditions, most of these communications unsigned. Now, if our anonymous friends will come forward Tuesday night and express their sentiment in person they will have more weight. I can hardly conceive of any one who is afraid or ashamed to admit having an opinion either one way or the other on a subject how conceded to be one of the leading questions of the hour. Many, of course, have not given it much thought and are not sufficiently informed to have an opinion. I myself am of this class, and have formed no opinion, which is the reason that I was invited to preside. I am entirely unbiased and open to conviction, but I do think that the issue is one of commonsense and not sentiment either way. And I am sure that this will prevail as the men seem vastly more interested in the subject than the women. The public is cordially invited and any one who wishes to speak will be heard, there being no set program. Some of the most noted speakers in Georgia have announced their intention to take part."

On account of the crowd expected a nominal admission of 25 cents will be charged, as the capacity of the hall is limited.

HAPPENINGS IN LONDONTOWN

BY THE COUNTESS OF BLANKSHIRE.

LONDON, July 19.—King George announced on the occasion of his visit to Eton that he and Queen Mary intended that Prince Henry should shortly become an Etonian, and, in fact, that he was to enter on his educational career at that institution in the early autumn. The king's words were: "We place so great confidence in the excellence of your school life and training that we intend to send our third son, Henry, this year to be one of your number, and thus to strengthen the bonds which have lasted so long between the throne and the college." Great enthusiasm marked the visit of their majesties, who were accompanied by Princess Mary. The queen and the princess subtly complimented the college by wearing gowns of the Eton blue. His majesty entered the college, and was much impressed by all he saw and by the welcome of the boys.

His royal highness has been in camp with the Oxford section of the officers' training corps, and during the next fortnight will encamp beside the Basingstoke canal at Frimley. The prince is in the ranks of the infantry, and is having experience of a series of marches that involve billeting at Bradfield and at Strathfield Mortimer. The prince, with his companions, has been "roughing" it, and his royal highness has had the experience of being a prisoner of war, although his detention only lasted a matter of three minutes. During the fighting with the Bradfield college section the prince and a comrade were cut off from their companions, and, being captured, were about to give up their ammunition when rescued by a company of the Oxford section, who put their captors to ignominious flight.

The prince of Wales was present at the annual searchlight entertainment given in aid of various charities by the military authorities. Lieutenant General Sir Douglas Haig, who with Lady Haig was present with other officers of the command, had thrown open the grounds of Government house, his official residence, and in an area of green sward, surrounded by dark fir trees, the massed bands paraded. There was a large general company present, and they had the added pleasure of seeing the army airship "Beta" hovering high in the heavens for upwards of an hour. Amongst other things the band played "God Bless the Prince of Wales," prior to "lights out" by the buglers and the playing of the national anthem.

There is a unique series of banquets and farewell entertainments being held at Simla, where all classes of Indians are combining to show their devotion to the sovereign and loyalty to the empire by doing honor to the retiring finance minister, Sir Guy Fleetwood Wilson. Sir Guy has proved the right man in the right place, and the regret at his retirement is universal. In a telling speech which he made at a banquet held under the presidency of the rajah, Sir Harman Singh, Sir Guy dwelt on the reforms of 1909, and complimented the work of the new council. He stated that he had always recognized the honest desire of all Indians to aid and share in the government and development of the county.

The fiancee of King Manuel, Princess Augustine Victoria, of Hohenzollern, has arrived in London, accompanied by her father, the prince of Hohenzollern, and has now been presented to her future mother-in-law, Queen Amelie. There will be much entertaining in honor of the visit, and it is anticipated that the royal ladies will be engaged in some shopping expeditions in view of the forthcoming wedding, details of which are announced.

On two mornings since the court has been at Windsor his majesty has been accompanied in his morning ride in Windsor Great park by the Princess Mary, who is well known as an intrepid horsewoman. She sits her mount magnificently, and the king himself invariably passes judgment on the horses provided for her royal highness. This morning ride is one of his majesty's greatest pleasures, and not less so to Princess Mary, who meets the king from Frogmore, where the royal children are now staying. The royal riders usually return to the castle about 10 o'clock, and although they have been caught in a shower of rain on more than one occasion, this has in no way curtailed the canter.

With the advent of drapery, the knell would appear to have sounded for the short and comfort-bringing skirt. At least many dresses had trains, and these were allowed to trail in graceful indulation by the wearer as she crossed the lawns. Some were broad and fell trim the waist, whilst others were flat-tail, and came beneath the panniers, which fell below the knee. Shoes, for the most part, were black suede, and were worn with colored stockings, whilst some women chose shoes which matched in shade that of their gown, or repeated the tone of the bayadere sash which swathed the hips. Fans were carried by a number of ladies, and these were prettily jewelled; their dainty fluttering caused a pleasant stir in the heat-laden air. Altogether, for successful frocks, this has been an Ascot without precedent, and the toilettes worn demonstrated to the full that the English woman has learned to dress.

The ceremony which takes place at Westminster abbey on the 22d of this month will be the first installation of the Order of the Bath since 1815, and much interest is being felt in the revival by his majesty. The ceremonial is on the same plan as that of constituting chapels for the various orders of knighthood, such as the chapel of the Order of St. Michael and St. George in St. Paul's cathedral and the Order of the Thistle in St. Giles' cathedral, Edinburgh. Henry VII.'s chapel will again be used for the ceremonial, and the old banners, which had been removed from the chapel, will be replaced where possible as the descendants of those to whom they belonged have been notified where known to the authorities.

Lady Cheylesmore has recently left London, with her two sons, the Hon. Francis and the Hon. Herbert Eaton, on a visit to America. Lord Cheylesmore, who has been unable to accompany his wife on account of his numerous engagements, is known as "the shooting man's friend," and is chairman of the National Rifle association. He is also president of the Four-in-Hand club, which held its opening meet of the season in Hyde Park recently. There is a curious and amusing weekly custom in the Cheylesmore family, which is said still to be observed every Sunday. When Lord Cheylesmore was a little boy he had a very serious illness, which was likely to prove fatal at any moment. After eating nothing for some days the little patient asked for some jam pudding. Thinking that it was the last request he would ever make, it was decided to give him some, and, much to everyone's surprise and delight, the future Lord Cheylesmore began to get better from that hour. Jam pudding became an institution in the family, and is served regularly every Sunday.

There is absolutely no truth in the rumor that Princess Mary is to marry her cousin, the hereditary grand duke of Mecklenberg-Strelitz on attaining her majority.

It is stated in well-informed English circles that the disease from which the heir to the Russian throne is suffering is tuberculosis of the left hip bone.

The absence of all the most prominent American-born society ladies from a recent ball has created quite a sensation. Speculation is rife as to why the lady who gave the ball is so bitterly antagonistic to the Anglo-American set.

Every lady who spends the Summer at the seashore, in the mountains or at some fashionable watering place, should take with her a few bottles of

to improve and beautify her complexion and protect her skin from the burning sun, bleaching winds, and damp night air.

The surest guarantee of its perfection is the fact of its having been in actual use for nearly three-quarters of a century.

Constipation and Heat Often Fatal

Regularity of Bowels Very Important to Health at This Time.

At no time of the year should people be more careful of the condition of their bowels than in hot weather. Many things may cause constipation in summer, but whatever it may be the trouble should be promptly remedied. A constipated person lays himself or herself open to serious and often fatal diseases. That feeling of congestion, lassitude or dull headache is the first warning of trouble.

Don't try to remedy it by the excessive eating of fruit, which usually has a laxative effect but lacks action in extreme cases. What is needed is a reliable but mild laxative-tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Take a dose of it at night before retiring—it is a pleasant-tasting and free from griping—and by morning your bowels will be emptied and your head clear. You will feel energetic again.

You cannot obtain such results with cathartics, purgatives, salts or pills, as, unlike Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, they are without tonic value and entirely too harsh. Among the thousands of dependable converts to Syrup Pepsin are the families of Mr. F. C. Harris, Live Oak, Fla., who now finds his stomach better than it has been in ten years; and Mrs. T. D. Diemer, 835 San Pedro St., Trinidad, Colo., who is cured of various digestive troubles after all doctors that she knew had failed. A bottle can be obtained of any druggist at fifty cents or one dollar, the latter size being for family use. Results as claimed are guaranteed or your money will be refunded. This grand remedy is the safeguard of health in thousands of good American families.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it, postpaid, by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 418 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

THE INSPIRATION OF THE PEERLESS

IN a multitude of cars you can distinguish the Peerless by its incomparable beauty. You don't have to look at the hub, or the radiator, or any individual part for the identification. The entire car, whether standing at the curb, or moving slowly through a maze of traffic, or released on a smile road in the majesty of controllable power, is the embodiment of smallness. And no one can ride in a Peerless without catching the inspiration that arises from its dignity, from its perfect fitness as a machine, from its expression of finality in the building of a motor car.

PEERLESS NEW MODELS

Three sizes: "38-Six," "48-Six," "60-Six." Electric starting and lighting; irreversible steering; heat treated steels; seven body types; prices $4300 to $7200.

Marathon For Race Lovers; Run 26 Miles

There Will Be Ten Riders on Track at Same Time-Supplies of Gas and Oil to Be Taken in at the Track

With ten riders on the track at the same time and the finishing mark 26 miles away there is bound to be some pretty racing at the Atlanta motordrome on Tuesday evening. This means 105 times around the quarter mile saucer and is the most daring and longest race yet held here.

The fans have been clamoring for longer races and now that Manager Hudson has decided to stage a real big event the crowd will probably be on hand in large numbers. It is the thrilling long races the crowd appreciates and the big marathon on Tuesday evening is just about as thrilling as any could be.

In all the fast racing on the local track not one spill has occurred. This has been made possible by the short races that have been fought out and few riders on the track at the same time. On Tuesday night, however, it may be different. There will be ten riders on the track and the race will go 105 times around the track. This makes the setting ideal for many close calls. All riders here are experts at handling wheels and for this reason have consented to the marathon.

The riding of a long marathon such as is one to be staged Tuesday calls for a bunch of work. None of the wheels can go the full 105 laps without adding of gasoline and probably a change of tires. The strain on the machines is very great and after the first eight or ten miles there will be many changes, all of the racers being forced to stop at the pits for gasoline or oil.

Besides the big marathon feature the card for Tuesday calls for a match race between Harry Glenn, the local boy and Harry Swartz, the Denver driver. Glenn has been at the game but a very short time but has gained a good knowledge of it and now is riding as well as many of the others at the track. Swartz is two laps behind in the one mile heats. Also good. This race will be the best.

Not a bit discouraged at Jock McNeil's failure to lower the one mile record recently established by Morty Graves it has been decided by Tex Richards that he will go after the honor. He now has his machine running smoothly and believes that he can go out and take the honors away from Graves.

DOUBLE BILL WITH FRANK

NEW ORLEANS, La., July 19.—In an effort to take both ends of Sunday's double bill and make his stay in this city profitable Manager Smith will work Gilbert Price and George Clarke in the double header with Cholly Frank's men on Sunday. It is possible, however, that Price will work the first game and if he wins will be sent back in the second in an effort to turn the "iron man" stunt.

Flois Wilson, who hurled the first game against the Crackers and Brenton will work for the Frank tribe, Hagerman and Chapman will doubtless do the catching.

To date the series between the Pels and Crackers stands two wins for the Crackers and just one for New Orleans, an even break in the hostilities Sunday will give the Atlanta team the edge while a double win will make it decidedly one sided. Atlanta is going mighty strong and with a crippled team here it is possible that a double win will come to the visiting bunch.

Jack O'Brien Loses To Freddie Welsh

VANCOUVER, B. C., July 19.—Young Philadelphia Jack O'Brien fought fifteen rounds today against Freddie Welsh, the British lightweight champion and failed to lower his colors. Welsh was given the decision by Referee James Hewitt.

O'Brien showed all the speed and elusiveness claimed for him but only in flashes. Most of the time he was too busy handling on in clinches to escape the fighting of the champion. There was little long range boxing.

When they did stand off, O'Brien more than held his own and in the tenth round he clearly outfought Welsh. From that time however, Welsh established a clear lead.

Crackers Cop Second Battle

NEW ORLEANS, La., July 19.—The Atlanta club continues to do its hard hitting at critical moments, all of which went a long way todard winning the second straight game from the New Orleans outfit here Saturday. The score was 6-2 and Carl Thompson gets credit for his fourth successive win since becoming a Cracker.

Brenton essayed to do the flinging for the New Orleans bunch and while he was hit a bit often and timely he was poorly supported by the crippled Pelican squad and this served to disheartenn him.

Joe Agler, Bisland, Alperman, Long and Bailey did the main hitting for the Atlanta crew, while Hendryx, Kraft and Williams did best for the Pelicans. Errors at critical moments were charged to Jud Daley and Tim Hendryx. Both paved the way for runs.

New Orleans was never ahead and did not have a look-in for the battle. Atlanta started off by getting a couple of runs in the opening inning and after that added one each in the second, third, sixth and eighth. The Pels tallied in the second and fifth.

Carl Thompson was hit rather often, but he kept the bingles well scattered and they did not count for runs. He was also given excellent support by his team mates.

In the eighth round Bagby and Hendryx collided in chasing a short drive to center with the result that Bagby broke his arm and will be out of the game for some weeks. Bagby was only recently secured in a trade with Montgomery. His loss is another severe setback to the Peds.

Record of Gil Price

Gilbert Price has proven a real workhorse all season. He goes in the box at any time, always being willing to help out a pitcher who is in trouble.

This season Price has worked in 26 games, which includes 173 2-3 innings and in that number of rounds he has given up 152 hits, 71 runs and issued 53 baters. He has hit 8 batsmen and walked 85.

In all his games he has won 12 and lost 5 and all the way round is quite a handy man. He is yet in the race for pitching honors.

BUCKER'S ARM BAD; IS OUT OF GAME

NEW YORK, July 19.—A slight touch of neuritis has affected the pitching arm of Nap Rucker, Brooklyn's left-hander, and it may be several days before he is fit again.

Attention was first called to his ailment by the fact that in several recent games Rucker was forced to leave the box after swirling a few innings.

Always Willing to Do His Work — Gilbert Price — May Make Record for Games Hurled

Some ball players work because they are driven to it, they are in the game from day to day only when the manager is right back of them, but Gilbert Price, the Crackers' southpaw flinger, goes to the mound and works most any old time just because he likes it. Or you might strain a point and say that he "loves it," all of which is grammatically wrong and yet eminently right when referring to Price.

Often a pitcher will have his hobby of working every fourth or third day and it is with effort that you get them to jump in and work out of turn, but with Price it is different. He is the kind who wishes to work at just any time you will let him. He is always willing and often is kept off the rubber against his own judgment. Whenever he fels right he wishes to go in and pitch a game and he feels right just about every other day.

Whn the present season was started Price announced that he would pitch at least one game in every series played by the Atlanta club and he has just about lived up to or bettered this statement. Often he works in two games in one three-battle series, and when four games are played with a rival organization you are almost sure to se him in there working out a couple of battles. And when not on the slab Price is keen at coaching. He refuses to be idle and e bent him to the coaching lines you have to hurry.

To date this season Price has worked in a part of twenty-seven games, this being about twice as many as any other Cracker flinger has participated in. And he usually gets away with a good game. Gil is one of the swinging style of southpaws, his wide curve and speed serving to make it puzzling for any one who faces him.

CHANCE FOR RECORD.

With the Atlanta club going at its present neat clip Price stands a good chance of winning the diamond studded medal offered the leading pitcher of the league. He is just about tied with Coveleskie, Couzelman, E. Brown and the other flingers who are right in the thick of the battle and it will take a great reversal of form for him to be easily outdistanced.

It was while playing with the Nebraska Indians that Price learned the "Iron Man" game. The Indians are the kind who can go forever without tiring and Price soon became accustomed to their tactics and began pitching every other day and finally with good results. He nas also served in several minor leagues, including the O. & P. and the South Michigan, finally being picked up by Washington and turned over to Atlanta. Gil is but 24 years of age and began playing professional ball in 1907.

During the winter months Price is a piano mover. He claims a left-handed piano mover is one to be sought and for this reason makes quite a success of this trade in his home town—Canton, Ohio.

CHANCES FOR JUST A DAY

The fast slipping Gulls dropped another on Saturday and Atlanta's win brought her within one game of second place. Montgomery won, keeping her two-game lead.

Mobile split a double bill with Birmingham, Atlanta won and Montgomery won, thus the first division clubs of the Southern league did not alter their position much. Mobile and Atlanta drew a little closer together, while Atlanta pulled away from Birmingham a little.

Marquard pitched a six hit game against St. Louis, and the Giants won another. It took sixteen innings for the Phillies to get away with theirs, but they nnally copped the candy also. Chicago and Pittsburg both won, thus emaining tied for third place.

Western Team Best Golfers

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, July 19.—The Western Golf association team of four today easily won the Olympic cup, on the Homewood links, with play that made them favorites for the western amateur championship, which begins Monday. Warren K. Wood of the winning quartet, made the best score of 150 for the thirty-six holes. The Western team's score was 628. The intercollegiate team took second honors, with 659. The Trans-Mississippi team withdrew because of the indisposition of Lemist. The scores of the winning team follows:

Charles Evans, Jr., Edgewater, 76-78-154.

K. P. Edwards, Midlothian, 82-78-160.

Warren K. Wood. Homewood, 72-78-150.

W. I. Howland. Glenview, 80-84-164-628.

STARS OF ONE DAY

Johnston, of Cleveland, failed to connect in three trials.

Joe Jackson batted three times and did not hit.

Dode Paskert could only get one hit in five trials.

Yerkes was at bat eight times and only hit once.

Derrill Prott got one out of four.

Bob Byrne was up five times and hit safely once.

Jake Daubert failed to connect in four trials.

Smith was up four times and hit safely once.

Memphis Club Next Tackled

Crackers Move Over to Turtleville, Then Montgomery and Mobile

The double header in New Orleans closes the eFlican-Cracker series, after which the Crackers journey to Memphis for three games. After tackling Bernhaddt's crew the Crackers hit the two leading teams of the league.

Gil Price will work one of the games on Sunday afternoon and it is probable that the new recruit, Lefty Clark, will work another. The least the Crackers can expect is an even break, and should they hold the pace they have been hitting they should drub the cellerites twice.

After the Memphis series Atlanta takes Mabile and Montgomery for six games, fighting it out with these teams for the possession of first place. In these games the Crackers have a hard row to hoe and it is probable that they will come home with something less than an even break in the fifteen games played, but this is all that can be expected. Anyway, when they return, they will play the most of the remaining games on their home lot.

Barons Climb Is Main Event In Close Race

Looks as If Birmingham and Atlanta Will Be Right There at the Finish-Both Willing to Strengthen

The three leading clubbs in the fight for first place—Mobile Montgomery and Atlanta—have managed to hold their own during the week just passed and right now there is a difference of but 1 1-2 games between the Montgomery bunch in first place and Atlanta in third, Montgomery and Mobile have swapped positions but the margin is just 1-2 a game and makes practically no difference.

Decidedly the feature of the week's play has been the rapid rise of the Birmingham outfit. Molesworth has gotten his team to playing at its true clip and there is to be no keeping the club out of the final sprint. All along it has been predicted that the Baron bunch would be in the thick of the fight and by stterling work the past month this has been conclusively, the Barons having driven the Chattanooga Lookouts from the last position in the first division.

Practically all of the first division clubs save Birmingham have been playing a bit erratically the past few days and this has served to prevent one from gaining on the other. Right now the Atlanta and Birmingham teams are on an invasion of the southern end of the circuit and before the trips are concluded there is likely to be several most important changes. The two champions of the northern end of the circuit meet Montgomery and Mobile, the best in the southern end, and when the big series have been completed there is likely to be a big difference in the percentage figures.

BARON VS. CRACKERS

Right now it really looks as if Birmingham and Atlanta will be the two clubs to be right in the thickest of the fight during the last two or three weeks of the season. Both teams are admittedly very strong and will continue to strengthen just as fast as necessary. With the Montgomery and Mobile bunches it is different. Whenever this pair begin to slip it all off. The stockholders are not the kind who have loose purse strings, preferring to see the team drop down the ladder than to open up and patch up the weak spots by expending a small amount of cash for new players.

Right now the Atlanta and Birmingham clubs look to have just the strength needed for a gruelling race. These two cities are great rivals and when the baseball clubs get to mixing it in a close race enthusiasm will run high and there will be more real interest in the race than in many years.

As the race now stands Montgommery leads by a margin of 1-2 game over Mobile and in turn the Gulls are 1 game ahead of Atlanta. Birmingham has climbed so rapidly of late that the team is now but 3 games back of Atlanta with Chattanooga shoed to the leadership of the second division with a margin of 1 game behind Birmingham.

All the differences are so small that they are liable to cause a big shift with the result of games any one day. Atlanta stands a good chance to move up a bit bby winning the Sunday double bill!

Douglas Gets Game

DOUGLAS, Ga., July 19.—Douglas defeated East Point here Friday afternoon by a score of 3 to 1.

Batteries: Douglas, Thomas and Gray; East Point, Pickett and Wise.

Two Capable Assistants Named for Cunningham, Georgia-Auburn Battle Is Scheduled for Atlanta

Harold Ketron and Howell Peacock, star University of Georgia athletes of the past, have been named assistant football coaches for the 1913 Red and Black gridiron squad. These selections were made following the resignation of Charley Wahoo, who severed his connections with the Georgia bunch to enter business.

Coach Alex Cunningham, who since going to Athens has done so much towards building up a good ball club for the Georgians was a visitor to Atlanta Saturday and talked most encouragingly of the prospects for a good eleven in 1913. While he is not expecting a world beater he is confident he will have a good outfit and will be able to hold his own through the hard schedule that has been arranged.

"The Georgia club of 1913 has probably the hardest schedule attempted in many years," said the Red and Black pilot in speaking of his club. "Through October there are games with L. S. U., Alabama, and North Carolina, each of which will be a tough proposition. Then later in the season we have to play Virginia, Auburn and Tech, each of which is a tough battle.

"It has been definitely decided that the Georgia-Auburn game will be staged in Atlanta at Ponce de Leon park. This will be played the Saturday before Thanksgiving and owing to many football fans in this vicinity should prove a big drawing card. It was thought better to play the game here instead of Auburn, for which place it was originally scheduled."

Georgia loses just four players from last year's team. These are Lucas, Peacock, Bowden and Covington, but to take the places of these there will be several substitutes of the 1912 team as well as new material.

Harold Ketron is to be assistant to Coach Cunningham and will have charge of the linemen on the varsity squad. To Peacock will fall the task of training the freshman outfit. This is very important work and a good man has been picked up in the ex-captain. Freshman players recently trained make mighty good men the following season and the old statement that a good second string team makes a star first organization is just as true in football as other branches of sports.

ALMEIDA MAY BECOME VOL

"The deal for Almeida has not been closed as yet, but I expect everything to be settled within the next day or two," said President W. G. Hirsig, of the Nashville baseball club, this morning, when queried in regard to the proposed purchase of the fast Cuban infielder from the Cincinnati Reds. President Hirsig received a message from President Garry Hermann, of the Cincinnati Reds, last night to the effect that he had been offered $1,800 for Almeida. The local president wired Hermann that the Nashville management would give that sum for the infielder, and it was expected this morning that a message would be received from the Cincinnati president. Up to noon, however, nothing had been heard. President Hirsig will wire Hermann within the next few hours in regard to the proposed trade.

That Almeida is worth the neat sum of $1,800 is known all over the circuit. He is not only recognized as a good hitter and fielder, but as a drawing card as well. The Cuban has been burning up the National league by his fast fielding and good hitting and when he comes to the Southern league it is a safe bet that bugs around the circuit will be anxious to witness his pastiming. He is a sure .300 hitter and a great infielder, and it is believed now that the deal for him has been practically cinched.—Nashville Banner.

GRIFF SENDS HUNTER AHEAD FOR A REST

ST. LOUIS, July 19.—Manager Griffith, of the Washington Americans, sent his star pitchers, Jo Jnson and Boe Ing, to Chicago last night to rest up for the series with the White Sox, which opens Sunday.

Confident of overtaking Cleveland before the end of the season, Griffith says he was in the pennant race a an have strong pennant aspirations.

Mobile Splits With Barons; Worthy Homer

With Bags Filled, Schmidt Drove Ball Out for the Circuit—Barons Did Poor Work in the Second Game

MOBILE, Ala., July 19.—Mobile and Birmingham split even in a double-header today, the visitors taking the first, 5 to 3 and Mobile the second, 7 to 2. In the first game bunched hits on Campbell in two innings produced enough runs to win. In the second game, with the score a tie in the sixth inning, Robertson was purposely passed with two men already on base, Schmidt then drove a home run to left-center scoring three men ahead of him.

W. Robertson kept his hits well scattered, slow fielding giving the visitors both th ir runs. Gregory, who pitched his first full game for Birmingham showed up extremely well. Score:

Reid to Play Golfing Game On This Side

Newcoming Star In Golf World to Accompany Vardon and Ray to America to Seek the Big Honors

LONDON, July 19.—Following in the footsteps of Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, Wilfred E. Reid, of Banstead Downs, has decided to heed the call of the west and make a trip to America this year. There is a great deal to be said of his pluck, because there has been no mention of the name of Lord Northcliffe in connection with that of the other two. No doubt the patriotic sportsman considers that Reid has not yet arrived at a pinnacle of eminence in the golfing world that would justify him paying his expenses to America in the hope that he might be able to push the Union Jack on top of the Stars and Stripes.

Nevertheless Reid is going. He asks no one to pay his fare. Ray and Vardon will prove good traveling companions, he thinks, and it will be a splendid opportunity to see friends in America and incidentally to learn just what American championship conditions are like.

Reid has not as yet been able to win the big championship. Maybe he never will, but when he gets through with his American trip few of his competers of his age will have a great advantage over him in the matter of experience. Reid has made a point of playing in as many tournaments as possible, and he has done pretty well in various ways. He has represented England against Scotland in the International match at least five years and in these contests has a record tie like of which few can boast. He has never yet lost a match.

In the Midlands of England he has made many fine appearances in open competition. Once he won the Midlands championship and on another occasion he tied for it.

In tournaments he has also defeated such players as "Alex" Herd and Harry Vardon. In 1909 he was second for the Tooting Bec cup and second also for the Leeds cup. On another occasion he tied with Vardon for the Tooting Bec cup, but lost on a play off.

Reid has played in the French championship five times. His best performances in that even were fourth in 1906 and 1907, seventh in 1908 and fifth in 1909.

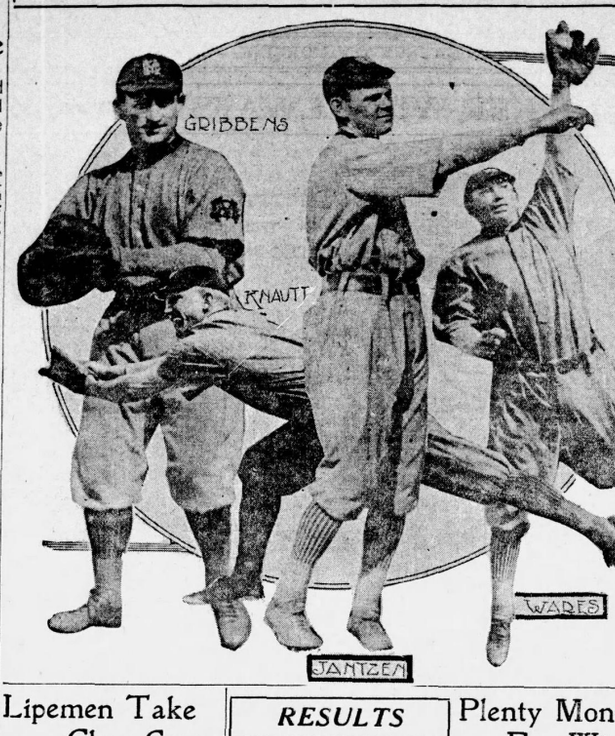
PUT MONTGOMERY IN RACE



Lipemen Take Close Game

CHARLESTON, S. C., July 19.—Robertson's pitching won the deciding game of the series with Savannah today, before large crowd, 2 to 1. A bonehealed play in the opening round gave the visitors their first run, while a double, a sacrifice and a single by Gebel scored the second tally. Robertson was wild in the ninth, and with two down, hit two players and walked as many forcing in the only Charleston run. A sensational shoestring catch of Bitting's pop fly back of second by Wadsworth saved the game for the Line men. Umpire Barr was hooted by the crowd for several decisions, and left the grounds under police protection. Score:

EVEN BREAK

CHICAGO, July 19.—A twelfth-inning rally enabled Philadelphia to divide today's double-header, taking the second game 3 to 1, while Chicago took the first 4 to 3. C. Brown, a local legian, hit hard in the opener, was taken out, but asked Mack for another opportunity to face the White Sox. His request was granted, and he retrieved himself by holding the locals to six hits in the 12 innings. Chappedde, Comiskey's high-priced fielder, upset Brown in the initial game, by cracking out a triple. Scores:

Welsh Is Winner

Plenty Money For Winners

PITTSBURG, July 19.—Get-away day for the Grand Circuit meet here today presented one of the most valuable cards ever presented on a Grand Circuit track. All the stake races were crowded by bad weather into today's program, the purses aggregating $19,000 to the winners.

The hottest contested race that horsemen have witnessed in some time was the Pennsylvania stake for 2:10 trotters which went to six heats and the money had to be divided because a decisive heat could not be run off before sundown, the Grand Circuit rule being that no heat may be run after sunset.

After the fourth heat only horses have a chance for three money were permitted to run. In heat after heat Tommy Horn would hold the challenge position until the stretch only to be nosed out.

TAKE MAYER FROM MOLEY

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July. 19.—A message received here Thursday from Chicago announces that Catcher Mayer, of the Barons, will figure in the purchase of Outfielder Chappelle, who is the White Sox in the neighborhood of $20,000.

The Chicago White Sox sent Mayer under an optional agreement last spring. Comiskey is understood to have asked the local club to deliver Mayer immedia ely, but Manager Molesworth declares that it is out of the question, he doesn't propose to cripple his team at this time.

Secretay Tyson admitted last night the Sox have a claim on Mayer but so far as Comiskey taking the backstop before the season closes, is impossible, unless a new trade is arranged, whereby the Birmingham club can get a man as good as Mayer.

Rained Out

COLUMBUS, Ga., July 19.—The game scheduled between the Columbus team and the Jacksonville Jays was butted into by J. Pluvius this afternoon, and so it had to be by the board.

This was the last of a three game series with the Jacksonville team.

Newnan Fans Treated Royally by Opelikans

NEWNAN, Ga., July 19.—About 100 of the local fans attended the game in Opelika Friday between Opelika and Newnan, and never were they treated with more hospitality than they were at that time. The Opelika people have always been kindly toward the Newnan fans, but never before has the royal treatment been shown open to the Newnan people, and about 1 o'clock one of the largest barbecues ever seen in that part of the state was given to the visiting fans. The choicest seats in the grandstand were reserved for Newnan fans, and after the game all the local fans were invited to the barbecue, which accomt rain. so nicely off from home as they had been in Opelika.

The Opelika team comes to Newnan Monday for a three-game series, and a big barbecue is being planned by Mr. Joe Stephens and several other local fans, also is to be held at Pearl Springs. Everybody in Opelika has been invited to attend this cue and the people here are going to try to show them a fine time.

Bremen Gets Away By a Circuit Hit

BREMEN, Ga., July 19.—One of the most interesting as well as spectacular games of baseball of the season was played here Friday afternoon, when the strongest team that Carrollton could produce crossed bats with the Bremen boys, and suffered as a consequence a "score defeat. The score stood 6 to 7 in the last half of the ninth inning in favor of the visitors, when R. Norton faced the pitcher and hammered one out center field, allowing F. Norton and C. Hood to slip over the home plate, thus concluding the game with two men on bases and only two out.

The score Bremen, 8; Carrollton, 7.

Batteries: Carrollton, Newton, Griffin and Perryman; Bremen, Sarmanville and Cheney. Umpire, F. Walker. Time, 2:30.

Nashville Never Had a Chance When Brown Hurled Three-Hit Ball—Two Vols Get to the Third Corner

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 18.—Too much Brown was the cause of Nashville's defeat by the locals in the game this afternoon. Brown allowed but three hits, only one of these being clean ones, and Nashville did not cross the rubber. Montgomery made three hits off Fleharty for a total of six hits. Brown, besides pitching brilliant ball, got three singles out of as many times at bat.

Only in two innings did Nashville reach first. Score:

Price and Conzelman Stand Good Chance of Taking the Prize—Coveleskie, E. Brown, Cavet and Prough Go Good

The race for pitching honors in the southern league continues to be close and exciting. Conzelman, Covaleskie, Prough, E. Brown, Price, Hardgrove, Bennett and Cavet all have a good showing and the race will not be decided until the very last. Right now Conzelman has the best average in the bunch, though Covaleskie, Prough and E. Brown are pushing him close.

Covaleskie with 10 wins tops the bunch when it comes to hanging up credits in the percentage table. The Pole has also fanned more batters than the others, leading with 132 whiffs, but of that he has hurled more games than any other flinger. Parsons, of Memphis, has allowed 99 runs in the 195 innings he has worked, this being the largest number given up by any one flinger.

Since the following averages were figured out there have been several changes. Below are the figures on all pitchers who are above the .500 mark in victories.

Athletes Must Keep Standard

NEW YORK, July 19.—"Our American athletes will have to keep up their high state of perfection for 1916 if they desire to score the greatest number of points in the next Olympic games," is the statement of J. Walter Spalding, who is vice president of the American Olympic committee.

Mr. Spalding has been a member of each Olympic committee since America has taken part in the Olympic games and has carefully followed not only the games in this but those abroad upon his recent return from abroad he stated that there had been in the past two or twelve years a marked improvement in athletics in all the continental countries, due, he is of the opinion, to the Olympic games, and he not only feels that America is entitled to the credit for having made the Olympic games a success, owing to the way we took part in the games at Paris, London, St. Louis and Stockholm, but it has caused other countries to copy our type of work, with the result that nearly all the countries are now imitating America in the style of athletic games and the control of all kinds of athletic activities.

Shooting Outfit Of Swiss Strong

NEW YORK, July 16.—The leading marksmen of the world are already heading for the United States in order to participate in the international tournament of shooting at Camp Perry, Ohio, September 1-9. One of the most formidable teams is that which will represent Switzerland. It was at first thought that the entry would be too late to be cancelled, but monetary difficulties having been overcome, a team of the best Swiss marksmen under the tutelage of A. Meyer de Stadelhofen, a Geneva lawyer, and a splendid shot, will sail for New York in August to take part in the Camp Perry tournament.

The team is the best that Switzerland can send, and the wagering there is 2 to 1 that it will win. Out of sixteen international meetings during the last decade Switzerland has won fifteen times, and has second once by only a few points.

Millen Club Strong; Claims State Title

MILLEN, Ga., July 19.—Millen and East Point finished a series of three games here on Wednesday. East Point took the first game by the score of 3 to 1. The game was close from start to finish, the visitors scoring two runs in the ninth on an error and a wild pitch, thereby cinching the game.

Batteries: For Millen, Daniel and Moore; East Point, Gardner and Wise.

The second game was the tightest contest ever played in this part of the state, going fourteen innings. In the last half of the thirteenth the locals got busy with the stick and scored one run. Kingery singled, Brinson doubled, sending Kingery to third. Ray kicked in with a sacrifice which scored the only run of the game, Millen evening the series by the score of 1 to 0. The features of the game was the running catches of Gregory for the locals in center field and the fine work of Ernest Daniel, who gave up only five hits in the entire contest.

The third game went eleven innings without a man crossing the pan for either side, although Millen threatened to score in the eleventh, when Kingery singled, but was out trying to steal second.

In the three games played only five runs were scored in thirty-three innings, two of the games being of the pitching variety.

Batteries: For Millen, McLean and Ellis; East Point, Wynn and Wise.

It was estimated that the crowd for the last game was 500 people. Millen says Savannah Amateurs next week a series of three games here and then will go for a road trip for two weeks. All the teams can get games here for Millen now has the amateur championship of the state, and is ready to defend the title at any time and any place. The locals have played thirty-three games this season, losing only eight and tying one and winning the rest. For games communicate with M. L. Gregory, Millen, Ga.

Robertson is Fast Dropping At Hit Game

Elberfeld Holds Highest Average, With Welchonce, of Atlanta, Rapidly Closing in the Small Gap

By staying out of the game Kid Elberfeld is bettering his chances of holding the lead in the race for the batting honors of the Southern league. His average of .343 is better than those boasted of by Davy Robertson, Harry Welchonce, Tommy Long and Wallace Smith, who right now are his most consistent looking rivals.

The figures included in this story are through the games of Tuesday, and since that time there have been a number of changes, Welchonce having jumped forward, while Robertson jumped the other way.

With 117 hits to his credit Welchonce leads the league, and his average of .332 is but little short of the best. Long with 70 runs continues to hold the lead in this department of play, while in total base hitting D. Robertson, of Mobile, has just one bag on Welchonce, who leads in triples, while Robertson leads in home runs and doubles.

The Atlanta players this season are hitting unusually hard. There are four Crackers over the .300 mark, and Bisland and Dunn are the only ones back of .250. Wares, with 43 stolen bags, tops the league in this department of play.

Here are the averages through the games of Tuesday:

Jennings Says Giants Will Win

DETROIT, Mich., July 19.—The sensational form of the Giants in running up a long string of victories prompted Manager Jennings to come to bat with the prediction that McGraw's team would "walk right into the National league championship."

"There's no doubt in my mind that the Giants will have no trouble in winning the pennant," said Hugh. "Regardless of the strength to pull them through, and McGraw will get every bit of power there is in the club out of it.

"It looks now as if nothing can stop the Athletics from winning the American league flag, so there will undoubtedly be a world's series dividend between New York and Philadelphia."

President Navin, of this city, agrees with his manager in these predictions. He picks both the Giants and Athletics to capture their respective pennants.

"If things come out as they should," said the Tigers' boss, "both these clubs should win their flags without the worry of a final spurt to bother them, and they should make a world's series such as has never been played before."

CHINESE STUDY GAME; LOST BUT ONE BATTLE

In Watching Major League Clubs Play, the Chinese Stars Study Every Phase of the Game

NEW YORK, July 19.—There's a real yellow peril in baseball now.

The team of the Chinese University of Hawaii, while touring this country, have defeated many of the strongest college professional nines. Since leaving California the Celestials have won sixty-four games and lost but one. Their record is all the more remarkable when it is considered that they have only been playing our diamond game in Hawaii for a few years.

What are some of our teams going to do with the invading Chinamen when they have a pitcher with a spitball who is called "the Matty of the Far East?" Several players who make four and five hits a game and a third baseman so fast that he runs a yards in ten seconds? That's been the work of these stars together with a fine knowledge of the game, that has made the visiting teams from Hawaii a terror to many of our own teams.

While in New York the foreigners expressed a wish to see some big league playing. They were taken over to Brooklyn to see the Giants and Dodgers.

Their knowledge of the sport was surprising. The Honolulu students speak English fluently. There's nothing of the fuss and cuff variety about them. Each one from big Kan Yan to little Ensue has followed the doings in the big leagues. From newspaper accounts they were familiar with "Chief" Meyers, Matty, Larry Doyle and Red Murray and all other Giant stars. Most of the Dodger celebrities also were well known to their little yellow brothers.

Seated in two boxes behind the Brooklyn bench, the Chinamen paid critical attention to the game. Many of them kept box scores, and hot was the argument sometimes as to whether a player should be credited with an error on a doubtful play.

Probably the two most interested onlookers were Foster-Robertson, the university's star pitcher, whose great performance has earned for him the title of "the Matty of the Far East," and Kan Yan, the Hans Wagner of the team. Foster-Robertson, or Ahoong his name in Chinese, was particularly interested in the pitchers. He was delighted with A. Demaree. The Celestial looked with longing eyes every time the Giants' pitcher sent over one of his tantalizing drops and admitted that "he was the goods."

The game had hardly started when Robertson and Kan Yan began a running comment on the players and plays that lasted until the last man was put out.

STUDY THE GAME.

When Shafer made a hit in the first inning Kan Yan was anxious to know whether his teammates had noticed the way he batted. He called attention to the fact that the hit was made with only a chop motion of the arms.

"Gee, look at the club the chief uses!" exclaimed Robertson when Meyers came to the plate. Come on now, chief, shoot it over third base," pleaded the pitcher, and there was a disappointed Chinaman when Meyers filed out.

Demaree had two strikes on Miller in the second inning when he was advised by the Hawaiian pitcher to "waste a couple." Robertson explained in approved big league style that with two strikes on a batter a pitcher should try to fool him with the next one and not attempt to put it over.

The sight of Chief Meyers stealing second was a treat. Joke to the Chinamen. It was the Giants' system of base running that made them pronounced favorites with the yellow visitors.

Hardly an inning passed that the Chinese players failed to remark on the game, either criticising some error or predicting that the next play would be a steal or a hit and run, etc.

In the eighth inning the Dodger rooters became very boisterous when Demaree shofed signs of unsteadiness. Robertson took the opportunity for remarking that noise never affected him. Later 81, was second for the first 18 holes with 326. Five associations were represented in the match for the cup now held by the western.

The Trans-Mississippi team scored 353.

ELBERFELD WILL PLAY

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., July 19.—Kid Elberfeld, according to the occultist who examined him here, should be in his usual form within a week. The local pilot is not suffering from an injury to the brain, as was at first thought, but from a clot upon the optic nerve of his left eye. The presence of this blood accounts for Elberfeld's dizziness and his lack of accuracy in hitting and throwing.

Steps have been taken to absorb the blood which is collected and it is believed that the clot will be entirely dispated within three or four days, leaving Elberfeld perfetly normal. The optic is being treated regularly.

Before the Giant-Dodger game, Sam Hop, the manager of the visiting team, with just a stifled tussle with the English language, told why the Chinamen were so successful on the diamond and how the sport was introduced in Hawaii.

INTRODUCTION OF GAME.

"We had never seen a baseball," began the busy little manager, "until Mr. Spalding brought his team to Hawaii in 1898. It was some years before the natives caught on to the new sport. Along toward 1905 a few teams were formed, and since that time the sport has grown steadily in poularity.

"We have studied your ways a lot. The boys know what you inside stuff, that is to play with their heads as well as their hands. They are all good athletes. Five members of the baseball nines are football players. Third baseman Lai Tin is a fast sprinter and can do 100 yards in 10 seconds."

Manager Sam Hop delighted in telling how wonderful the men were on the bases. Because of their great speed the players never stop when once on the bases, and their daring running has caused many a catcher to feel like changing his laundry.

Manager Hop who is also physical director of the Chinese University, had a word about baseball's popularity at his far-away home.

"Out in Honolulu we play our games at Athletic park, and a crowd of 15,000 is nothing unusual. The Chinamen are all fans and they root good and hard."

Sam Hop turned to Foster-Robertson, who was standing near by, and said that the young Celestial was one of the biggest stars back east.

The university pitcher, a modest chap, briefly said that he was nineteen years old and had been playing ball since he was a youngster.

"I first started in as a third baseman," said Robertson, but soon took up pitching. I have a good in and out curve and also a slow ball. Lately I have perfected the spitter and can use it with fairly good control. This year I have been somewhat lucky and won twenty out of twenty-five games I pitched."

The Chinese student-players spoke very highly of this part of the country, but they must be back in college next September.

Duncan Should Run Defender

NEW YORK, July 19.—Discussion between the two America's cup comittee —New York Yacht club and Royal Ulster Yacht club—still continues, and I learn that when the mass of cablegrams and letters is given out, it will form a collection almost, if not quite, as bulky as the Ledyard-Lawson correspondence in the old Independence days. Everything is simmering along in a satisfactory manner, I hear—no hiatus is likely to occur in the arrangements —but Sir Thomas is leaving no point of detail unseen or undiscussed. A member of the committee told me that definite announcement of the conclusion of negotiations might be expected from England within a few days.

In the meantime Nicholson is going ahead with plans for the challenger, while on this side of the water the only announcement pertaining to the matter of cup defense involves Addison and Wilmer Hanan and their new 38 rater Josephine, which has been winning consistently since she was launched—five victories out of six races. If she goes on as she has been going on, the Hanans, I hear, will build a seventy-five foot defender—an enlarged Josephine —and present her as a candidate for the honor of meeting Shamrock IV-Herreshoff, of course, will build the defender, but I have it on good authority that he has announced he will build only one boat. If he does, it should like to prophesy that W. B. Duncan will manage her.

I understand that he has stated very unreservedly that nothing would induce him to participate in the cup defense campaign next year. Nevertheless, he is the best all-round big boat sailor in this country, and I think, almost the only man, one might say, for the position, and besides being a keen sailor he is also a patriot—in all, a combination of factors that I believe, when all is said and done, will be potent with him.

Matty Is Good Says Johnson

NEW YORK, July 19.—Between the two farewell games that were played at the Polo grounds between the Washingtons and the Yankees, Walter Johnson, star pitcher of the Senators, and of the American league, took occasion to make some comment regarding Christopher Mathewson.

"I saw Matty pitch the other day over in Brooklyn and I am ready to take my hat off to him. I do not mean by this that I have ever doubted his ability. Any pitcher that has remained in the big show as long as he has and has made the record that he has must be the goods or he could not have done it.

"But I can really proclaim Matthewson the greatest pitcher of all time. He has a wonderful hand. The spectator who watches his every move while on the mound can readily tell that. Matty will be pitching for a number of years yet.

"He surely has solved the secret of conserving his energy. He works along smoothly, feeding the batter what the batter does not like and then, when it comes to a pinch, he has a great amount of strength in reserve to call upon. His control is wonderful."

WEEK'S BEST HURLERS ARE FROM AMERICAN BUNCH

Why has Connie Mack a champion baseball team? One reason is furnished by the pitching records up to the present time this season. Of the three best pitchers of the sixteen clubs in the two big leagues, and of the more than 100 pitchers working in them, the Athletics carry two, Houck and Plank. The New York Giants of the National league have the third, Mathewson, the old reliable. The records of the best six pitchers of the two leagues to date, with half the season finished, are as follow below:

	W.	L.	Aver.
Houck, Athletics (A. M.)	10	2	.833
Plank, Athletics (A. M.)	13	2	.813
Mathewson, Giants (N. L.)	15	4	.789
Johnson, Wash. A. M.)	18	4	.783
Seaton, Phils. N. L.)	11	4	.773
Cheney, Chicago, (N. L.)	12	5	.706

How far pitching records snow the ability of a pitcher has long been a mooted question among baseball statisticians. Were Walter Johnson with the Athletics—a much finer club than the Senators—his record would probably be better, for it is probably now conceded by most fans that he is the greatest pitcher in the country. There are other first-class pitchers not in the select six to date, among them Alexander of Philadelphia, Rucker of Brooklyn, and Walsh of the White Sox.

Jackson Holds Highest Place In Every Way

Joe Best Slugger, Hitter, and Leads in Number of Hits, Cobb and Speaker Each Have Good Averages

There continues to be nothing to the race in the American league for batting honors save Joe Jackson. This boy leads in just about every other end of the game as well as the individual hitting and unless he suffers a slump or Cobb begins that expected spurt there is to be nothing to it but a Jackson year.

Through the games on July 16 Jackson had an average of .412. This included 82 games 289 at bats, 66 runs and 119 hits for a total of 185 bases. This is more hits and a total of more bags than any other American leaguer and at the present clip Jackson will improve upon these figures within a short time.

Right back of Jackson you will find Tyrus Cobb with an average of .393. Ty has been in but 60 games and has made 35 runs and 79 hits for a total of 115 bases. In the league are 19 batters who have an average better than .300. In this list is included four Mackmen.

Daubert Goes Batting Crazy Nears Top

Ex-Southern Star Is Pasting the Ball Hard and Often, McDonald Continues to Hold the Highest Average

The sensation of the week in National league batting circles has been the rapid climb of Jake Daubert, the Brooklyn first baseman who spent his early days in the Southern league. Jake has not yet overtaken Charles McDonald, the Boston Brave who is topping the batting column of the league with an average of .374, but he is right next door, being but 10 points in the rear.

At hitting Daubert is the only National league player who has registered as many as a hundred hits, the Dodger being right at the century mark. At slugging Miller, of Pittsburg, is in the lead with a total of 140 bases.

The hitters who are over the .300 mark are very evenly divided among the different clubs, each having its share in the charmed circle. Daubert and Hess are the ex-Southern players who are over the mark.

MINISTER TEACHES BOXING AND HOLDS REAL CONTESTS

NEW YORK, July 19.—A minister who teaches boxing and athetics along with doctrines of the Good Book and does it so successfully as to invite general commendation, is the proud achievement of the Rev. H. P. Heffernan, rtor" of St. Lawrence's Roman Catholic church at Sayville, L. I.

The Rev. Heffernan firmly believes in the theory that a strong body makes a good soul. To accomplish that end he recently formed the Sayville Athletic club, open to members of all faiths. The club, since its start last March, went booming along until recently, when the St. Lawrence rector surprised the members with the announcement that boxing bouts would be held on certain dates.

Whew! Boxing, fighting contests on church grounds? A few straight-laced Long Islanders couldn't agree with the proposition that boxing and fighting or exchanging punches was the proper way to save souls, but Father Heffernan went confidently ahead with his plans, and it announcement pertaining to the matter of cup defense involves Addison and Wilmer Hanan and their new 38 rater Josephine, which has been winning consistently since she was launched—five victories out of six races. If she goes on as she has been going on, the Hanans, I hear, will build a seventy-five foot defender—an enlarged Josephine —and present her as a candidate for the honor of meeting Shamrock IV-Herreshoff, of course, will build the defender, but I have it on good authority that he has announced he will build only one boat. If he does, I should like to prophesy that W. B. Duncan will manage her.

I understand that he has stated very unreservedly that nothing would induce him to participate in the cup defense campaign next year. Nevertheless, he is the best all-round big boat sailor in this country, I think, almost the only man, one might say, for the position, and besides being a keen sailor he is also a patriot—in all, a combination of factors that I believe, when all is said and done, will be potent with him.

"I saw Matty pitch the other day over in Brooklyn and I am ready to take my hat off to him. I do not mean by this that I have ever doubted his ability. LOOKOUT CLUB STRENGTHENS FOR FINAL STRONG SPURT

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., July 19.—The Lookouts are to be in the race for the pennant all the way to the wire—this is the decision of President Andrews, Kid Elberfeld and the stockholders of the local club, as a result of this decision Dee Walsh has just been added to the local club and still more strength is coming within the next few days. It is realized fully locally that the Chattanoogans' present lineup will not keep them in the real running. As the new blood is being injected into Elberfeld's machine, the dead timber is being pruned and Breaux has already received the pink slip, going to the Bristol club of the Appalachian league.

The acquisition of Walsh and another infielder, who is practically certain to come from the Reds, necessitates a general shake up in the local squad with several more releases. Walsh will be placed on short upon his arrival, and Williams will be canned to make room for him. As soon as the Kid is able to play permanently, however, and it is not expected to be more than a week from hence, he will return to short, and it will be necessary to find another berth for Dee. This it will be seen will necessitate the benching or release of another member of the present squad.

From present indications Walsh will go into the outfield, as Graff is playing a grand game at third base, but it is possible that either Walsh or the Kid may be placed at the three-quarter mark, while Graff will be placed in the utility role. This is extremely likely to occur when the veteran Bristol star of the Reds arrives. That he will come within a week seems a certainty unless all present signs fail.

The shift just mentioned, however, is in no way actually agreed upon and most any sort of combination is possible after all the new material is obtained. It looks like a certain bet, though, that one member of the present outfield will go if the Cincinnati athlete shows up on schedule time.

The acquisition of new material at the present time caused general surprise locally and around the circuit, but in all the deals Andrews and Elberfeld had an eye out for next season, and they figure that they are merely spending the 1914 budget a little in advance.

Four $20,000 Prizes Offered

Rich Events at Big Racing Meet to Be Held in San Francisco

Four stakes worth $20,000 each, for both trotters and pacers, will be among the attractive features of the harness race meetings to be held in connection with the Panama-Pacific International exposition at San Francisco in 1915. Two of these stakes will be made the leading inducements to international racers from all over the world. These with but two exceptions, will be the richest stakes ever given on the harness turf.

The best stake given in America to date was the $15,000 pacing division of the $50,000 American Derby, raced over the Readville track. $10,000 events for pacers have been given, but rarely; purses with a total value of $5,000 have been the customary allotment for sidewheelers.

Daniel O. Lively, chief of the department of live stock, of the Panama-Pacific International exposition has officially announced that two harness race meetings will be held at San Francisco in 1915. The two meetings—two weeks of racing in June and two weeks in October—will be held under the auspices of the Pacific Trotting Horse Breeders' association. Chief Lively has already directed a schedule to be drawn out by J. C. Kirkpatrick, I. L. Borden, J. A. McKerron and Secretary F. W. Kelley of the Pacific association.

The race program will approximate $225,000 offered in stakes and purses in addition to prizes in trophies and plate.

At an early date there will be published simultaneously for distribution in America and abroad, a diagram and tentative program which has been prepared in so simple and yet so comprehensive a manner that horsemen will easily grasp its most salient features. The liberal conditions that accompany the program are such as will readily appeal to horsemen from all countries.

In preparation for these events a new mile track is now being constructed at the exposition grounds. It is declared by experts that this track will not only be one of the most picturesque but one of the fastest in the world, qualified that alone will undoubtedly draw to San Francisco in 1915 enthusiasts from every horse-fancying country on the globe.

EXPECT NEW RECORDS TO BE ESTABLISHED ON GALVESTON BEACH

With many high-powered cars entered and with speedy pilots to man them there is not the slightest doubt that new world's straight-away records will be hung up at the coming Galveston, Texas, beach meet July 28, 29, 30. Although the sprint records for the mile and two-mile distances now held by Burman probably will not be eclipsed, there are some long distance marks which undoubtedly will fall. The 1-2 hours continuation free-for-all race, the feature event of the meet which is to be run three consecutive days and for which a prize of $5,000 is offered, has enlisted a number of the fastest long distance cars now racing and world's records are bound to be hung up.

Although he has not made formal entry, it is said on good authority that Ralph Mulford will enter his Peugeot monster which he bought recently from Goux who drove the car to victory in the recent 500 mile race at Indianapolis.

Mulford will have as a fellow-driver another Peugeot to be driven by Armour Ferguson, the young millionaire sportsman driver, if the car can be gotten out of the custom house in time to be shipped to Galveston. This car has recently been driven by Zuccarelli who was killed a few weeks ago in practice for the Grand Prix race in France. Young Ferguson who has made a brilliant showing as a race driver intends to enter also the speedy little Mercer which he campaigned last season.

"Motorcycle Leaping" the New Sport

A new sport now in vogue is called "motorcycle leaping." Automobile people may be all right, but it hasn't anything on this. This new sport was originated by Mr. Oakley Welbel, an employe of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, Akron, Ohio, and was exploited by him on a country road just outside the city of Akron, Ohio.

Motorcycle leaping can be accomplished best on a road with a fairly steep grade broken by short rises known as water breaks. These water breaks are found on the side of a hill or slight incline and are for the purpose of diverting the course of the water to the side of the road.

A moderately fast speed is necessary, the faster the speed, the farther the leap. By coming down a grade at a fast clip and jumping his machine with his knees, when the water break is reached, the motorcycle and its rider clear the top with such momentum that quite a distance is covered before the machine touches the ground.

Recent trials have resulted in leaps of from twenty to twenty-four feet and at a maximum height of eighteen inches. One trial for height resulted in a leap of eighteen feet at a height of twenty-four inches.

The execution of this sport is not difficult. The only precaution that need be taken is to keep the front wheel steady while off the ground. Also never apply the brake suddenly in the air, as alighting in this manner might result in a sudden dash over the handle bars.

This manner of leaping on a motorcycle can be practiced on country roads where ash walks extend from one side to the other or any other similar form of a raised section in the road. A downward course is not necessary, the only difference is that the distance acquired on a level is not so great.

This resembles skiing to a certain extent. The one advantage over skiing is that the distance from good old terra firma is not so great, which by many people is considered an important question.

Should this sport become thoroughly instilled into the motorcyclist's system, the demand for specially constructed bumpers will be urgent. If this stage of the game ever arrives, meets will be held to test the ability and cleverness of each rider, like the present races are held to test speed.

AUTO GOSSIP

FRANK SMITH NOW SELLING LOZIERS

Renewing an association of years' standing, Frank H. Smith, formerly of the Studebaker and Maxwell companies, has joined the sales staff of the Lozier Motor company under Sales Manager Paul Smith. Frank Smith was formerly assistant to Paul Smith when the latter was sales manager of the Studebaker corporation and although the two men are not related in any way they were constantly being introduced as brothers.

Frank Smith is one of the most widely acquainted traveling salesmen in the automobile business and is thoroughly conversant with dealers' conditions all over the country. He also numbers many newspaper men among his friends owing to his connection with many automobile publicity stunts in the past five years.

Mr. Smith will act as special traveling representative for the Lozier company, working out of Detroit. His services will be largely in the nature of a connecting lik between dealers and the home office.

HUPMOBILE BULLETIN 1913 GLIDDEN TOUR

MINOT, N. D., July 19.—The Twin Hupmobiles in the Glidden tour finished the fourth day's national run with still perfect scores, after a variety of road going that covered everything imaginable. The trip of one hundred and thirty miles over the mud and prairie trails of North Dakota, from Devil's Lake to Minot, was play for the little fellows.

So enthusiastic has been the reception of the Hupmobiles all along the line that the Munzer Twins plan a demonstration tour throughout the entire country on their return trip.

Today the Gliddenites get their first touch of Montana roads, which is looked upon to be the hardest going of the entire trip. The run across the state will be long and difficult and the wise ones are saying, "Plenty of time for the Hupmobiles to get penalized." "Watch us" is all the Munzer boys say.

Firestone Enlarges Plant

Fifty tons of finished tires, representing the daily output of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company, have been found insufficient to supply the demand for this product, so the directors prepared to increase the manufacturing facilities by the erection of new additions.

Work is now progressing on the new structures with every assurance that they will be ready by the fall, at which time the daily output will be doubled. The Firestone company at present has the largest exclusive tire plant in the world and with the added buildings should be enabled to keep ahead of its rapidly growing business.

The Firestone company only recently took possession of a new addition, but scarcely had the machinery been installed and the wheels put in operation than it was certain that still more manufacturing space was needed.

Runs on Patent Medicine

A. A. Wheeler, of Mitchell, S. D., found himself six miles from home in a Studebaker "25" with an empty gasoline tankk. He ran to the next house on gas from his motor primer, and got a bottle of patent medicine which carried him two miles to a supply of kerosene on which he completed the trip into town.

Delivery Car Army

At a recent celebration in Los Angeles, 62 Studebaker "20" delivery cars lined up for parade, presenting the greatest array of the sort on record. One of the prizes for best condition and appearance was won by a car that has traveled 25,000 miles delivering laundry.

Vacation on Motorcycle

Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Beckett, of Pittsburg, Pa., say they are enjoying the best vacation of their lives this summer. Starting from their home on a motorcycle on May 21, they traveled leisurely west as far as Chicago, where they witnessed the Elgin motorcycle classic on July 4. They are now on the return trip to Pittsburg. They are not trying for any speed or economy record, but are riding slowly, enjoying the scenery en route.

USES CADILLAC CAR AS OFFICE AND HOME

E. M. Pierce, a New York lumberman, whose predilection is for automobile globe-trotting, and whose private office is the tonneau of his Cadillac, has started again on a tour through the White mountains, Canada, Michigan, Indiana, and Ohio, in the same car which since February, 1912, he has driven 37,000 miles. After this strenuous excursion Mr. Pierce accompanied by Mrs. Pierce and a companion, will hit the transcontinental trail in September for southern California, where they will spend the winter.

The big mileage piled up to date is due to a remarkable trip last season which consisted of a tour all the way around the United States in the same car. Mr. Pierce claims a unique record on his ride from New York to the Pacific coast, which he says was negotiated without a single mechanical adjustment.

ONE IN EVERY THIRTY OWNS FORD CAR

One white person in every thirty including men, women and children old enough to be enumerated in the government census in the town of Orlando, Florida, with a population of 3,500, owns a Ford car.

This is the information on file at the Ford factory. Of the 3,500 persons enumerated in the last census, sixty per cent are white. This makes the white population about 2,100 persons. Records at the Ford factory show that there are some 60 Model Ts owned in Orlando.

BEER TABLETS

A Foaming, Sparkling Lager Beer Can Now Be Made Quickly For One Cent a Glass

CINCINNATI, O., July 20.—The latest novelty for the beer drinker in prohibition territory and elsewhere comes from an expert brewmaster of Cincinnati, famous for its good Beer. He has concentrated Barley, Malt and Hops in such a way that simply by the addition of water and sugar a real, sparkling, foaming Lager Beer can be made. He claims that the finished beer has the delicious taste, strength and nourishing qualities of the best Brewery Beer and at a cost of only one cent a glass. Anyone, no matter where they are located, can now enjoy a delicious cooling glass of beer at all times and although this is entirely new, he already has thousands of customers using his concentrated beer and coming back for more. Thus proving that it is giving thorough satisfaction and that it is represented. He claims that it will soon take the place of brewery beer in hundreds of localities and especially in those localities where the shipping of beer is prohibited on account of the recent Webb bill passed by congress, its sale should be enormous. Its great saving alone must appeal to the average man and the thrifty house-wife should soon see its wonderful advantages. For further information just write to Brewmaster A. Shuh, 1206 Sycamore street, Cincinnati, O., who says he is here than pleased to be put in correspondence with anyone desiring o try his preparation. (Advt.)

Autos to Race On August 9th

Big Day at Brighton Beach Track for Lovers of the Automobile Game

NEW YORK, July 19.—Saturday, August 9, has been selected for the automobile race meet at the Brighton Beach track, under the auspices of the Motor Dealers' Contest association. An announcement to this effect was made after the meeting of the race committee.

The original plan, as first outlined, was to hold this meet in July. In setting August 9 as the date the race committee acceded to the request of several race drivrs who are anxious to compete at the Brighton meet, but who are scheduled to appear at the Galveston meet and other meets elsewhere during July.

Games In Empire Will Be Fast

WAYCROSS, Ga., July 19.—Next week's games in the Empire league will play an important part in the pennant race which will be held when the scheduled season omes to an end in August. The tail-enders, Waycross, tackle the league leaders for six games, three at Cordele and three at Waycross. Upon the result of this series depends to a great extent the outcome of the second race. Waycross, by playing good consistent baseball this week, has started climbing, and if the stunt can be continued next week with Cordele coming down there will be a shifting of positions before long that will upset dope very much.

The pennant race is an unknown quantity so far as seevral teams are withing striking distance of first place. And then if any team other than Valdosta wins the second half of the season the pennant will not be awarded until Valdosta and the unknown meet for a series of seven games. Waycrost fans are very hopeful now of trying conclusions with Valdosta at the end of the season, despite the present position of the team. And as there are several others in the Empire with the same hopes the race is going to ee anything but dull.

Convention at Denver

Preparations are practically complete for the eleventh annual convention of the Federation of American Motorcyclists, which opens in Denver July 22 and continues for three days.

Motorcyclists who will ride their machines to the convention city are already on their way, riding in easy stages, so that even the inexperienced will have no difficulty in keeping up the four tours centering in Denver are: the southeastern tour, starting from Indianapolis; the central tour, from Milwaukee; the northern tour, from Aberdeen, S. Dak., and the short grass tour, which starts from Hutchinson, Kas. It is expected that these four tours will bring more than a thousand motorcyclists into the Mile-High City. In addition, a special car has been chartered from New York to accommodate those who do not take part in the tours.

Around the World

Carl S. Clancy, who left New York last October, for a motorcycle tour of the world, has just arrived in Port'and, Ore., having motorcycled through England, Ireland, Scotland, Holland, Belgium, France, Spain Algiers and Tunis, Africa, India and Japan. He will return to New York via the northern route through Spokane. Mr. Clancy expects to prepare a book of travel which will doubtless be a great aid to other motorcyclists desiring to visit the continent awheel. And Mr. Clancy is of the opinion that that is the only way to make a tour if one desires to really see a country.

Changes Voting Method

A new method of voting will be adopted at the annual convention of the Federation of American Motorcyclists, this year, which it is believed will be an improvement over former methods and simplify the work of the secretary in making his records. Printed ballots have been made out for each state and club delegate, all ballots to be voted on by a particular delegate to bear the number of his delegate credential. All credentials are numbered in duplicate, the delegate to keep the original and return the duplicate to the secretary.

Motorcycle Show

Announcement is made that a national motorcycle, bicycle and accessory show will be held at the coliseum in Chicago, November 3 to 8. This is a distinct innovation not only in the nature of the show but in the time. The event is sanctioned by the Motorcycle Manufacturers' association and will be managed by A. B. Coffman, of Toledo, Ohio, president of the association. The show committee is composed of Arthur Davidson, of Milwaukee; T. W. Henderson, of Detroit, and Mr. Coffman. The show will be widely advertised, and it is expected by the managers that it will attract a much larger attendance than has been the case when the motorcycle show was held at the same time of the Chicago automobile show.

TWO NEW LIVE WIRES WITH CRANE'S POPE-HARTFORD CO.

HAROLD M. GILBERT,
Who takes charge of Crane's motorcycle department.

R. J. SLEAR
Who becomes office manager with L. S. Crane.

L. S. Crane, better known as "Lots of Service" Crane, the Pope agent in Atlanta for the Pope line of automobiles, motorcycles and bicycles, and representative of the "Oilzum" lubricants, has taken two live associates in with him in the persons of R. J. Slear, the electric supply and lighting expert, manager of the Stewart-Warner corporation's southern branch until its discontinuance lately, and Harold M. Gilbert, who has surrended the position of manager of the Southern Motorcycle company in order to form the new connection.

Mr. Slear will become office manager of the Crane agency, and Mr. Gilbert will assume charge of the motorcycle end of the business. With these two associates, Mr. Crane will enlarge his facilities to a point where they will meet more completely the demands that have grown upon his own time and attention.

Mr. Slear came to Atlanta from Pittsburg, Pa., six years ago, and started as correspondent for the Alexander-Elyea company. Within a year he had risen to the work of manager for the Alexander-Seewald company, one of the largest automobile accessory houses in the south.

On January 1, 1910, he organized the Vesta Electric and Supply company, and with this business he operated the southern branch of the Warner Instrument company. He was one of the first men to prove to the south the advantages of lighting automobiles by electricity. In that work he won the confidence of the automobile fraternity throughout the southeast. On January 1, 1913, he took charge of the new branch of the Stewart-Warner Speedometer company. The Atlanta branch was closed, with all others except six in the big automobile manufacturing centers on July 1.

Harold M. Gilbert was born in Duluth, Ga., in 1889. He came to Atlanta in 1896 and spent his first year in school, and for the next three years was a messenger for the Western Union and City Messenger Service. At the end of three years he became manager of the office of the City Messenger Service, in which capacity he served for a year and a half. In 1902 he went to Chattanooga, Tenn., and spent about two years repairing bicycles for the Lane Cycle company, afterwards returning to Atlanta and going to work in the repair shop of the City Messenger Service. He left there to go with the Elyea-Austell company in their bicycle and motorcycle repair shop, leaving them a year later to take charge of the bicycle and motorcycle repair shop of the Alexander-Seewald company. The next move was to ally himself with the Vesta Electric and Supply company, where he remained for two years. When they moved out on Peachtree street, Mr. Gilbert rented the store at 164 Edgewood avenue, and up to date has been in charge of the Southern Motorcycle company, where he has become very familiar with practically every make of motorcycle on the market.

Racer Insured For Big Amount

NEW YORK, July 19.—August Belmont has just insured his race horse Tracery for $150,000.

He was moved to take this step after the outrage in the race for the Ascot Gold Cup in England a short time ago, when a man, following the example of the suffragettes who marred the running of the Derby, threw himself at Tracery and sent the horse crashing to the track when he was leading and seemed to have the rich prize at his mercy.

Tracery won the St. Leger last year, one of the classics of the English turf, and is ranked among the great horses abroad.

Sense Don't Go With Golf Game

Marshall Whitlatch, a national figure in golf two or three years ago, and who recently established a new competitive record on the Oakland course, declares that:

Golf and brains do not seem to assimilate.

Good golf is played through the lower nerve centers and motor channels while poor golf is due to the direct interference of the brain, or consciousness.

Mr. Whitlotch will discuss his theory, its suggestion to him by Madame Montessori's work, and its practical working out, in the August Century, in an article entitled "Mind vs. Muscles in Golf."

Speedometer Company To Do Repair Work

The Stewart-Warner Speedometer corporation has discontinued all branches except those located at the large automobile manufacturing centers, and has made arrangements with the Atlanta Speedometer company, 328 Peachtree street, whereby that company will do all repair work, etc., in connection with the Stewart and Warner speedometers. Factory experts will be retained by that company to do all such necessary work.

Journal Team Seeking Lead

The Atlanta Journal club and Kampers cross bats Wednesday in a double header at Ponce de Leon. They are under the Grocers league where the teams are so bunched that four teams are tied with a percentage of 600. Should the Journal take both games of this double bill they will be tied with the leaders regardless of whether the other teams win or lose. Should the other teams lose while the Journal wins two, the Journal will be at the top of the ladder.

The Journal team is going good and the members in the best of shape. Kampers is trailing the league and the Journals has a fine chance to boost their percentage and take the lead in the league.

The first game will be called at 2:30 p. m. An admission of ten cents will be charged.

Asbury Wins

Asbury met and defeated the Grace team by the rugged score of 14 to 6. The features were Courtney, Robinson and Chapman. Ewing, the great shortstop, was knocked out of the box.

Holshouser caught a nice game. Speaks pitched a jam-up game.

Too Much Cooper!

Too much Cooper again combined with the great fielding of the entire team was too much for the Gulf Refining company. York for the Gulf Refining company pitched good ball but was overwhelmed the bombardment handed him by the strong hitting Standard Oil company team. It looks like that 1000 per cent is there, to stay.

Tigers Win Two

The Georgia Tigers met and defeated the Third National Bank and A. A. Wood Machine company's teams today. The third boy quit in the first half of the ninth with the score tied 4 and 4, and forfeited rather than play it out. This game was interesting from the first, both teams keeping the score tied until the last.

The second game was taken from Wood easily, the Tigers never trying to do their best.

The feature of the Tiger-Bank game was the pitching of Watson who only allowed four hits.

FULTON WINS

In a game replete with heavy hitting and daring base running, the Fulton's simply walked away with their game with the Atlanta Gas Light Co. Twenty hits for fourty-two bases tells the tale. Melton's hitting was the brightest feature. Out of five times up he rapped out three home runs, one triple and was thrown out at first once, after the second baseman flagged one that was labeled hit.

Sparks, Expositions old pitcher, pitched three innings for the Fultons and struck out eight men, not allowing a hit. Howard also pitched brilliant ball, striking out seven, and allowing seven hits.

Fulton plays the Georgia Auto Tops at Poncey diamond next Saturday, and expect to have another field day.

Postoffice Defeats Grocers

The Post Office team won a fast and interesting game from the Associated Grocers by the score of 10 to 2 The game was featured by the jam-up fielding of both teams and by the utter absence of batting and baserunning in the game. Both pitchers pitched a splendid game, with Niblack getting a little the better of the deal. Griffin created a sensation in the ninth by stealing second, third and home.

Elberton Lost Series To Madison Team

ELBERTON, Ga., July 19.—The series of ball games played in Elberton this week between Elberton and Madison came to a close Thursday with a 4 to 3 victory for Madison. The visitors also took the first game by the score of 4 to 3. The second game was won by Elberton, score 8 to 0.

Geising, who pitched for Madison the first and third games, is the classiest hurler to ever visit Elberton. The locals made only four hits off his delivery on Thursday and at no stage of the game was he in danger of being scored on.

Elberton will return the games next week and will take a stronger team than which represented the Granite City in the series just closed.

The intense rivalry between these two clubs will again draw enormous crowds. Players were the Elberton for the series just closed from a radius of 100 miles.

LaGrange Gets Away With Entire Series

LAGRANGE, Ga., July 19.—LaGrange defeated Talladega by a score of 9 to 3, this being the third and last game of the series with the Alabama bunch, LaGrange taking all three of the games. It was a very good game, though a lengthy one.

Robinson, of LaGrange, made a star catch in the last inning and was greeted with cheers from the audience. Vandergraff and Billingsley succeeded in getting one each over the fence, despite the high winds.

Fourteen home runs have been made in the nine world's baseball series played between the American and National league pennant winners since 1903. Nine of the circuit clouts were made by the American league batsmen. The two by Third Baseman Frank Baker, of the Philadelphia Athletics, against Matthewson and Marquard, of the New York Giants were the most famous. The runs were recorded as follows: 1903, Pat Dougherty, Boston Americans, 2; Sebring, Pittsburg, 2; 1905-1906 and 1907, no home runs made; 1908, Tinken, of Cubs, 1; 1909, Fred Clarke, of Pittsburg, 2; Davy Jones, Detroit, 1; Sam Crawford, Detroit, 1; 1910, Dan Murphy, Athletics, 1; 1911, Frank Baker, Athletics, 2; Rube Oldring, Athletics, 1, 1912, Larry Doyle, New York Giants, 1; Larry Gardner, of Boston Red Sox, one.

First Baptist Wins Double Bill

The first Baptist team walked away with both ends of a double bill from S. V. D. yesterday. The first game was slow, and was featured by the heavy hitting and fast base running of the entire First Baptist team. The second started off a humming pitching battle between Ewing and T. Forbes. The former had everything his way until the seventh inning when an unlucky bobble cost him the game:

Army Pool Teams In Good Matches

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The Fifth artillery team from Fort Sill, Okla., today won a slow and rather uninteresting polo match from a Washington team of army officers by 4 1-4 to 1-4 goals. It was a consolation game, following the elimination trials for the Narragansett Pier matches at which the mounted service team from Fort Riley, Kansas, won the right to represent the army. Fort Sill displayed the better team work today.

The New Zealand rugby football team will reach San Francisco on October 2 and play a series of games for five weeks. In 1914 the California rugby teams will return the visit. The schedule of games arranged to be played by the New Zealand team follows: Saturday, October 4, vs. Olympic club of San Francisco; Wednesday, October 8, vs. the University of California; Saturday, October 11, vs. Barbarians; Wednesday, October 15, vs. Leland Stanford; Saturday, October 18, vs. Leland Stanford; Wednesday, October 22, vs. Santa Clara; Saturday, October 25, vs. California; Wednesday, October 29, vs. Nevada; Saturday, November 1, vs. California; Wednesday, November 5, vs. Santa Clara; Saturday, November 8, vs. Leland Stanford; Sunday, November 9, vs. St. Marys; Saturday, November 15, Americans (picked team) against New Zealand at California field.

Pressmen Win Again

In one of the fastest games ever played on Whitter Mill diamond the Pressmen defeated the Strong Auto Top team. It was a pitchers' battle from start to finish. Pratt for the Pressmen had the best of the deal, striking out seven men and giving up but four hits. Hughes started for the Pressmen and Blake for the Auto Top. The feature of the game was the playing of both teams as they both played hard ball, and gave their pitchers big league support. The Pressmen are climbing up now and are going good, the standing of the Pressmen is now, won six and lost six, which gives them 500. They expect to climb up in the percentage column before the season closes. They have three more games to play and expect to get the big end of it. It was just too much Pressmen and Pratt in this game.

Cleveland's New Charter.

Cleveland, O., with a population of more than half a million, the sixth largest city in the United States, has recently adopted a new charter which embodies the essential purpose of the commission form of government and scores an especially notable victory for the cause of business methods in municipal administration.

The new charter, as summarized by the Louisville Times, provides for the election of a mayor and a legislative body, composed of twenty-six councilmen, one from each ward; and while this number seems at first glance rather large, it is proportionately small when measured by a population of over five hundred and sixty thousand. The Cleveland council will be relatively only about a fourth as numerous as Atlanta's. The councilmen and mayor are the only elective officials, upon them, responsibility for the city's management is centered. Under the mayor's supervision, we are told, are six departments—those of law, public service, public welfare, finance, public safety and public utilities, each department being held strictly accountable for the performance of its duties. The Times continues its summary thus:

"The legislative power vested in the council is subject to the checks imposed by the mayor's power of veto and the people's right to the exercise of the initiative and referendum. Candidates for the mayoralty and the council are nominated by petition. . . Mayor and councilmen are subject to recall. In the case of councilmen six hundred names must be signed to a petition for the recall. The recall of the mayor will be submitted to the voters only after a petition bearing fifteen thousand signatures. Five thousand petitioners can force the submission of an ordinance to council. An added five thousand can force its submission to the voters, should the council fail to enact it. A majority vote will effect its adoption. In all appointments made by the mayor, civil service rules will apply."

This plan while not conforming to the letter of the commission system of government is true to its spirit in that it concentrates responsibility along with authority and brings the control of the city's affairs directly under the power of the people. It magnifies the idea of business and minimizes that of politics, as politics are generally practiced and understood. The commission plan is not rigid and absolute but flexible and relative to the needs and conditions of particular places. It assumes one form in Galveston, another in New Orleans, still another Oakland or St. Paul; but in every instance its distinctive feature is its provision for government that will be at once businesslike and popular. Indeed, we may dispense entirely, if we will, with the term "commission," for, the important thing is not the name but the result which responsible, businesslike management invariably produces when applied to municipal affairs.

Two hundred and eight American cities, representing thirty-four different states, now enjoy this progressive system of government. Among them are scores of communities whose population exceeds fifty thousand and more recently cities like New Orleans, with a population of three hundred and thirty-nine thousand, Memphis with more than a hundred and thirty-one thousand, Birmingham with nearly one hundred and thirty-three thousand, Trenton with approximately a hundred thousand have joined the forward march. The example of Cleveland, the nation's sixth largest city, is exceptionally interesting and significant. The time has evidently come when no truly great and progressive city can afford to continue outworn and inefficient methods in the administration of its public business.

There is enough controversy among city officials and the like to keep the Ananias club going.

The Battle Hill Sanatorium.

It seems to be the general opinion among physicians and laymen who are competent judges of the treatment of tuberculosis that the Battle Hill sanatorium, which is maintained jointly by the City of Atlanta and Fulton county, is a well conducted and entirely trustworthy institution. Though handicapped by the lack of sufficient funds, the sanatorium is rendering faithful and efficient service, if we may judge by the results it accomplishes and accept as valid the testimony of the great majority of its nurses and patients.

In these circumstances, it is to be hoped that the city and county authorities will very carefully scrutinize any effort to interfere with the present administration of the sanatorium. Dr. S. W. Merritt, the physician in charge, has apparently measured up to the high commendations which led to his appointment. The community could ill afford to lose an official who has the ability and character for the discharge of duties so serious.

The Teachers, First.

There can be no doubt that the public sentiment and public judgment of Georgia demand a fair deal for the teachers of our common schools. In every part of the State, good citizens and representative newspapers are insisting that the Legislature devise without further delay some effective plan whereby the teachers may be paid promptly instead of being compelled, as now, to wait for their salaries long months after their services havt been rendered. The people are naturally concerned over a question that bears so vitally upon their homes and their common interests. They realize that the slipshod policy, if continued, will inevitably undermine the usefulness of the schools and sacrifice the progress and well-being of the entire commonwealth. They look to their representatives in the Legislature for protection and relief.

It is evident that the permanent remedy for this grievous injustice to educational affairs lies in a thorough reform of the State's fiscal system, and to that end a well considered plan of tax equalization must be provided. When the taxes of every property owner and of every county are returned on a fair and uniform basis, there will not only be ample funds for those public institutions and enterprises which now are beggarded or forsaken but the average tax burden will be appreciably lighter.

The fruits of such a reform, however, will ripen rather slowly, whereas the problem of teachers' salaries demands the earliest possible solution. When we reflect that up to the middle of June, 1913, not a penny of the two million, five hundred and fifty thousand dollars appropriated to common schools had been paid and that this great gap between duty and performance is growing continually wider, we must perceive the need of instant action. While looking to a better fiscal system as the ultimate cure, we must bestir ourselves to find some immediate relief for the ills that are constantly becoming worse.

The most advisable plan yet proposed for this urgent need is the levy of a special school tax for a period of two years. A bill providing that a constitutional amendment to this effect be submitted to the people is now before the Legislature, having been introduced by Mr. McMichael, of Marion. It contemplates the assessment of one mill for the first year and, for the second year, whatever fraction of a mill may then be necessary to meet the improved situation. We believe the voters of Georgia will heartily indorse such a proposition, for, without imposing any appreciable burden, it will enable the State to deal justly with the teachers and at the same time it will tend to relieve the pressure in other departments of public need.

Certainly, the General Assembly should give the people a chance to avail themselves of this praiseworthy and feasible plan, if they will. The failure to pay teachers' salaries when due has given rise to problems we dare not longer neglect. The State must either meet its responsibilities in this regard, or suffer a woeful decline in its educational interests and, indeed, in every other sphere of its common life.

Senator Smith's Address.

Senator Hoke Smith's recent address to the Georgia Legislature, delivered in response to an invitation from both Houses, was an impressive account of his own stewardship and masterly review of the great work that national Democracy is accomplishing. The position of distinctive leadership which the Senator's colleagues have accorded him enabled him to speak with rare insight and from abundant observation of the constructive program in which Congress and the Wilson administration are so earnestly engaged. His message was that of one laboring in the forerank of those who are building a freer and better order of American government; and, so, his confident prediction of the passage of the tariff bill and of the success of efforts to reshape the currency and banking system to the country's business needs were unusually significant and cheering.

Senator Smith's own record of service is so clear and distinguished as to call for little comment. Since entering the Senate, he has been notably identified with the larger undertakings of that body. His advocacy of educational measures, his stalwart resistance of pension increases that were unjust to the South and to the country at large, his bills for agricultural extension work and kindred enterprises to upbuild farming interests, his untiring labor on important committees and his far-sighted counsel both in the party caucus and on the floor have been not only a credit to himself but an honor to Georgia and the South.

The trouble with that Pittsburg bank was that there were too many waterworks—and probably too much water.

"Large shortage caused bank failure," says a headline, which would seem to be the natural outcome.

Not from any partisan standpoint, but as a matter of vital statistics, we point out that President Wilson's administration has put the Washington team mighty close to second place.

Six Hundred Million A Year for Music.

Through the recent statement by Mr. John C. Freund, editor of Musical America, that the people of the United States spend six hundred million dollars a year on music, we have a new and refreshing insight into our national taste and temper. Such a record reminds us that French thinkers like Bergson are right when they describe this country as being one of wholesome idealism rather than the land of mere money-getting it is commonly supposed to be. A people that spend close to a billion dollar a year for "concord of sweet sounds" is certainly concerned with other aims than that of amassing fortunes or accomplishing material ends.

Mr. Freund's figures appear all the more remarkable when they are analyzed. He shows, for instance, that of the total fund devoted to music only some eight million dollars are expended for opera; more than a third of the entire sum goes for musical tuition, more than a half for tuition, pianos and other musical instruments, a fact which clearly indicates that greatest stress is being placed on "music in the home." It is not simply a cultured or critical few but the rank and file of the people who contribute the six hundred million dollars which is spent in this country every twelvemonth for musical entertainment and education. Nor is it simply in a few of our big cities that a high degree of musical taste is to be found, but, as Musical America remarks,

"In the way-off places where it would least be expected to exist. There are little towns in the South, the far West, the Northwest where they have musical clubs that give entertainments of a high order and where the traveling artist is welcomed with intelligent appreciation. The increase in the number and efficiency of our symphony orchestras alone within the past decade has been enormous. . . . The enthusiastic reception accorded the highest class of music by the multitudes that attend the free open-air concerts in our parks during the summer, the earnest devotion on the tens-of-thousands of our young people who are studying music, not only in our own schools but also abroad; the triumph of the American prima donna, the growing vogue of the American baritone and bass, the marvelous improvement in our church choirs, the success of our music festivals—all combine to force out one logical conclusion."

In no part of America is popular interest in music more manifest than in the South. For four years past the music festival or opera week of the Atlanta Music Festival Association has attracted visitors from every State of this section, as far north as Maryland and as far west as Texas. The box office receipts from seven performances by the Metropolitan Grand Opera company given in this city last April under the auspices of the Association, were more than ninety thousand dollars, a record for the world. Not through these big annual events alone, however, is Atlanta's musical interest, which to an intensified degree is that of the South as a whole, revealed. The Music Festival Association conducts free Sunday afternoon concerts which are attended by audiences numbering from three to five and seven thousand people. The Atlanta Musical Association, another and a distinctive enterprise, has developed a symphony orchestra and is doing much for the enrichment and cultivation of the community's taste. Recitals by touring musicians or by studios are invariably well patronized. Summer concerts in the parks always draw throngs; and our musical conservatories and dealers are distinctly prosperous.

What is true of Atlanta reflects, as we have said, a South-wide spirit. Indeed, this city could never have become the music center it is, had there not been a wide and responsive environment to nurture its interest and sustain its endeavors. The South may well be proud of the fact that in the nation's musical renaissance it is playing a notable and generous part.

Time is money, but it is easier to make up lost time than lost money.

It is well to be able to talk, but there are times when silence is more valuable.

The New Haven's Policy.

Attorney General McReynolds expresses the hope that the resignation of Charles S. Mellen from the presidency of the New Haven railroad indicates "a desire on the part of the road to come more closely within the law than it has."

Whether this wish is to be realized peacefully depends upon the interests that have dominated the New Haven throughout the Mellen administration and which will continue after he has retired. Close observers declare that the physical and financial decline of this great property was due not to any lack of ability on the part of President Mellen, for, he is recognized as one of the country's really masterful railroad upbuilders, but to an insatiate desire to monopolize the field of transportation without regard for the rights of independent enterprises and in defiance of both State and federal law.

Had President Mellen confined his efforts to the railroad business proper, or had he been permitted to do so, the road would doubtless have escaped its present entanglements. The intrusion of over-ambitious or reckless finance into railroad interests is as unfortunate for the railroad as for the public

Too many quarrels are picked before they are ripe.

Many a woman regretted that she didn't change her mind before she changed her name.

"The Younger Novelists"

Every publishing season brings its crop of novels by established favorites, and reputations already made advance, recede, or mark time. But it was characteristic of the spring season of 1913, and surely appropriate, that it marked a very distinct advance in the case of some reputations not so securely established. Mr. H. G. Wells and Mr. Maurice Hewlett gave us their fresh work in the autumn, and there was nothing very new to say about it. Mr. Arnold Bennett has been resting on his oars and turning his attention to dramatization. But such comparative newcomers as Mr. Gilbert Cannan and Mr. Hugh Walpole have been going ahead and producing work, which from many points of view is rather remarkable.

First we note that the fashion for the long novel tracing the hero from his cradle to his grave still holds. It is difficult to say who began it. There was Mr. De Morgan, of course, but he was more of a survival and an anachronism than a pioneer. He had graduated in the school of Dickens and Thackeray, and Joseph Vance was merely the later germination of seed sown in boyhood. Probably Mr. H. G. Wells is more responsible than anybody else for pretty nearly all the latest developments of English fiction, so we may as well give him the credit, or discredit, of the leisurely psychological development so much fancied at present. . . . Whether Mr. Wells began it or not, it is quite certain that his most prominent disciple, Mr. Arnold Bennett, fostered it, and it is equally certain that it still remains the ideal of promising novelists. Mr. Gilbert Cannan's "Round the Corner" and Mr. Hugh Walpole's "Fortitude" both proceed at a very comfortable pace, the first giving us the life history of a family, the second of an individual. There are other and more deep-seated resemblances between the two books; there is a care and a conscientiousness about detail which is a reproach to the facile work of the later Victorian novelists, and there is a common readiness to probe to the bottom of the deeper problems of life which does the writers infinite credit.—Mrs. W. L. Courtney, in the July issue of the North American Review.

The Cave-Dwellers of Grand Canyon

In the island of Grand Canary there is a very interesting community of cave-dwellers. The village of Atalaya, as it is called, is reached by a drive of about eight miles from Las Palmas, during which an ascent of 1,700 feet is made. On reaching the crest of the hill one comes suddenly on a strange sight—a veritable warren, inhabited by human beings, numbering about 1,000 souls in all, who know no other home than caves. These caves have been hollowed out of the volcanic rock, and while many are open to the elements, others have been walled in, leaving an open doorway. In a few cases, where space could be obtained, a room has been built outside. These people are the descendants of the Guanchos—the original inhabitants of the islands—and Spaniards, and eke out a very precarious existence by the manufacture of pottery, which they barter for the necessaries of life. They do not till the land, but are adepts at begging.—From the August Wide World Magazine.

Ballad of Simple Susan

Simple Susan went a-fishing
For to catch a whale;
Wore a costly Paris bonnet
With a spangled veil.

Wore a pair of high heeled slippers
And her silken hose—
Other things wore Simple Susan
As you may suppose.

Wore her newest, tightest pattern
Tube skirt, with a slit—
As a dress display fair Susan
Certainly was "it."

Susan wore her hair in frizzes
And made up her face,
Then she motored off a-fishing
With a languid grace.

Susan didn't take a rod or
Reel or creel or hooks,
And for bait she just depended
On her bonny looks.

Simple Susan went a-fishing.
Luck? Well, pretty fair;
Went a-fishing in the city—
Caught a millionaire!

Quips and Quiddities

An old Scotch lady was compelled to carry an ear trumpet with her wherever she went. Upon visiting a small church in Scotland not long ago she was watched very suspiciously by the sexton until she reached her seat. Then, as if he could stand the suspicion no longer, he went over to her, and shaking a warning finger emphatically, he said: "Madam, one toot and you're oot."—Everybody's Magazine.

"Mamma," asked little three-year-old Freddie, "are we going to heaven some day?"

"Yes, dear, I hope so," was the reply.

"I wish papa would go, too," continued the little fellow.

"Well, and don't you think he will?" asked the mother.

"Oh, no," replied Freddie, "he could not leave his business."

Bridget, who had administered the culinary affairs of the Morse household for many years, was sometimes torn between devotion to her mistress and loyalty to the small son of the house.

"Bridget," said Mrs. Morse, in a tone of wonder, after an inspection of the storeroom, "where have those splendid red apples gone that the man brought yesterday—those four big ones?"

"Well, now, ma'am," said poor Bridget, "I couldn't rightly say, but I'm thinking if you were to find out where my loaf o' hot gingerbread is, likely them four red apples would be lyin' right on top of it, an' I'm only hopin' his little insides can stand the strain."

Two Irishmen were among a class that was being drilled in marching tactics. One was new at the business, and turning to his companion, asked him the meaning of the command, "Halt!" "Why," said Mike, "when he says 'Halt' you just bring the foot that's on the ground to the side av the foot that's in the air an' remain motionless."

At last! New York the Mecca of Dennis O'Brien's desire. Here he would show them in the "ould country" how he could work, and what a name he would make.

Almost immediately he obtained employment in the erecting of a new building, and the following epistle found its way to Erin:

"Faith, this is great! All that I have to do is to climb up and down a forty-bar ladder with bricks and mortar, and, begorra, the men on the top do all the work!"

Along in the 60's Pat Casey pushed a wheelbarrow across the plains from St. Joseph, Mo., to Georgetown, Col. Shortly after that he "struck it rich;" in fact, he was credited with having more wealth than any one else in Colorado. A man of great shrewdness and ability, he was exceedingly sensitive over his inability to read or write. One day an old-timer met him with:

"How are you getting along, Pat?"

"Go 'way from me, now," said Pat, genially; "me head's bustin' wid business. It takes two lid pencils a day to do me wurruk."—Everybody's Magazine.

Poisonous Disinfectants

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN

A few weeks ago the whole country was shocked by the tragic death of B. Sanders Walker, a young banker of Macon, Ga., who swallowed a tablet of bichloride of mercury in the belief that it was a tablet of aspirin. Since public interest was fastened on that particular case, scores of cases have been reported of poisoning by the same method, some of them accidental as in the case of the Georgia banker and many of them intentional. The fact that bichloride of mercury tablets are in common use as disinfectants, and that they may be procured by anybody without any difficulty has caused an inquiry to be made into the dangers to which families are exposed in the homes by reason of the careless handling of poisonous disinfectants. Few families are without one or more disinfectants or germicides upon the medicine shelf or in the store room, and their use ranges from the destruction of various kinds of bacteria that of larger insect pests such as fleas, lice, bed bugs and ticks, the latter occurring chiefly upon domestic animals and cattle. Many of these preparations are sold under various names, and the housekeeper has no means of knowing the extent of risk she is running by their careless use.

Most of the disinfectants in popular use have one of the coal tar products as a basis, and many of them are supposed to be harmless. The increasing number of deaths and poisoning cases from the use of disinfectants led to a series of investigations upon the toxicity of the coal tar disinfectants by the hygienic laboratory connected with the United States public health service. This investigation is still continuing, although a bulletin regarding certain results of the tests made upon well known proprietary disinfectants has just been published for public distribution.

Carbolic acid, which is one of the first and most important of the coal tar products, is used in germicides by its more technical term phenol which for some reason is less deadly by sound than carbolic acid, and, therefore, excites less caution in its use. The housewife who would be alarmed at the careless handling of carbolic acid is frequently indifferent to the word phenol, even if it appears in the formula of a purchased disinfectant. Yet phenol is the term applied to the first and most deadly form of carbolic acid.

One of the series of experiments made at the hygienic laboratory for the purpose of ascertaining the poisonous qualities of commercial disinfectants included the testing of twenty-two of those most frequently seen upon the market and marked as non-poisonous, and administering them in more or less minute doses to mice, cats, guinea pigs and other small animals and noting the effect. Their toxicity was sufficient to cause death both when administered through the stomach or by injection beneath the skin. Most of the experiments accepted in the tests followed preliminary experiments which determined that all phenol disinfectants were poisonous, although not to the degree that pure phenol would be. The continued experiments were to ascertain the degree of poisoning power possessed by a solution varying from 2 1-2 to 20 per cent in strength. In some animals the effect of the poison was evidenced more quickly when administered through the stomach than subcutaneously, while in others the time was about equal.

The sanitary value of the use of disinfectants is greatly overestimated by the average housekeeper who in too many cases trusts to the disinfectant to cover the lack of cleanliness in her home. In many instances a lack of applied soap and water is being covered up by a strong smelling disinfectant, and the health of the family is not by any means insured by the substitution. A few years ago the smell of carbolic acids and similar substances indicated sanitation to the popular mind. This idea should be overcome as, in many instances, it is simply the using of one bad smell to cover up another, and if perfect cleanliness prevailed there would be no bad odor to be concealed. In recognition of this, deodorized disinfectants are being called for, but these are not by any means lacking in toxicity. They should be more carefully handled even than those which are accompanied by a strong odor which in itself is a warning.

The tests made in the hygienic laboratory have established several facts which should continually be kept in mind. One is that any disinfectant which is in any degree effective must be more or less poisonous in its composition. The fact that it is labelled non-poisonous may prove to be misleading. In several cases where a large percentage of toxicity was found in a proprietary germicide labelled harmless, the firm *manufacturing it answered the request of the labora*tory investigators for an explanation by saying that the preparation is harmless if used in a solution of the strength indicated upon the bottle. The label "harmless" is so misleading, however, that little attention is paid to the finely printed directions and cases of poisoning have resulted. Because of the difficulty in knowing the qualities of a disinfectant sold without a formula, the scientists conducting the experiments strongly advocate the securing of a prescription from a reputable physician when the need of a germicide is felt in the home, and the rigid following of the direction for its use which will accompany the same.

The deadliness of carbolic acid is well understood and about a quarter of a century ago the kresol products began to be distilled from coal tar and sold for disinfectant purposes as a substitute for carbolic acid upon the ground that it was less poisonous in its quality. The kresols are of three varieties, the peculiar properties of each of which are only recognizable to the scientific chemist, but it has now been demonstrated that all are quite equal to carbolic acid in their toxicity. The kresols are usually mixed with soap or some alkali when used for disinfecting purposes.

Another coal tar product used largely as a protection from insect life, as well as germicide and disinfectant is naphthaline, one form of which is largely used in the composition of moth balls. Napthaline comes in crystals which are easily compressed into balls. It has a strong odor resembling creosote, camphor and carbolic acid blended. Consequently, in addition to its primary uses of preserving clothing from moth ravages, the napthaline ball is frequently thrown into a sink or drain under the mistaken impression that a deodorant is a disinfectant. In a small city in Indiana a few years ago there still prevailed the primitive custom of permitting farmers to call at the house for waste food products which were thrown into a swill pail and used by the farmer to feed his hogs. In warm weather this poorly cleaned swill bucket, or tub, stood in every back yard, became most offensive in odor, so an up-to-date housewife one day threw into it a handful of the moth balls she had remaining after packing away her winter wardrobe. A few days later an enraged farmer came into see her. He charged her with the death of five of his best hogs, as a local veterinary surgeon had conducted a post mortem examination to determine the cause of death and remains of the moth balls were found and submitted to analysis. These particular balls no doubt possessed unusual strength, and yet napthaline itself is a poisonous product. The mother who permits the balls to be scattered over the house and played with as marbles by young children, as is frequently done, is taking a chance which makes the scientist shudder to think of.

TO MY CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN.

(See "Story of the Star of the West," in the "Confederate Veteran," for May, 1913—pp. 134-6.)

My Children and Grandchildren, list while I tell,
A tale of long, long years ago, to you;
A tale of time before Fort Sumter fell—
a tale almost forgot—I here renew.
'Twas in Buchanan's time, and near its end,
When faith was broken, and attempt was made
To reinforce old Sumter—its strength to mend
With men, supplies and guns—all warlike aid;
'Twas in that lull before the storm began—
That lull before the raging blast of war;
Ninth day of the first month of '61,
The "Star of the West" then crossed the Charleston Bar.
The tale of that first gun—which led the way
To our great war—the one I tell today.

The "Star of the West" was steaming swift and straight
For Sumter—there, her course was cast;
Over the Bar already had she passed.
"O Soldiers, of our small Palmetto State,
Now, aim your guns and fire—ere 'tis too late;
Make ready. Aim. The boat is moving fast!
Behold! on board, supplies and soldiers massed
For Sumter! Cannoneers, no longer wait."
Thus Ripley spake, and gave the first command
To fire on our new foe—so late our friend.
A youth took steady aim along his gun;
That first shot fired—'twas heard throughout the land—
Re-echoes 'monst us, yet, from end to end;
And now, he's old, yet proud of duty done.

Who fired that gun? Of this I fain would tell—
The act of duty, and 'twas nobly done;
It causes, yet, our older hearts to swell
With pride: Your uncle Henry fired that gun!

Wife of Fulton's Ordinary Finds Continual Happiness by Working in Her Flower, Fruit and Vegetable Garden

Mrs. John R. Wilkinson, wife of the ordinary of Fulton county, has found the secret of undying youthfulness of spirit and continual happiness, the antics spirit and continual happiness. The laughter of children, the perfume and beauty of flowers, the antics of an intelligent and companionable dog, and industrious work at times with needle and fingers—these keep Mrs. Wilkinson always with a smile about her lips, and a sparkle in her blue eyes.

Her own son's grown now, but most frequently you will find some bright-faced niece or neighborhood child about the house, and just now little Miss Julia Dent Patterson, of Texas, is sharing the delightful daily life of Mrs. Wilkinson and Gold Dust.

Gold Dust is the dog. He is a big shaggy collie, a thoroughbred, as his fine coloring, slender nose, and registration at the Biltmore kennels prove without a doubt.

Mrs. Wilkinson, Julia and Gold Dust have a great big back yard in which to work and play; and though the judge admits that he has technical title to the place, he cheerfully resigns it to the authority of his wife.

In the garden, which is almost a half city block deep, "Old Miles" shares the authority of his mistress, because, even if he is a black man, he has his own ideas about when vegetables shall be planted and hoed.

Mrs. Wilkinson's garden is unique. It combines the practical with the beautiful, and she takes just as much interest in watching the growth of long-bladed corn, tomatoes, beans and cabbages, that she does in nursing fine chrysonthemums, dahlias and lilies into glorious bloom.

This, indeed, is a democratic garden wherein the queen of flowers nods its fragrant head above okra, beets and radishes. Day lilies, iris, dahlias, sunflowers, feathery asparagus mingle with the common garden vegetables, and about them are tall stalks of corn, peach trees, some of them sprung from seed brought home from Europe in the judge's pocket, grape vines; and even watermelons and cantalopes.

These are all under Mrs. Wilkinson's care, though Old Miles has a private opinion that if it were not for him "the Missus" could not get along at all.

Her tomatoes and onions are her special pride. They are of unusual size, and despite the judge's sniffs of olfactory displeasure when he is about, she exhibits the onions to all who show an interest in her garden.

With flowers she is equally successful. Her chrysanthemums have taken many prizes. She is a member of the Inman Park Chrysanthemum club, and though this year she has chosen dahlias instead of the stately chrysanthemums, she has not lost interest in their culture. She has experimented successfully with the blooms, and has obtained beautiful results.

Her dahlias are already waist high, and are bearing blooms. By fall the big bed will be a mass of vivid color.

Mrs. Wilkinson spends much time outdoors. "I am a country woman at heart," she declares.

Gold Dust is her inseparable companion. He is a beauty, too, and as intelligent as can be. He can do circus tricks, knows how to drink water as it flows from the hydrant and is a fine protector for the household at night.

Since little Miss Julia Dent Patterson came to visit her aunt, she and the dog have adopted each other for playmates. They have merry romps together, and when Mrs. Wilkinson and Julia sit down to sew, Gold Dust stretches himself at their feet and snoozes and dreams.

Mrs. Wilkinson is also an expert embroiderer and crochets beautiful laces. She is interested as well in basketry and has some fine specimens of her own work.

Withal, she has kept slender and healthy, and has a rosy bloom on her cheeks. The best doctor is the garden, and the best beautifier is to work a little—and then work some more at something that one likes—these are Mrs. Wilkinson's precepts in life.

BOARD OF HEALTH URGES WAR AGAINST TYPHOID

Screen Houses Against Fly, Every Case Comes From Pre-Existing Case

Warning against the danger that lurks in every case of typhoid fever, and urging that precaution be taken with each case to prevent its spread to others, the Georgia state board of health issues the following bulletin to the public:

"While typhoid fever is seen the year around, it is most prevalent, as every one knows, in late summer and during the fall; hence the synonym, "autumnal fever." Now, there can be no denying the fact that summer is here, and autumn, having the habit of falling upon us soon after the close of the summer season, a few words to the wise at this time on typhoid fever, we hope, will be sufficient to help check this deadly disease, and it is high time that typhoid was being stopped, too.

"The existence of typhoid fever was recognized 2,413 years ago. How much longer it has been in existence we have no records to show. But surely 2,413 years is long enough to put up with the ravages of a disease that could have been stopped 2,412 years ago. Of course, back in the early centuries it was not known to be a preventable malady. This fact has only been known for a few decades, but it has been long enough for typhoid fever to have been stamped out by this time had the medical profession told the people what was necessary to be done and had the people put these instructions into practice.

"Every case of typhoid fever springs from a pre-existing case and if you are stricken with this malady you can put it down that you are the victim of somebody's carelessness—maybe your own, maybe somebody's else; the results are the same, however, and this carelessness is responsible for more deaths than are bullets, daggers, rattlesnakes and lightning, all put together.

"If one man shoots another, often thousands of dollars are spent in searching for the murderer, trying him and executing him in order that society may in the future be protected against him.

"Not so, though, with a person who deliberately empties out the discharges from a typhoid fever patient without first distinfecting them, and maybe thereby kills indirectly a dozen or more people. You don't believe that typhoid is spread in this way? Then read the history of the Maidstone, England, epidemic, during which one person out of every seventeen in the town developed typhoid fever. If you are still from Missouri, then read the history of the Plymouth, Pa., epidemic, where, as a consequence of an attendant neglecting to disinfect the discharges from a typhoid fever case, the attendant was responsible for the development of 1,200 cases of this disease in a town of 8,000 people, or one case to every seven of the total number of inhabitants, and deaths to the number of 130.

"If a rattlesnake bites a person, a great commotion is made, the neighborhood becomes alarmed, a search is probably instituted to find the snake, and the snake is finally killed to protect the rest of the people from it. But when a case of typhoid occurs in a community the fact is viewed with a complacency that is absolutely astounding. No one tries to find out where it came from, and no one bothers himself to see to it that it is not allowed to spread from Dan to Beersheba—maiming and killing as it goes.

"Everybody recognizes the fact that rattlesnakes are dangerous and should be killed on sight. Why doesn't everybody recognize the fact that typhoid germs are as deadly as rattle-snakes, and go to work and exterminate these germs are as deadly as rattlesnakes, tent done the rattlers?

"And isn't it strange that a man will spend a hundred dollars putting lightning rods on his house to protect himself against the lightning, which rarely ever kills anybody, and yet not spend a cent to screen his kitchen and dining room against the typhoid-carrying flies and the malarial-bearing mosquito."

ADULT PROBATION BILL TO COME UP THIS WEEK

Important Reform Measure Will Probably Pass Senate Unopposed

One of the important general measures scheduled to come up for final action in the senate Monday is the bill legalizing suspension of sentences and providing for the appointment of probation officers in such counties as may need them.

Senator Tarver, author of the bill, will speak in favor the the measure, and Senators Elkins and DuHose will also support it on the floor. It has already been recommended favorably by the judiciary committee, and so far as is known, no opposition has developed.

The probation feature of the bill proposes to apply to adults in special cases, somewhat the same system that is used in juvenile courts in dealing with youthful soffenders—but surrounded with such restrictions and safeguards as to prevent its abuse.

A companion measure, introduced by Representatives Myrick and Gower in the house, has also been recommended favorably. As the law now stands on the statute books of Georgia, it is unlawful for any judge to suspend sentence, no matter what the circumstances.

Ex-Congresman Dead

(By Associated Press.)

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 19.—A telegram from New York today announced the death there of Martin S. Olmsted, congressman from the Eighteenth Pennsylvania district from 1897 to 1903. A week ago Mr. Olmsted went to New York to undergo treatment for a throat affection. Few here knew of his condition and a telegram giving the news of his death caused great surprise.

The Age of Miracles

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

PARIS—M. Carrel, last year's Nobel prize man, who, though he is attached to the Rockefeller Institute, is a Frenchman born and bred, has been lecturing at a Paris hospital on his extraordinary experiments in grafting hearts and other organs. Of course, so far he has not, for obvious reasons, tried his skill on the human form divine. But that may come in time. However, he does not hold out any immediate hopes of the possibility of exchanging hearts, for instance, for when he has made the experiment of grafting an organ from one animal to another the second has always died within a short time of a sort of senile decay. So that though you may take out a dog's heart, for instance, and replace it without cancelling the patient other than a temporary benevidence, it is not the same with a lung from another dog. Hence, he argues, that organs have a sort of unexplained individuality of their own which makes them "not transferable."

NEWS OF ATLANTA THEATERS

A bill of Keith vandeville said to be unusually good will be the attraction for the week at the Forsyth.

John F. Conroy, a life saver, will be the headliner, assisted by his "diving models." Conroy has saved nearly 400 lives. He was awarded a congressional medal by the United States government; he was awarded another medal by the Carnegie hero commission, and the state of Massachusetts presented him with another.

Lester, ventriloquist, will be seen for the first time in several years. Still another feature will be Delro, of accordion fame.

There will be plenty of comedy on this bill for Smith, Cook and Miss Brandeu will supply many hearty laughs.

George Auger and company will offer a comedy novelty.

Shriner and Richards in a comedy number, "Just Nonsense," and the Be Anous in a gymnastic novelty complete the bill.

A photo-play based on Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables" will be the attraction at the Grand matinee and night all of the week commencing with matinee on Monday at 2:30, continuing at night at 8:30, and thereafter at matinee and night daily.

A splendid cast of French players posed before the camera for the production. Henri Krauss, of the Theatre Sarah Bernhardt; Mlle. Ventura, of the Theatre De l'Odeon; La Petit Fromet, of the Theatre du Daurville; Mons. Etievant, of the Theatre de Laporte, and other stars from the most famous theaters in France will be seen in the principal parts. The stage mountings are natural. The scenes have been taken in the exact spots described by Hugo, when he wrote his novel in 1862. Some of the original places remain and in these places the scenes as told in the story have been enacted.

There are nine reels in the production. This means more than 12,000 feet of film. The production will run two hours and a quarter, with the intermissions. Every detail has been given attention. The Grand has been made comfortable, cool and inviting.

Reserved seats will be sold for each performance. Patrons can select their seats in advance—matinees 25 cents, night 25 and 50 cents. The advance sale commenced Thursday with every indication that there will be a lively interest.

Especial interest should attach to next week's attraction at the Bijou, as word has been passed around that it is one of the most expensive and pretentious musical comedy tabloids that has been booked for the Bijou in many weeks.

The title of the attraction is "Good Morning, Judge," the story of which concerns a rich brewer elected to the mayoralty of the village, and who by reason of a special ordinance is forced to act as judge. The brewer dealing out justice in his own way furnishes no end of laughter and good comedy and the various characters that are brought before his honor are types just such as one sees in municipal courts of big cities.

"Good Morning, Judge" has made a great hit throughout the circuit, and has been voted by patrons of amusement everywhere as the liveliest and most up-to-date and sparkling musical comedy that has been offered in the popular priced circuits in recent years.

The cast is headed by Pearl Brothers and Burns, clever comedians, singers and dancers, and will be supported by well known players and assisted by one of the best drilled and elegantly costumed aggregations that has visited the Bijou this season. A dozen musical numbers are promised which include the latest successes that are now being offered in New York roof gardens and cabarets.

The attraction as a whole has all the earmarks of a most successful organization and there is reason to anticipate in next week's attraction a play that will boost musical tabloid in Atlanta as no attraction has done in recent weeks, and the capacity of the popular theater should be tested at every performance. Daily matinees at 3 o'clock, and night shows at 7:30 and 9.

FINE ORGAN PROGRAM FOR TODAY'S CONCERT

Barcarolle Song and an Overture by Mogart to Be Features

The following program is announced by Dr. Percy J. Starnes for the free organ concert this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the auditorium-armory.

Chaminade—"Scarf Dance."

Starnes—Improvisation on "My Old Kentucky Home."

Offenbach—Barcarolle from "Les Contes d'Hoffman."

Rubenstenbach—Fantasy on Swiss Melodies and Tempest in the Alps.

Of the Mozart overture with which he will open the program Dr. Starnes says: "The overture shows in the most striking way what instrumental music can be made to do. What an outburst of unrestrained gaiety he has produced from the first moment when the village ask each other what is about to happen to the last jubilant fanfare. One beautiful merry melody comes after another. The violins hurry in throng to the orchestral rendezvous. Every moment the troop rises, growing louder and louder until it becomes a thunder of jubilation. What brio—what fire—what splendor!"

DECLARES UNCLE SAM IS SHY ON TORPEDOES

Congressman Says There Are Not Enough to Fight One Round

BOSTON, July 19.—"There are not enough torpedoes in this country today to fight one round in a combat with another nation," said Congressman Fred A. Britten, of Illinois, a member of the house naval committee today upon his arrival at the Charlestown navy yard.

With the others of the committee, Mr. Britten is making an inspection of the naval stations on the Atlantic coast.

"Immediately upon my return to Washington," he said, "I shall introduce an order to double the capacity of the torpedo station at Newport."

WOULD REINSTATE NAVAL CAPT. POTTS

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Restoration to the navy active list of Capt. Templin M. Potts, with the rank of rear-admiral, is proposed in a bill introduced by Senator Martin.

Captain Potts recently was retired by the "plucking board." Friends contend he has been the victim of unusual circumstances.

HARD THICK CRUST COVERED BOY'S HEAD

Cracked with Least Pressure, Causing Discharge. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In One Week Entirely Cured.

Bolton, Ga. — "My little boy's head was covered with a hard thick crust which cracked with the least pressure causing a discharge of bloody corruption which was so offensive that I could hardly hold him. He was very cross. Some called it milk crust, another running tetter and another eczema.

"After trying several patent medicines I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using the sample I purchased some Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment three days I was able to remove all the crust and in one week he was entirely cured. Cuticura Soap and Ointment also cured my baby of an ulcerated sore behind her ear and now we think we cannot keep house without them." (Signed) Mrs. Charles Foss, Nov. 5, 1912.

The regular use of Cuticura Soap for toilet and bath not only tends to preserve, purify and beautify the skin, scalp, hair and hands, but assists in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the skin. Cuticura Soap (25c.) and Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

Poor Old Russia Hasn't Even Heard of Silhouette Gowns Yet

But It Has Seen Slit Gowns—One of Them—And Now No One's So Bold as to Try to Introduce Another—Russian Student in Atlanta Says America's Too Noisy for Him

That the women are asking the suffrage and wearing the split skirt even in Russia, and that they've made small progress as yet with either of their innovations, is told by Nicolas Klein, a technological student of the government school in Riga, Russia, who has come to America with two fellow students to spend a month here in observation of technical work in the United States.

Riga, a city of 500,000 people, founded in 1201, is the capital of one of the Russian Baltic provinces, Lieviand. Yet even that far north the women have been enlisted to get the vote for their sex. A year ago they presented a long petition to the Russian duma (senate) for the franchise.

And as to the split skirt, he says Riga would not permit it.

"One woman wearing a split skirt from Paris walked out upon the street about a year ago," says he. "They nearly mobbed her. Since then no more split skirts."

They have not heard of the silhouette gown there yet, he added.

VISITING IN ATLANTA.

The young Russian talked interestingly on his country and of his impressions of America Thursday afternoon in the office of Dr. B. Wildauer, whose home was in Riga years ago. Klein is spending several days in Atlanta, visiting his uncle, Sampel Klein, of 80 East Ellis street. With Boris Alfioroff and Adolf Guttman, fellow students at Riga, he arrived at New York on July 6. His companions remained in New York, under patronage of the Russian consulate there, while he came south. He expects to look over the Georgia School of Technology before he rejoins them. Then they will spend the remainder of their visit in inspecting technological schools within easy reach of New York and perhaps in working a few days at the benches in some of the big establishments near the metropolis.

Young Klein talks no English. Because of Russia's hostile attitude toward his co-religionists, the fact that he was selected by the faculty of his school to make the trip is construed as a distinct compliment to his ability as a student.

AMERICA TOO NOISY.

"America is too noisy," said he Thursday, with an air of apology for making the criticism. "Everybody is in such a hurry. Life looks forced here. In Riga we are more conservative. By 10 o'clock at night all is quiet there."

In Riga, said he, one may tell by the dress of a man whether he is a doctor, lawyer, merchant—or thief. In America, he has noticed, nothing may be told by a man's attire. "Everybody looks educated here," is his comment. He believes that in this regard the United States is much advanced over Riga.

Klein has attended the Riga school four years, and has two more to continue. He is twenty-three years old. The school itself was founded fifty years ago, he said, and has 1,900 students now.

He and his two companions are students in mechanical engineering. They will make their reports to the faculty, with recommendations for improvements in the Riga curriculum that their American observations suggest.

The trip which he and his fellow students are making marks the beginning of a new policy in the government schools, said he Thursday, a policy which is to reach out and gather from other parts of the world better ideas in technological training. Previous attempts were made to inaugurate the policy, said he, but they amounted to nothing. It is expected that each year from now on some students of the Riga school at least will be sent to America.

ROCKEFELLER TO FINANCE WORLD HEALTH CAMPAIGN

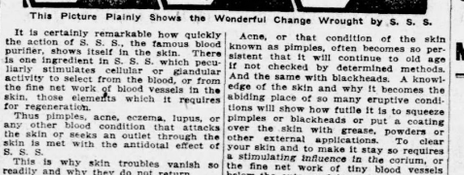
(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, July 19.—The international health campaign referred to by Ambassador Page in a recent speech in England, is to be conducted by the Rockefeller foundation. This was admitted today by Starr J. Murphy, who has charge of the charities of John D. Rockefeller.

The foundation, Mr. Murphy expained, planned specifically to make a study of the hook worm disease throughout the world similar to that already instituted in the United States. This would probably be followed, he said, by investigation into other health conditions.

Makes Blotchy Skin Free of All Blemish

The Most Obstinate Skin Afflictions and Eruptions from Poisoned Blood Are Completely Cured Quickly.



This Picture Plainly Shows the Wonderful Change Wrought by S. S. S.

It is certainly remarkable how quickly the action of S. S. S., the famous blood purifier, shows itself in the skin. There is one ingredient in S. S. S. which peculiarly stimulates cellular or glandular activity to select from the blood, or from the fine net work of blood vessels in the skin, those elements which it requires for regeneration.

Thus pimples, acne, eczema, lupus, or any other blood condition that attacks the skin or scalp, is constantly met with the antidotal effect of S. S. S.

This is why skin troubles vanish so readily and why they do not return.

Under the influence of S. S. S. this fine net work of blood vessels in the skin is constantly selecting from the blood the nutrition required for healthy tissue and the cause of disease is just as constantly being removed, scattered and rendered harmless.

It is a great mistake to rely upon cathartics to cure pimples or other facial eruptions. Not only do cathartics cause chronic constipation, but they thin the blood of its valuable and essential preservatives.

Acne, or that condition of the skin known as pimples, often becomes so persistent that it will continue to old age if not checked by determined methods. And the same with blackheads. A knowledge of the skin and why it becomes the abiding place of so many eruptive conditions will show how futile it is to squeeze pimples or blackheads or put a coating over the skin with grease, powders or other external applications. To clear your skin and to make it stay so requires a stimulating influence in the corium, or fine net work of tiny blood vessels below the outer and inner layers of skin.

You will be surprised and delighted at the quick change if you use S. S. S., the famous blood purifier. Its action in the skin is quite sensational. These facts are more fully explained in a book on skin troubles sent by The Swift Specific Co., 195 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores. Get a bottle to-day and banish all skin afflictions.

When you ask for S. S. S., look out for the common trick of trying to sell you something else. Don't be misled.

No man is Stronger Than his Stomach

LET the greatest athlete have dyspepsia and his strength will soon fail. One's stamina—forcefulness and strength of mind or muscle depend upon the blood, and the blood in turn, requires a healthy stomach, for the stomach is the laboratory where the food is digested and such elements are taken up—or assimilated—which make blood. In consequence all the organs of the body, such as heart, lungs, liver and kidneys, as well as the nervous system, feel the bad effect if the stomach is deranged.

The Medical Adviser by R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y. answers hosts of delicate questions about which every man or woman, single or married ought to know. Sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay for wrapping and mailing.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

helps the stomach to digest food properly, starts the liver into new activity, removing the poisons from the blood, and the various organs get rich, red blood, instead of being ill-y nourished. The refreshing influence of this extract of native medicinal plants has been favorably known for over 40 years. Everywhere some neighbor can tell you of the good it has done.

Sold by all medicine dealers in liquid or tablet form or send 50 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, and a trial box will be mailed you.

"HO, FOR ATLANTA AND THE BIG TIME THERE IN AUGUST"

That's the Slogan Now of All the Most Progressive Retailers Located in Eleven Southern States

SECRETARY MAILS 25,000 LETTERS OF INVITATION

Twenty Bags Bulging With 100,000 Pieces of Mail Matter Telling of Meeting Were Posted Yesterday

Twenty-five thousand letters started on their journey yesterday to retailers in all parts of the south, bearing invitations to them to attend the two weeks' convention of the Southern Merchants' association to be held here August 4-16.

The convention is to be held under the auspices of the Merchants and Manufacturers' association and Secretary Harry T. Moore, of this association, has been busy with a large force of assistants for the past six weeks getting ready the vast volume of mail that was sent to the postoffice yesterday. The work required the services of fourteen persons which during the last two weeks had to be supplemented by a night force of five.

Each of the 25,000 letters contained an engraved invitation to the recipient to attend the merchants' convention as a delegate, a copy of the program and a stamp acceptance card. The work of mailing, therefore, required the handling of 100,000 pieces of matter, filling twenty mail sacks. The letters went to dealers in eleven states, namely, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Virginia, Tennessee, Louisiana, North Carolina, South Carolina, Arkansas, Texas and Mississippi.

It was a busy scene that greeted the visitor at Mr. Moore's office, a picture of which is printed on the next page of today's Firing Line. The workers were gathered about a long table on which were piled the pieces of mail. These were folded, placed in the stamped envelopes and then packed in boxes with the name of the state to which they were to be sent written on the top of the box for the more rapid handling of them by the postoffice authorities. The mail bags were then stuffed with the boxes and laid aside for arrival of the postoffice wagons.

It was a stupendous piece of work and Secretary Moore breathed a sigh of relief as it was finished.

"It was indeed a big job," said he, "but it was worth all the trouble which we took and more, for, in my opinion, those invitations will bring to Atlanta one of the greatest conventions of progressive merchants ever assembled in any section of the country and the subjects to be discussed at the meeting will prove of the greatest value to all southern mercantile interests."

The opening session of the convention will be called to order at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning August 5. Addresses of welcome will be delivered by Governor Slaton and Mayor Woodward, R. O. Cowart, of Griffin, vice president of the association, will deliver the response to the welcome addresses. The invocation will be by Bishop Warren A. Candler.

The program of subjects for discussion which has been published heretofore promises to be of lively interest, particularly the "Open Parliament," which will follow the presentation of each of the main topics of the day. This general discussion will give every one a chance to present his views and the interchange of experiences brought about will undoubtedly prove of lasting benefit to every one who attends the meetings. Practical good is to be the keynote of all the deliberations.

The entertainment program, which has also been published, provides a wide variety of amusement—theater parties, sightseeing trips, receptions, and attendance at the baseball games.

Already "Atlanta and the Big Time in August" has become the leading topic with the alert retailers of the south.

The officers of the association wish to state that any good merchant in the southern states who does not receive his invitation in a week should notify secretary Moore, and a second incitation will be mailed him.

MERCHANTS TO MARCH IN BEHALF OF NEEDED LAWS

GIDEONS LEAVE FOR TORONTO ON TUESDAY

Expect to Have Big Time at First International Gideon Convention

At the Gideon meeting this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the convention hall of the Piedmont hotel, State President A. F. Tood will speak on the subject, "Where and Why the Bible Should be Read." Invitations have been sent to all the ministers of the city to be present and a large attendance is expected. The public is cordially invited to attend. In addition to Mr. Tood others are expected to speak on the subject.

The Toronto delegation consisting of A. F. Tood, state president; C. H. Burge, president of the Atlanta camp; Edgar Oliver, national vice president; Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Hatcher, and H. A. McDonald and daughter, will leave Tuesday for Toronto to attend the national Gideon meeting. They will go by way of Cincinnati, Cleveland and Niagara Falls.

The convention lasts from July 24 to 27.

This will be the first international convention of Gideons ever held. The city of Toronto has contributed quite a sum for the entertainment of the visitors and the street railroads will ride the Gideons free on their cars during the four days of the convention.

The Toronto Gideons say they will eclipse our convention held here last July.

The Georgia delegation may carry along a few Georgia watermelons and peaches to show the "Kanucks" what they have in Dixie.

HOTEL BILL RECEIVES FAVORABLE REPORT

Measure Meets Little or No Opposition Before the Committee of the House

The bill providing for a state hotel inspector drawn by W. A. Webb for the United Commercial travelers and introduced in the legislature by Representative C. H. Stone of Taliaferro county, received a favorable report last week from the house committee on sanitation and hygiene.

The bill met with little or no opposition in the committee and it is expected now that none will develop.

M. M. Atterson, chairman of the legislative committee of the T. P. A., stated last week that he would indorse and support the U. C. T. bill with a few slight amendments.

JONES BROS.' CO. SALT NEW CROP CUCUMBERS

W. R. Simpson, vice president of Jones Bros. & Co., spent part of last week at Ellenwood, Ga., receiving deliveries of new crop cucumbers from the growers of that section. The company has recently installed at Ellenwood, Ga., an up-to-date salting station, where the cucumbers are placed in brine and later brought to the factory in Atlanta and made into pickles.

"Since July 1 I have bought for the Ellenwood station 1,500 bushels of cucumbers, and they are among the finest cucumbers I have ever seen grown. They are curing out in brine to perfection. If the weather is seasonable, I expect that the 100 acres in cucumbers at Ellenwood will produce at least 10,000 bushels. This will be the first pickles to be made by us from southern grown cucumbers, and they will be on the market from our plant here by October 1. The cucumbers that we are now receiving will make as fine pickles as can be produced anywhere."

HOW BIG COMPANY PLANS TO DEVELOP NEW IDEAS

Each Liquid Carbonic Company Manager to Visit All of Concern's Other Branches

How ideas—any ideas new and progressive—are sought after and fostered and developed at great expense by the large business houses, is well illustrated by a policy inaugurated at the recent meeting of managers of the big national soda fountain concern, the Liquid Carbonic company, held at Chicago.

Purely for the reason mentioned, this company are having the managers of each of their branches all over the United States visit the other branches and spend a week at each.

This great outlay in expense and time of the managers, each taking two or three months' time and traveling several thousands of miles, is with the single purpose of developing new ideas by having the managers get in closer touch with each other and see how the other branches are operated.

That doing the mass of routine work—even the routine managerial work—is really a small part of the task before a manager who would develop his organization to high efficiency is recognized by the big companies. Really new and valuable ideas that seem simple after once in operation are so slow of conception that concerns like the Liquid company are going to great expense in many ways to develop them.

H. H. Ware, manager of the branch in Atlanta, is now visiting other branches and will be away for several weeks yet. Upon his return the managers from several other cities will spend some time in Atlanta.

BUILDING FOR PERMANENT EXHIBIT IS SELECTED

Suggestion of Sub-Committee Awaits Final Decision Before Being Made Public

The sub-committee, consisting of Brooks Morgan, V. H. Kreighbaher J. K. Orr and Rolling Jones, who have been working on the manufacturers exhibit building proposition, have selected a building which they will suggest be purchased for this purpose.

Monday the committee will make a report of the plans they have worked out during the last ten days, showing the building selected, the divisions of space and the rental to charge exhibitors, and suggest that a special meeting of the directors of the chamber of commerce be called to consider this report.

Within a few days announcement can likely be made of the building agreed upon and the arrangements under which the exhibitors can rent space. Brooks Morgan, of the committee, states that they have worked out what they believe is an entirely satisfactory solution to the building question and expect to be ready to start making space assignments to the manufacturers very soon.

THORNTON NOW WITH J. H. EVERETT & SON

G. W. Thornton, who has ben covering Georgia, Florida and Alabama for an out-of-town grain company, is now in the circle of Atlanta firing liners.

Mr. Thornton has gone with J. H. Everett & Son and will have charge of their hay and grain trade.

He has been in this line for a number of years and is well known to men in the business in this territory. He will personally look after the concern's wholesale trade in Atlanta.

ATLANTA JOBBERS FEAR NO SORT OF COMPETITION

They Show That Atlanta's Wholesale Market Is Scoring Bigger and Bigger Gains and Successes Every Year

ITS ADVANTAGES WIN FROM EASTERN CITIES

Its Nearness and Adaptability to Southern Territory Gives It Long Stride Over All Northern Markets

That competition is the life of trade is attested anew by Atlanta jobbers and wholesalers. Without reserve the wholesalers here say that they fear nothing from competition, but look upon it as a business booster and builder.

In fact, the jobbers here after a good spring and summer business and with the approach of what promises to be an active fall season are pointing with pride to the enlarging success of Atlanta as a wholesale distributing center. Its success, they say, depends upon some very simple factors, namely, the nearness and adaptability of Atlanta to the southern territory, and the fact that the buyers for Atlanta houses can and do buy in the markets of the world merchandise of as good quality and of as low price as can be obtained by firms anywhere.

Because of these advantages the jobbers here delight to point to the fact that they are continually winning customers away from the northern and eastern markets and making them lasting patrons of benefits that the Atlanta market affords.

"Atlanta is showing the biggest assortment of merchandise adaptable to this section of any market in the world," said C. J. Williamson, of the dry goods firm of Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company. "We have too much sense to ask more for it than any merchants can buy it at elsewhere. We fear no competition, but invite all merchants here to an open market."

"With the completeness of our stock and with our buying and shipping facilities," said R. R. Rambo, of the dry goods firm of John Silvey & Co., "there is no reason for merchants going elsewhere to look for good assortments. And we have never had any trouble about prices. In fact, we are constantly weaning away from the northern and eastern markets and making them patrons of the Atlanta market."

"It is with great pleasure and pardonable pride," said L. P. Rosen, of J. Regenstein company, wholesale millinery goods, and high appreciation that we would like to express our thanks to our friends and customers for making it possible for us to state with all honesty and truthfulness that so far the year 1913 has been the most successful in the history of our fifty-three years' establishment in Atlanta as a wholesale millinery house.

"This shows that 'the trade' has come to realize where to get millinery that is strictly adaptable to this territory, where to get millinery that is right priced, and service that is unequaled in any market.

"Atlanta today is conceded to be a wholesale millinery center second to none and the logical one for all southern territory."

"I regard Atlanta as the best market in the south," said Willis E. Ragan, of the Ragan-Malone company. "Every known industry is represented here by jobbers, factories and stores. We have the proud distinction of doing an enor*mous business with the retail* merchants and department stores in Atlanta. The reason? We carry the stocks and our prices are low as the low as the lowest, the Ragan-Malone low as the lowest. The Ragan-Malone company would be delighted to duplicate the prices on any bill sold in this section of the south by any competitor, north, east, west or south."

"You ask how much competition helps

GEORGIA RETAILERS WILL INVADE STATE HOUSE ON MONDAY

After Opening Session of Convention, Members Will March in Body to Capitol to Urge Important Laws

1,000 MARCHERS ARE EXPECTED IN LINE

All Atlanta Retailers Invited to Attend Meeting and Join March for New Garnishment and Check Bills

One thousand Georgia retail merchants will march on the state capitol Monday.

They will not go for the purpose of laying seige to and canturing the state house, except in a figurative sense. They want two very important bills passed, which will be of great benefit to the entire mercantile interests of the state, and they will visit the capitol for the purpose of seeing senators and members of the house and of impressing upon them the value and need of the legislation sought.

The members of the Retail Merchants' association will convene in Atlanta Monday morning at 9 o'clock in the convention hall of the Ansley hotel for a three days' session. After a short address by Wilmer L. Moore, president of the chamber of commerce, the convention will go into executive session and will immediately thereafter march in a body to the capitol, where the members will see their various representatives in the interest of the desired legislation.

The two bills for which the retailers of the state have long fought are known as the fraudulent check bill and the garnishment bill. The former would make it a misdemeanor to issue a check for which there are no funds in the bank, and the latter would amend the present garnishment law to make it more nearly equitable to the mercantile interests.

Both bills are now pending in the senate and are nearing their final consideration in that body.

The main object of the meeting of the retailers in Atlanta this year was that the merchants might have the opportunity of urging this legislation personally upon the members of the Georgia assembly. Therefore the program for the three days' session will consist of little else than work in the interest of the two bills.

The officers of the retailers' association are especially anxious that all retailers of Atlanta, whether they are members of the association or not, be present at the meeting Monday and go with the convention members on their march to the capitol.

HIRSHBERG CO. GETTING READY FOR CONVENTION

Fitting Out Special Sample Room With Display of Holiday Goods

In preparation for the coming merchants' convention, the Hirshberg company have been busy for several days preparing a special sample room for the display of their line of holiday goods.

In this display the firm will show not only their full line of Christmas goods, but also a careful selection of holiday goods which are good sellers throughout the year.

Last year they arranged a similar special display in which visiting merchants were much interested, and expect to be ready with an even better layout August 4 for the visitors to this year's convention.

Most of the new samples for this showing were received from the manufacturers last week.

"HE WAS LONG ON THE OUTLOOK"

NATIONAL T. P. A. BOARD NAMES NEW COMMITTEES

Former Director Broyles Writes Valuable Article on Advantages of Membership

R. A. Broyles, for two years national T. P. A. director for Georgia, returned last week from St. Louis where he attended the first meeting of the national board since the Richmond convention and the last meeting of his two year term as director.

Mr. Broyles brings back most encouraging reports not only of the growth of the organization but of the harmony and team work with which the new president and his directors are starting off the new year. It is gratifying to note from the last report of the membership committee shows that the Georgia division with 1,588 members has surpassed the Tennessee division with 1,561 members and is now in class A, having by its membership increase retired Tennessee from class A, to class B.

In retiring from the board Mr. Broyles made a farewell speech which brought him the congratulations not only of his friends but also his former opponents in that body.

Magazine—Ashby Miller, G. V. Steffens, J. M. Bull.

Hotel—V. J. Shoenecker, J. J. Moriarty, Ben G. Thom .

Legislative—W. O. Hudson, J. M. Bull, J. J. Moriarty.

National office and finance—J. M. Bull, Ashby Miller, V. J. Shoenecker.

Good roads—J. J. Moriarty, George V. Steffens, W. O. Hudson.

Ritual—George E. Begerow, H. J. Goessling, J. J. Moriarty.

Mr. Broyles who was recently named chairman of the railroad committee of the Georgia division of the state board of directors, has written for the T. P. A. Magazine the following interesting article on the advantages of membership in the T. P. A. aside from its splendid insurance features:

Editor T. P. A. Magazine:

It occurs to me if you would run a series of articles by your able pen and older members of the association, upon the important subject of what the T. P. A. stands for, its purposes, objects, etc., it would prove of inestimable value to the membership in the way of information, as well as make very interesting reading.

In my judgment there is entirely too much diversity of opinion as to the objects to be attained. A great percentage of our members have been led to believe we are an insurance institution pure and simple and that becoming members, carries with it no other responsibilities than paying dues semi-annually.

While I concede this department of our work to be of great importance, in as much as it furnishes magnificent protection to our self and family, yet the incentive to join for that alone is to appeal altogether to a spirit of selfishness, which should be lost sight of in view of the great good we may do to others by the exercise of the talents and influence given us by an all wise and ever beneficent providence.

Again (in my opinion) the insurance feature is subsidiary to and second in importance to the main object in view, as set forth in our constitution, viz, "to obtain better railroad and hotel rates and facilities."

To illustrate, if you were to unite a party, of friends to spend a week at your house, doubtless the motive actuating you would be to have their society. As a matter of course you would feed them while your guests, but the suggestion that you either invited them or that they accepted your invitation weekly to satisfy the inner man would be preposterous.

Likewise with our association we invite those who are eligible and worthy to join us in a great movement to elevate the profession to aid in the passage of just and equitable laws, to combat (in unison) that which is unfair wherever it exhibits itself, to obtain such railroad and hotel rates as is compatible with reason and to perform any other duty incumbent upon a member and a "national chamber of commerce," (for we are nothing else), whose motto is to build, not to destroy, to lift up, not drag down.

Again to illustrate, the constitution provides that our national directors' legitimate expenses must be paid and $10 per diem allowed while attending board meetings, but no one would contend the payment of these expenses was the object to be attained. To the contrary, we brand the reason for allowing these expenses was to secure the attendance of the board at the national office to transact the business there.

So it is with our insurance. We gather together in our organization those engaged in commerce for the great and lofty purpose (aforesaid) of helping one another in the common cause of elevating our profession, obtaining (not what we can secure) privileges to which we are entitled, and while engaged in this laudable work incidentally offer them the finest of protection to themselves and family at the lowest possible rate.

I sincerely believe if those facts were properly set forth to each member whose application is sought, we would not only have more, but better members, that the very name of T. P. A. would become synonymous with growth and advancement.

If it pleases you at an opportune time I desire to submit again more fully my views on the great advantages of our insurance feature and also to touch upon the duties of our national chairmen in their various departments.

Sincerely,

R. A. BROYLES.

Atlanta, Ga., July 18, 1913.

COOPER COMPLAINS OF BAGGAGE HANDLING

Says Jacksonville Division of S. A. L. Is Rough on Sample Trunks

Editor Firing Line:

Knowing that the publicity in your paper caused one road in Georgia to improve the way in which baggage was being handled, I beg to make complaint through your Sunday edition relative to the Seaboard Air Line from Jacksonville to Savannah.

Baggage is thrown out of car doors on the ground. No pretense whatever is made to place same on platforms or trucks as prescribed by the Georgia railroad commission.

Traveling men on that division have written to the general superintendent commplaining about the way trunks are handled, but it has done no good.

On one trip a man riding on a pass was asked to watch how the crew unloaded baggage, but do you know that when a man presents a pass to the conductor all the crew know it; the word is passed that "one of those things" got on, and you should note the improvement in handling baggage.

At Woodbine the other day the traveling auditor was aboard. The baggage car was backed and his trunks were gently lifted out of the car on to trucks.

The auditor got off at Woodbine, and when the train pulled in to Kingsland, two hat trunks were dumped out of the car on the ground in a hard rain.

There is one thing sure, if the general manager of a factory or wholesale house was as careless and indifferent to customers as the officials of the Seaboard Air Line seem to be about gently handling of trunks on this road, the wholesale house would soon go into bankruptcy.

Something has got to be done on that road.

Another amusing thing on the north end of the Seaboard Air Line—let a stranger get on and the whole crew make it their business to find out what his business is. I heard a conductor tell an agent at Yulee once to find out what a certain man's business was that got off at Yulee. The conductor had an idea the stranger was a spotter, although he carried a drummer's sample case.

I feel quite sure that the railroad companies would save a lot of money in claims for damaged freight and trunks if they would employ a spotter with a drummer's sample case to watch the unloading of freight cars and baggage from regular passenger trains.

Yours truly,

JNO. M. COOPER.

a market?" said J. K. Orr, president of the J. K. Orr Shoe company. "My best answer would be to tell you that that's the reason we moved to Atlanta some sixteen years ago. At that time we had a prosperous wholesale shoe business in Columbus, but we were the only house there. We felt the need of a market, and decided upon Atlanta, which then had six strong shoe firms.

"In those sixteen years we have doubled our Columbus business four times, so you see 'competition is the real life of trade.'

"In the shoe business no city or section can dominate the trade. Every market in the United States enters the Atlanta territory, and the fir or factory that cannot stand that kind of competition has got to get out.

"Certain markets get repute in special lines. The story is told that made-in-Atlanta furniture is sometimes branded Grand Rapids and sold in Atlanta at a better prot. And yet last week we made a shipment of shoes to Grand Rapids, Mich.

"Three new shoe houses have come to Atlanta in the last few years, and we are told another shoe factory is now being built near Atlanta. So you see the shoe industry thrives on competition.

"We tried this out last winter in Central America, and found no hindrance to placing Atlanta-made shoes in every port we visited.

"Every dealer must figure for himself the advantage of being near a reliable market, and we think the alert merchants who come to Atlanta appreciate the value to them of a nearby dependable base of supplies."

W. J. THEBAUT TO TRAVEL FOR DIXIE PICKLE CO.

A new addition to the sales force of the Dixie Pickle and Preserving company is W. J. Thebaut.

Mr. Thebaut was formerly on the firing line here working the city trade for the H. J. Heinz company and was later manager of their branch in Atlanta. He then traveled Mississippi for the Gate City Coffin company for two years.

Because Mississippi was too far from home for him he is now back in his old line and will be on the road for the Dixie concern making his headquarters in Atlanta.

SHACKELFORD WRITES OF HOTEL BILL'S PROGRESS

Says U. C. T. Wants No Delay in Enacting This Measure Into Law

Editor Firing Line:

The bill to create office of the hotel commissioner was introduced in the house Monday by Mr. C. H. Stone. We, the committee of the traveling men, met with the hotel association and endeavored to get them to get the legislative committee before the hotel association, to work in harmony with us on this bill. While they gave us to understand that they were not opposed to a hotel inspector, or any reasonable hotel regulations, we were unable to get them to do anything at this meeting of the legislature.

We had a joint meeting by the invitation of the hotel association. Naturally our understanding was that it was their intention to work with us at this meeting of the legislature. But we butted up against a snag , right at the outstart, as the hotel men who were members of their committee did not seem to have any say at all. Their lawyer was the whole show, and nothing but delay would suit him.

He was with us assuring us that the hotel men knew that we needed the legislature, but whenever we talked business he was for delaying all legislation until next year. We expained to him that we could not delay, as our instructions were to get an inspector at this meeting of the legislature. We tried by every means known to us to get him just to say that even if this committee could not indorse the inspector they would at least not fight it. But his answer was that if we did not delay the bill until next year, that they would fight any bill that we introdduced.

The traveling public is a friend of the hotel men, and the hotel men's prosperity depends on them. I here again say that, as a whole, the hotel men and the traveling men are the best of friends, one feeling and knowing their interests are mutual. Well, gentlemen of the hotel association, we would have been delighted to have had you with us, but as this was impossible, and as we will get the hotel inspector without your aid, let us still remain friends.

Atlanta Invites Competition

In no uncertain terms we want to correct any impression that may have arisen out of a recent publication about the City Council requiring a license tax upon visiting salesmen selling to the consumer.

This matter has never come up in any meeting of our association. In fact, our members are believers in an open market; all of them sell their goods in the open markets of the world, and visiting merchants can rest assured that we desire them to have every opportunity to compare prices and values with any and all competition.

The meeting of the Southern Merchants Association has for its purpose the upbuliding and betterment of the merchants of the South, and we are more concerned in its success than in any mere matter of selling merchandise.

MERCHANTS' WEEK WILL BENEFIT EVERY RETAILER

Sales Manager of Big Grocery Firm Knows Advantages of August Meeting

Editor Firing Line:

Replying to your inquiry as to the advisability of the retail merchant taking from his business the time and the money necessary for the expenses of the trip to the Merchants' convention. There are not many ways of picking up information thatare better than mixing around with folks and things.

Now of an instance some years ago where a little drummer slipped off from his regular trip and went to a barbecue made a lot of new acquaintances—fine fellows—and had a good day of it. Among other things that he picked up was the information that the Newnan Cotton mills instead of junking its bagging and ties put it up in sets, just enough bagging and just enough ties to the bundle to cover a bale of cotton. The drummer sold bagging and ties and as business had been quiet for a while, when he reached Newnan he looked up Mr. Lovejoy the secretary and treasurer, and inspected these sets and closed a deal taking the entire output. The next day he sold to Will Brannon, of Moreland; Banks & Arnold, at Grantville; J. L. Hightower, at Hogansville; Neal Truitt and Joe Dunson, at La-Grange, the whole lot, and cleaned up enough profit for the H.Y. McCord company to go a long ways toward paying his salary and expenses for that month. The Newnan Cotton mills made a good sale and were well pleased. They closed their output in one deal. These merchants bought as good bagging and ties and sold to farmers at less than they could get the regular stock.

VALUE OF MIXING.

There are just lots of valuable little things to be picked up, by mixing around, and there is no place in this country that has more good things for the merchants than Atlanta, and there is nobody that has more interest in knowing about it than the retail merchan, and by being in Atlanta at the Merchants' convention he has the double advantage of mixing with the jobbers and manufacturers and other retail merchants. There are no smarter business folks than the successful retail merchants, but even the retail merchant doesn't know it all.

In a Georgia toyn I knew an old fellow—he was a fine old fellow—and during a conversation he stated that he never did and never would make a report to the commercial agencies—that he didn't buy goods from but two or three concerns and they would ship him anything he wanted, and that was true. He was good for anything he would buy, but when the hustling young fellows began to put up around him, times got so hard and trade so dull that the old fellow had to quit—he quit mixing around. Fortunately, years ago when he did mix around, he saved up enough so that his old age was not financially tragical.

It is good to know the fellow you are buying from—what he looks like—how he talks. You don't know how often, with this information, certain peculiarities are overlooked and frequently a trade is made that otherwise would be prevented from—well, say prejudice.

KNOW PEOPLE.

It is a good thing to know the fellow that you are not buying from. In mixing around you can possibly find where you have been losing money by not buying sometimes from somebody else, and retail merchants will find in Atlanta lots of jobbers, lots of manufacturers, that I suspect they have not been buying goods from. During that week the retail merchant can mix with retail merchants from all sections of the country—inquire around and hunt up some retail merchant from another section who is running a successful business, and mix with him, sit down over a glass of buttermilk, tell about his business and let the other tell about his. The chances are two to one that both will learn something and find the time profitably spent and the buttermilk good.

You know there are lots of good merchants whose world of activity extends only to his store and to his line of customers that come into his store, and it would be good for him to get out occasionally and mix around. As a general proposition it is a safe investment, or an "order" well placed for the merchant to get acquainted with the jobbers and manufacturers—those that he deals with and those that he does not deal with, and also with the other retail merchants.

Yours very truly,
E. M. HUDSON,
Salesmanager of McCord-Stewart Co.

SALESMAN FARILL PROVES HIMSELF LONG ON SALES OF SHORTS FEED

The illustration shows in the upper left hand corner C. D. Farill and in the large picture is shown Homer B. Harris directing sacking of the blended shorts in the Duncan mixing plant.

New Mixing Plant at the Duncan Company Has Capacity of Three Carloads a Day, Shorts Sales Season Now in Full Blast

Will he lead again?

C. D. Farill was the big shorts salesman for the W. S. Duncan company last year. The 1913 season for selling this specialty of the Duncan firm is starting now with keen rivalry between the firing liners for the largest season's sales, with the others out to take first place from last year's leader.

Mr. Farill keeps things active for his concern in his northeast Georgia territory all the year, but it is along in July, when the time starts for the big orders on shorts, that he is in his element and begins firing orders in nearly as fast as the Duncan mixing plant can get the goods blended and sacked.

This mixing plant is one of the features of the W. S. Duncan company plant. It will be running to capacity from now until cold weather, keeping six men busy and turning out three carloads of feed a day, blending snow-white shorts with the gray shorts.

There are very few plants in the south for this purpose. The Duncan company receive the two varieties of shorts, the snow-white and the gray, in large jute bags. The white shorts, too sticky for a feed by itself, is blended in just the right proportion with the gray, which alone is not a balanced feed, because it is not rich enough in gluten and other fat-producing constituents. This blend makes an ideal hog feed, rich in nutritive principles. This finished product is then sacked in seventy-five-pound white cotton sacks and sold as Duncan's fancy shorts.

The plant has quadrupled the Duncan company's capacity for handling the hog feed trade, and every other firing liner as well as the "big shorts leader" of last year will have to go some to sell the stuff as fast as the mixer turns it out.

JENKINS WRITES ON VALUE OF A SMILE

T. P. A. Press Chairman Tells of Kinds of Smiles and Their Meaning

Editor Atlanta Journal Firing Line:

As I was coming home recently on a certain Sunday I met a gentleman from church whom I knew quite well, his face was beautiful with a radiant smile that carried me back to happy childhood days when all was great and grand and fair. But the smile was not deep enough to light up that same face on the following Monday, and Tuesday. He was grouchy enough to let alone. I did leave him all by his lonesome for I was actually afraid of him. But I have often thought since what a great man he could and would be if he would bask more in the sunlight of such blissful smiles as the one I saw that day lingering on his manly face. Some people think it is a sin to smile at fashionable receptions; others, that only the weak minded indulge, and some venture so far as to say that only idiots perform its holy function. Idiots can make smiles, but smiles will never make idiots, of course, there may be some different kinds of smiles. As a traveling salesman I entered the office of a well-to-do-merchant who believed in optimism. His words and signs had some indication of it, but you would not have believed it. It is easy to teach and preach such things. This genlemean also had faith in smiles—that is to say he had a card swinging on his door and another one over his desk which read, "Smile," and yet this merchant's face was as far from emotion as that of a wooden Indian.

"Something must have gone wrong with the gentleman's majesty today,' I said in relating the circumstance to a brother knight of the grip.

"If so, there is something wrong with him every day. It's been that way ever since I've been coming here,' said he. "I have never seen him smile yet."

We are going to tell him a good joke one of these days and try him out, but until he learns the gracious art of smiling we thought he should take down his sign.

There is another kind of a smile, the one of satisfaction and joy. We have all seen that while journeying along the path of life especially in those wanting your coin, but ask of them a favor and you will quickly see the smile turn into a beautiful or hideous frown. "Nothing doing." Then again we meet with those who seem to feel for us and pity us in our struggles, yet offer no help. They purchase goods from the same kind of men as yourself, but what you have to offer is not good enough for them, but they are going to give you an order sometime or send you one that you never get, and smile you a farewell.

There is another kind of a smile and all traveling salesmen are familiar with it and like it. It is the smile of approval. God bless that smile and the man with it. It is the lovelit smile in which we can see the wife and hear the folks at home. It offers peace and love and friendship, and opens a world of thought and goodness that comes with the sweetest expectations of enjoyment. He gives you an order and you give him the best you have. Deep down in his heart there is consideration for you, a fellow feeling, his helping hand and friendly words prove that he has faith in you and hope in mankind. He smiles and so do you. All is well.

Yours truly,
W. M. JENKINS,
T. P. A. Press Chairman.

P. S.—If we could get 2-cent mileage pulled on trains, and the hotel inspector law passed, all the traveling public would smile.

NORTHWESTERN TRAVELER ENJOYS FIRING LINE

Writes of Interesting Cities Visited in West but Likes Atlanta Best

Editor Firing Line:

I have never before asked for space in your valuable columns and you will no doubt be surprised to receive these lines from one so far from home.

I presume that the main reason I am writing today is that I haven't been able to get an Atlanta paper in this little city and I miss it as much almost as I would the letters from my home folks.

Since I left Atlanta last October I have traveled in the west and northwest, and I have always been able to get an Atlanta Journal in any of the cities and this being the first Sunday I ever spent in a small town, I miss the absence of my home paper.

I find great pleasure in reading the Firing Line, for in this way only can I keep up with my friends among the traveling men. I am sure many of them have lost track of me since I have gotten so far away.

I would like to go into details and tell of my travels in the west and the northwest, for it would no doubt be of interest to many. But this would require a great deal of my time and also much space in your valuable columns, so I will only give a brief outline.

Since I left Atlanta on October 15 last I have traveled all of the great state of Texas.

You who have not traveled in this state do not realize the immensity of it and its wonderful possibilities. I would like to dwell at length on this, but must hurry on.

Leaving Texas I have traveled New Mexico, Arizona, California and Oregon. My trip is only a little more than half finished, for I have yet to finish up in this state (Washington) and then I go to Idaho and Utah and Colorado.

From Denver I will go to Atlanta for a little vacation, which I am looking forward to with the anticipation of much pleasure at being w... and friends. Like other Georgians, I am proud of Atlanta, and often when in other great cities I find myself making mental comparisons of them with Atlanta and usually Atlanta wins out.

I spent considerable time in Los Angeles, San Francisco and in Portland, Ore. These are all great cities, and each one of them held out to the visitor many beautiful and interesting things. I took in all that was of special interest in each of these places.

At San Francisco I visited the exposition grounds and saw the work in progress for the great 1915 exposition. I was in Portland, the "Rose City," during the rose carnival. Portland claims to have the world beat when it comes to the point of producing beautiful roses, though in Los Angeles I saw American beauties with stems seven or eight eight feet long. I guess I should not close this article without some reference to the weather. Yesterday the Seattle Intelligencer issued an extra and in great glaring headlines on the front page gave an account of the great heat wave that is holding the middle and eastern states in its grasp and producing insanity and death and untold suffering. Out here on Grays Harbor, for that is where I am today, I am in a steam-heated hotel and when I go out of the hotel I wear my overcoat.

It is interesting to note the conditions as one travels along. Down in California it was harvest time while ... was there. But up in Oregon and also in this state things have the appearance of early spring.

Later I may tell you something of Victoria and Vancouver, British Columbia, as I will visit these interesting cities.

With best wishes for the success of the Firing Line and a whoop for The Atlanta Journal, the paper that really does cover Dixie like the dew, I am

Yours truly,

SPEAKING OF MILEAGE

When some of the roads gave a two-cent rate everybody was happy. W. A. Quarles, a City Salesman for the Fain & Stamps Grocery Co., has cut those rates in half. He has walked over 500 miles in a pair of Five-Dollar Red Seal Shoes.

That mileage only cost him one cent a mile, and he got seven months of foot comfort for good measure.

ON THE FIRING LINE WITH THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

SAMPLES AND SHIPMENTS

ON THE ROAD AND IN THE OFFICE WITH ATLANTA'S BUSY ARMY OF COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

George H. Page, who works South Carolina for the All Star Manufacturing company, was in Atlanta for a brief visit last week.

Uncle Walt—meaning W. W. Benson, who travels for the M. C. Kiser company—has a right to slow up on the extra sultry days if anyone has. His weight is around a quarter ton, some say a little under and some a little over. That he doesn't put on the brakes, however, is shown by the good business he had last week.

J. K. Dickson, Florida man for the M. C. Kiser company, is at his old home at Anderson, S. C., spending his vacation and will be there until he comes to Atlanta to attend the Merchants' convention the first week in August.

Both men consider themselves ahead on a bet made at the J. D. Frazier company a few days ago. Dan O'Rear, the veteran salesman who works middle Georgia for the firm, won a hat, and Clark Frazier, sales manager, who had to pay for it, is well ahead on the deal with an order on his desk turned in by Mr. O'Rear for 200 tons of shorts. This is a whale of an order, and when the traveler told them at the office he had it in sight there was some skepticism, the bet resulting—and the order resulting shortly afterward.

R. V. Haslett is in charge of affairs at the Liquid Carbonic company during the absence of H. H. Ward, manager, who is on a six weeks' tour of the branches of the company in the north and west.

A. L. Delhi, the M. C. Kiser company firing liner, was able to get back on the road again the last of the week after a spell of sickness, which kept him at home in Atlanta for several days.

Liquid Carbonic company salesmen who are on vacations at present are W. A. Gossett, R. D. Latta and H. G. Fulenweider.

C. J. Finger, working the Carolinas for the M. C. Kiser company, is finding the going good on the road now, but says he can be expected in Atlan'a at the start of the convention, August 4, sure.

B. C. Fowler and W. E. Whitaley, city salesmen for the Capital City Tobacco company, were both on the encampment of the Fifth regiment at St. Simons. Mr. Fowler—our Lieutenant Fowler, if you please—brought back an unusually fine coat of tan and assortment of camp stories.

P. H. Jeter, the John Silvey & Co. firing liner, will work in north Florida this week. He will beat it from Columbus down to that end of his territory.

If V. C. Almand, who travels for the All-Star Manufacturing company, is seen sitting around in the sweltering heat with his coat on when he might as well have it off, there is a reason. He doesn't want to lose any more mileage books—nor any more coats. A few days ago, on an auto trip over at Tuskegee, Ala. he lost both off the back seat somewhere along the road, and has been unable to learn anything of them since.

C. D. Harris, of the Capital City Tobacco company city sales force, is on his vacation.

W. E. Rumph, who travels for the All Star Manufacturing company, is in Atlanta for a stay of about two weeks.

Sam Saltzman, traveling for the Hirshberg company, is working at present in North Carolina, but is not in the summer resort section. The business he is turning in indicates that without consulting his route list.

W. F. Spalding, of the Gramling-Spalding Shoe company, has just finished his annual tas kof getting the concern's twelve lines of road samples ready for the bargain sale always held just before the new season starts.

M. J. Kent, with the Rosenfeld company, will leave about August 1st for New York where he will spend his vacation.

Montag Brothers' sample display of holiday goods at Charlotte, N. C., will open tomorrow in the charge of G. Y. C. Bulce and S. F. Hein. A week from tomorrow the display at Jackson, Miss., will be ready with Ed Montag, H. L. Watts and Joe Karples in charge.

D. B. Meadows, who sells Premium Brand shoes with headquarters at Columbus, has just finished an excellent week's business with several very large orders to his credit.

J. M. Frankel, who travels for the Rosenfeld company, is able to be out and see things in their natural light again after being out of commission several days because of trouble with his eyes.

J. R. Callier, of the Hirshberg company staff, is turning up a good volume of business lately in the sand hills of South Carolina.

J. W. Hughes of the Silvey selling force, is having a busy time with house sales. He came in Friday with two customers, each of whom he sold a season's bill, and he has an engagement with another merchant for Monday.

A. L. Colvin, who is with the Fulton Market company, is back on the road for them after spending a few days very leasantly with his wife and children on Cumberland Island.

S. E. Brannon, secretary and treasurer of Jones Brothers and company, reports that the business so far secured will make July the biggest month that his company has enjoyed since the Atlanta branch was established.

Frank Singer, of Lumpkin, Ga., is in Atlanta visiting H. L. Singer, of the H. L. Singer company. He is the son of F. S. Singer, first vice president of the Singer company and is contemplating locating in Atlanta.

Leslie Miller, of Jones Brothers and company, sent in an order last week for a mixed car load of jellies, vinegars, preserves and pickles. R. L. Dawson, of this company, was at Birmingham last week and turned in a fine lot of business.

The H. L. Singer company are now fully installed in their new quarters at Haynes and Hunter streets. One of the conveniences of the office equipment is that of a table desk for each salesman, where he can write up his orders and where sales information and directions may be left for him. The desk was made according to the ideas of president H. L. Singer.

Mack Hirshberg, who is traveling down in Florida now, writes in to his house that if orders were as plentiful as gnats are in the particular district where he has been for several days, the Hirshberg company would quickly exhaust their stock filling them. He declares "swat the fly" may be a popular pastime, but "swat the gnat" certainly is not for the traveling man after orders.

J. W. O'Donnell, with the Dobbs & Wey company, is home for Sunday. He will spend the coming week in southwest Georgia.

Harry Brown, of the H. L. Singer company, returned from the Isle of Palms trip with a beautiful coat of tan and last week made a killing on sales of syrup and grape jelly. J. E. Brown, of this company, during the salesman's vacation week, traveled over 1,100 miles in his automobile in the mountains about Asheville, N. C.

The H. L. Singer company since occupying its new building has added two new wagons to its delivery service which now comprises seven wagons in all.

S. M. Rosenfeld, of the Rosenfeld company, has just returned to Atlanta from a two months' trip through Florida, and will likely leave in a few days for South Carolina.

J. S. Dougherty and G. A. Sherlin, of the Silvey & Dougherty Hat company, are expected back this week from New York, where they have been for the last ten days.

T. A. Gramling, of the Gramling-Spalding Shoe company, has gone to Galbreith Springs, Tenn., for a month's vacation.

Maurice Haas, manager of the holiday goods department of Montag Bros., left a few days ago for the east, where he will spend several weeks.

M. O. Nix, credit man for Montag Bros., has returned from his vacation, which he spent at Asheville.

Max Samuels is congratulating himself on getting in from the road before the hot wave of the last few days arrived. He finished his Mississippi trip the first of last week and has been in Atlanta for several days.

The vacation season is on at the Racan-Malone company. C. F. Barnwell and family have just left for several weeks at Wrightsville Beach. Others on vacations are Luther Fuller and Cary Callaway, of the house force, and Ralph Barnwell will be away for several days this week. J. L. aWrman, several days this week. J. L. Warman, city salesman, and Fred Yarbrough, of the notion department, will return this week.

E. J. Orr, North Carolina salesman for J. K. Orr Shoe company, is on a vacation in Virginia. A. C. Wellborn, who looks after city trade, is also away at present.

J. D. Drane, the Red Seal shoe man, who looks after southeast Georgia with headquarters at Waycross, has been having a god increase in business recently and reports business in general in his territory as showing increased activity.

George P. Ray, of the Riverside and Dan River mills, of Danville, Va., was a visitor a: John Silvey & Co., last week. He states that his mills are sold out several months ahead.

A. C. Parsons, the popular representative of Young Brothers Drug Co., of Cartersville, is at the Elkin-Cooper sanitarium where he underwent an operation last week. Reports from his bedside are encouraging.

In addition to making big sales, E. P. Lewis, of the McClure Ten Cent company, has another cause for rejoicing. He is the father of a fine boy.

The employes of McClure's retail store will enjoy their annual picnic next Wednesday, July 23 at Silver Lake. The retail store will therefore be closed all day.

W. L. Phillips, of the Atlanta Casket company, was in the city Thursday and Friday from his territory which embraces North and South Carolina and Virginia.

John Harrell, with the Clark Woodenware company, after some time spent in lower Florida, has swung up from Key West to Pensacola and is now working that section.

J. W Cannon is representing the Atlanta Casket company in north Georgia, temporarily.

B. B. Jones, representing Faust spaghetti, has returned from a successful sales trip through Florida, Alabama and Mississippi.

E. L. Adams has returned from Charlotte N. C. wher he attended the meeting of the Southern Wholesale Grocers' association. He was re-elected a director of the association.

Cliff Edwards, of Fain and Stamps, caught sight of Sanders Smith on his way to a vacation camp near the city last week. Mr. Edwards says that Smith was wearing a big straw bonnet tied about his head. Rather an unusual sight, he declares.

Since Bill Quarles' automobile broke down he has been committed to walk. He has found wearing R d Seal shoes so successful that the ad man heard of it and has made Mr. Quarles famous. Mr. Quarles is city salesman for Fain and Stamps.

John H. Andrews, representative of the Sullivan Tobacco company, is contemplating giving a house party. His fellow salesmen are all expecting to attend.

W. P. Fain of Fain ✦ Stamps, attended the convention of the Southern Wholesale Grocers association at Charlotte last week.

A. J. Bruce is the wit of the office force of Fain ✦ Stamps. He lives on Love street but refers to it as Anectionatet avenue. He told Mr. Stamps he expected to spend his vacation on Daffodil Lake, which, however, on close inquiry proved to be only the duck pond in Mr. Bruce's back yard.

Z. V. Patterson, box specialty salesman with the Clark Woodenware company, has returned from a trip in Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana, and after a few days in Atlanta will be on the firing line in Georgia and later in Florida.

R. L. Duncan, who covers the Carolinas for the Clark Woodenware company, has left his regular territory to make a few Georgia points, but will be back in Carolina in a short while.

W. J. Beacham came over Friday from Athens, which he makes his headquarters, for a visit to his house, the J. K. Orr Shoe company. He returned home yesterday, accompanied by Rockwell Johnson and M. A. Knipe, of the Orr company, who will be his guests today.

C. M. McKain, city salesman of Jones Brothers and company, notwithstanding the hot weather, has been turning in fine orders on all his company's lines.

W. L. Percy, of the Dobbs & Wey company, has secured some large contracts for his house from local hotels recently.

Percy Harris, who returned to the A. M. Robinson company this season, is reported to have come back with a rush. They atte that so far this season he has secured 140 orders aggregating around $50,000. His specialty is the big cotton mill trade.

E. P. Lewis, of the McClure Ten Cent company, left yesterday for Lawrenceville to give estimates on the opening of a five and ten-cent department.

E. B. Adams, of Birmingham, accompanied by his family is visiting his rother, E. L. Adams. Mr. Adams is district manager of Swift & company at Birmingham.

Doc Westbrooke, of the E. L. Adams company was on vacation last week, which he spent at Smyrna. At the office they say it has been painfully quiet on account of the absence of "Noisy."

J. L. Nisbet, bookkeeper of the E. L. Adams company, says he will spend his vacation next week at Piedmont Lake and West End park.

P. S. Lowrance, former bookkeeper of the E. L. Adams company, has been temporarily with the office force of that company for the past month.

E. E. Shver, of the Consolidated Paper Co., has returned from a two weeks' vacation spent at Nashville, Tenn. J. C. Mason of this company, reports crops looking fine in SCouth Georgia. C. S. Harley, the South Carolina salesman, has been sending in some good business from Chesterfield. F. H. Glasgow and C. E. Owens, city salesmen have been paying no attention to the hot weather, but have been turning in the orders right along.

Cliff McDowell, shipping clerk of the E. L. Adams company was away last week on a vacation fishing trip.

H. P. Loveless, of the shipping department of the Consolidatted Paper Co., was busy yesterday receiving three big shipments or freight.

I. N. Binder, of the Binder Frame Manufacturing company, spent last week on the road, his first time out on the firing line in several months. He says it took him about two days to get Lee "at home feeling," but declares he made up for the two days later.

J. Oscar Chambers, of the Brown, Perryman & Greene Co., is back from New York, where he has been buying some special lines of hats for fall which will be here in time for the visiting merchants in August.

Percy Harris, working in South Carolina for the A. M. Robinson company, writes in some enthusiastic comments on Great Falls, S. C., where he visited several days ago to call on the Republic cotton mills department store. He is also high in his praise of the mill and its officials.

R. D. Bagwell, north Georgia traveler for the Huguley Oil company, turned up at the company's office yesterday afternoon with a run of orders that will mean some hustling Monday at the shipping department.

E. D. Huguley of the Huguley Oil company, is here for the week-end after a two weeks' trip.

SIMMONS OPENS DEBATE ON TARIFF IN THE U. S. SENATE

Chairman of Finance Committee Declares That Democrats Are Carrying Out Pledge Made to the People

CHARGES REPUBLICANS WITH VIOLATING PLEDGE

Explains That Amendments Submitted by His Committee Are Meant to Perfect Bill, Not to Harm It

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Tariff debate opened in the senate today when Chairman Simmons of the finance committee began his explanation of the bill. He reviewed what he termed the failure of the Republicans to redeem their 1908 pledges to revise the tariff downward. The Democratic party insisted this duty, he said, when it came into power.

"The bill now presented to the senate, it is confidently believed," said he, "is a fair interpretation of the bill of the people and is an honest compliance with pledges of the Democratic party.

"Amendments offered by the committee are not proposed in a spirit of disagreement with the house or to the theory of tariff revision upon which that body acted. They are offered with a view to further carrying out and perfecting the principles of a revenue-producing tariff upon the basis of comparative rates enunciated by the ways and means committee of the house as a just and fair interpretation in the light of existing conditions of the platform pledges of the Democratic party upon tariff.

"Like the house, we have sought to find a basis of action which would untax the necessaries of life as far as is consistent with the revenue needs of the government; which would lay the heaviest burdens upon luxuries of the rich; and which would impose upon those things which were neither prime necessities nor luxuries, and which were proper subjects of tariff taxation, a rate sufficiently competitive to yield revenues adequate to meet the needs of the government on the one hand, and on the other hand to operate as a regulation of domestic prices, by making outside competition at all times possible."

Charges that the bill dealt unfairly with the farmer, Senator Simmons declared to be without foundation. He enumerated many things on the free list especially for the farmers' benefit, and said:

"No class of our people have reaped as little benefit from the Republican tariff system and suffered as heavily from its exactions as the farmer. He knows that under the Republican system he has had to buy in a highly protected market and sell most of his products on a basis of free competition with the world. There is in my mind no doubt that his verdict will be one of approval, especially in view of the fact that he will be among the first to feel the beneficial results of the transition from a tariff in the interest of the masses."

The income section of the bill, Senator Simmons said, was not framed upon the theory that the chief object of an income tax is to supply deficit in revenue, "but it is based upon the theory that property should bear its just share of federal as well as state taxation, and that, therefore, the rate of this bill should be fixed with a view to requiring the wealth of the country as reflected in the incomes of the well-to-do to contribute equitably to these expenses."

Senator Simmons analyzed the various charges in the schedules at length. The total schedules of the house bill have an average advance of 21.22 per cent, with the senate reduced to 18.38 per cent.

Iron ore, he said, was placed on the free list in the house bill to aid steel producers or iron and steel and for like reasons the senate committee free-listed ferro-manganese and pig iron.

Of the wool schedule, in which the senate retained raw wool on the free list, and cut rates on manufactures, Senator Simmons said:

"For more than a third of a century the duties on wool and woolens have remained practically unchanged. That these duties are not only excessive, but indefensible, is generally admitted, even by the advocates of protection."

Suffragette Skirt Drew Peachtree's Gaze On Saturday

"She thrust her hands deep into her skirt pockets and rattled some loose change."

Sounds funny, doesn't it? Yet that is exactly what Mrs. Hattie Pearce, of 83 Frazier street, did Saturday afternoon, while Peachtree street stared.

Mrs. Pearce is the wife of W. P. Pearce and the daughter of Patrolman J. W. Clack. Her mother, it seems, is noted as a follower of fashions, as when the Paris papers began to print patterns of the suffragette skirt she was the first to take up the idea.

Mrs. Pearce had her mother design the new suit, and Saturday afternoon she burst onto Atlanta's main drag in all her glory. The suit is dark blue, made swallow-tail style, with pockets corresponding to those in a man's fancy vest with it. She also has a mannish collar and a plain black tie, but she says she hasn't had the nerve to don this cravat as yet.

But she had the nerve to wear the pocket skirt, and now she is debating to the new style. She carries money, keys and a truly pocketknife in the pockets and swaggers along with her hands in them all the time.

Saturday night," she said, "I bought some men's sack pants and added to them a fancy vest with pockets. These clothes are a great improvement over the ordinary women's styles, and I advise every girl to wear them. No. I don't believe in the suffrage, but I certainly do believe in the suffragette skirt."

SEATTLE IS QUIET; COURT SETS ASIDE ORDERS OF MAYOR

He Undertakes to Close Saloons and Stop Publication of "The Times," and Fails in Both

JOSEPHUS DANIELS ISSUES STATEMENT

Declares Free Speech Essential to Liberty, but Severely Arraigns Violence in Redress of Industrial Wrongs

(By Associated Press.)

SEATTLE, Wash. July 19.—The day passed without disorder in the downtown streets of Seattle which last night was filled with rioting, naval men and civilians intent upon the destruction of Industrial Workers of the World and Socialist meeting places, and as night drew near the police felt hopeful of maintaining the peace, although Judge Humphries of the superior court had set aside Mayor Cotterill's order closing the saloons. There was much patronage of the drinking places during the afternoon and night and the police looked on this as the feature of danger.

Public interest after the debris of the Socialist and Industrial Workers wreckage had been swept away, centered in the unsuccessful effort of Mayor Cotterill to prevent the publication of the Seattle Times today and tomorrow, the mayor alleging that incendiary articles in the Times were responsible for last night's rioting.

Judge Humphries came to the rescue of the Times with an injunction and the city edition of the paper came out on time and the police guard which had been put over the mailing room was withdrawn.

DANIELS ISSUES STATEMENT.

The following message was received late today by the Associated Press from Secretary of the Navy Daniels:

"National Park Inn, Mt. Ranier, Washington. July 19.

"The reference I made to the flag and my statement that the red flag meant danger was the same as originally made by me at a banquet of the Railroad Men's Young Men's Christian association at Washington, D. C., a few days ago. It had no reference whatever to local conditions in Seattle.

"I believe in free speech and a free press as the bulwarks of our liberty. Every evil that exists or that threatens our country can be righted by appeal to the judgment of the American people. The weapon is the ballot. The man who resorts to violence to redress evil is inserting more evil into existence than he can hope to cure by violence.

"Obedience to lawful authority and respect for the law must precede any reforms. The man who takes the law into his own hands imperils American institutions and jeopardizes the efforts of the best people to secure real relief from conditions against which he complains.

(Signed.) "JOSEPHUS DANIELS."

Woman Industrial Worker Is Arrested in Portland

(By Associated Press.)

PORTLAND, Ore., July 19.—Having failed to secure a settlement to leave the state by midnight last night, Dr. Marie E. Equi, the woman physician who led a "free speech" demonstration by feminine Industrial Workers of the World Thursday night, which ended in her arrest, was formally charged today with inciting to riot, carrying weapons and assault with a deadly weapon. She was refused bail.

Dr. Equi threatened to stab officers with hatpins dipped in poison if they interfered with her. An officer was scratched by a pin in arresting her. The injury gives no evidence of poison.

M. G. ANDERSON SLASHED IN ROW AT CENTER HILL

Said to Have Tried to Shield Mrs. Purtell From Attentions of G. C. Gidney

M. G. Anderson, a young man who lives in Center Hill, on the river car line, was taken to the Grady hospital Saturday night, his body lacerated with deep knife cuts received in a fight with a man who gave the name of G. C. Hailey, of South Carolina, but who officers have identified as G. C. Gidney, of 1032 Marietta street.

The two clashed when Anderson rushed to the house of Mrs. Lela Purcell, his neighbor at Center Hill, after she had told him that she had resisted Bailey's attentions. The men grappled, the police were told, and Gidney drew a pocket knife and slashed his adversary across the head and the stomach.

The wounded man was taken to the home of a doctor in Center Hill and later removed to the Grady hospital in Greenberg & Bond's ambulance.

Gidney later was arrested by officer Carter, who arrived on the scene soon after the cutting occurred. He saw Gidney running down the hill and pursued him. Not until the officer jerked out a pistol and called to Gidney to halt did the fleeing man give himself up. He was lodged in the county jail. Although he gave the name of Bailey, letters found in his pocket showed that his real name was Gidney.

The fight was caused, it is said, by Gidney's attentions to Mrs. Purcell during the last three or four months. She says that although she did not know Gidney, he was in the habit of dropping by her house, whenever possible, on some pretext.

Saturday night Mr. Purcell had gone to town. About 9 o'clock Gidney came to the door. Two had some words, and, according to her story, he asked her to take a drink of whisky with him. It was then she called for Anderson.

ALL HEAT RECORDS IN 26 YEARS WERE SMASHED SATURDAY

Atlanta Had Hottest Day Since July 19, 1887, When Mercury Reached 100 Degrees at Weather Bureau

LOCAL THERMOMETERS MARKED 99.4 DEGREES

Prediction of Thundershowers and Cooler Weather Sunday Brings Hope of Relief to Sweltering City

Saturday was h-o-t. Take it from the weather man—if you have any reason to doubt it. And unless you sat in a refrigerator all day, reading Admiral Peary's "Discovery of the North Pole," with a fan blowing on the back of yo neck,—unless you did that, you know it was hot.

The highest temperature was 99.4 degrees.

It is the second highest on the records of the local weather bureau.

Atlanta's very hottest day happened in 1887. By a curious coincidence. Saturday was the 26th anniversary of that day, July 19, 1887. On that historic occasion the old timers sweltered around under exactly 100 degrees of temperature.

Thunder showers for Saturday night or Sunday was the weather man's prediction as he closed up shop.

They meant that for a while at least the temperature would go down.

Noon, 96 degrees.
1 o'clock, 98 degrees.
2 o'clock, 98 degrees.
3 o'clock, 99 degrees.
4 o'clock, 99.4 degrees.
5 o'clock 98 degrees.
6 o'clock, 96 degrees.
7 o'clock, 90 degrees.

The slump at 7 o'clock marked the approach of the first storm cloud in several days.

Thermometers all over the city had a busy day of it. Everybody was right on the job. These old family thermometers that grandpa has been looking at on the coldest mornings in winter and that everybody else has been forgetting for the rest of the year—they were hard put to it, yesterday, keeping the folks informed.

If a man's thermometer loafed and didn't push the thermometer high enough in the tube to suit him, he went over and looked at his neighbor's. And the thermometer that made highest score was the prize thermometer of the community.

Some were in the shade. Some were in the sun. Some were high up, others low down, and some cold, some hot. There were all sorts and conditions and makes of thermometer at work, and they registered almost any temperature one could desire.

For the fat man, stewing and groaning and grunting and thinking he'd never survive till the next minute, there was to be found the thermometer that registered 101 1-2 degrees in the shade. For the ubiquitous and entirely too cheerful thin man glad of his wash suit and protesting that he'd seen lots hotter weather, there was the thermometer in the sun that registered 98.5 degrees at the hottest part of the day in the early afternoon. One could prove anything just by picking his thermometer.

But there was no doubt about the temperature being around 98 degrees for several hours. All thermometers attested to that at least. It was one of those persistently hot days. One thermometer of the government's own patterns, out in Copenhill section, showed 98.7 degrees about the middle of the afternoon. The mercury seemed to have stuck there.

At that, however, Atlanta was cool by contrast. Report from Macon was that a temperature of 104.5 degrees in the shade was recorded.

104:5 Degrees in Macon; Hailstorm Ruins Crops

(By Associated Press.)

MACON, Ga., July 19.—Weather records were again broken here today when the temperature at 2 o'clock registered 104.5.

A cloudburst at Jeffersonville, 26 miles south of Macon, resulted in heavy damage. The rain was accompanied by a hail storm which swept the crops clean.

Rain is predicted here before night. There was one death and two prostrations here today from the heat. A convict dropped dead. The whole county gang was then ordered in for the day and will not be taken out again until the weather becomes cooler.

Clouds Rent Old Sol; Cooler at Thomasville

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

THOMASVILLE, Ga., July 19.—The clouds got the better of Old Sol here today and the highest temperature reported by the weather bureau is 96. Indications are for rain tonight. No reports here of cyclone at Cairo.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

ROME, Ga., July 19.—All heat records since the establishment of the local volunteer station have been broken by the high temperatures of the past two days, which registered one hundred and five, according to the reports of Observer W. SOLICITOR SCORED FOR HIS ATTITUDE IN CONLEY'S CASE

Rosser and Arnold Charge Dorsey Seeks to Convict Frank, Guilty or Innocent, Out of Professional Pride

"SHUTTING EYES TO TRUTH, DORSEY PROTECTS NEGRO"

Attorneys Intimate That Dorsey Fears to Let Truth Be Known — Attitude Throughout Case Is Criticised

The attitude of Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey throughout the Phagan investigation, and especially in his attempt to block a grand jury indictment of Jim Conley, is scored in an interview made public by Luther Z. Rosser and Reuben R. Arnold, counsel for Leo M. Frank.

"The solicitor is seeking to convict Frank innocent or guilty, in order to gratify his professional pride," Frank's attorneys say.

In the course of the intetview the two famous attorneys, who have been engaged to defend the man accused of the murder of Mary Phagan, charge that the solicitor is protecting the negro Conley.

Mr. Dorsey is severely criticised not only for his avowed intention of trying to block the indictment of Conley by the grand jury Monday, but because he prevented the last grand jury, the one, which indicted Frank, from acting on Conley's case, and because he did not place before the last grand jury any of Conley confessions.

Solicitor Dorsey is geeting his legal and constitutional functions in seeking to control the action of the grand judy," the attorneys Rosser and Arnold declare.

Despite the criticism of his attitude there is little doubt that Solicitor Dorsey will be present Monday, when the grand jury takes up the consideration of the Conley case. In fact the solicitor's presence has been requested by W. D. Beattie, the foreman of the grand jury, who called the meeting.

Solicitor Dorsey is still confident that the grand jury will not indict Conley.

There is little doubt that there will be a quorum present, when the grand jury meeting is called Monday, for Deputy Sheriff Fiennie Minor has found that 19 of the 20 grand jurors empanneled are in the city, and they have promised to be present Monday. It takes 18 grand jurors to act on a bill of indictment The statement of Mr. Rosser and Mr. Arnold, scoring the solicitor is as follows:

STATEMENT IN FULL.

"Counsel for Leo M. Frank have refrained from making a statement for the papers except under strong provocation. Clearly counsel on both sides should refrain from any comment of or criticism on any action of the grand jury to be taken at its meeting next Monday, which might tend to hamper or limit the grand jury in their action upon the Conley case.

"The grand jury is an independent body; it is under the control of no one.

"A solicitor general is the adviser of that body as to legal principles merely, but he has no right to exercise any sort of control in determining who shall or shall not be indicted.

"To permit a solicitor general to use the position intrusted to him by the people, to decide for himself who shall and who shall not be indicted, is a danger too great to be contemplated.

"With this preliminary statement, we reluctantly make a reply to Solicitor Dorsey's interview in this morning's paper.

"It is rather remarkable that the solicitor general and a person admitting complicity in a grave crime should

DRIVEN BY JEALOUSY, WIFE ATTACKS WOMAN IN HEART OF CITY

Mrs. Smith, of Douglasville, Sails Into Mrs. Ira McNeil, While Latter Talks to Dr. Smith Near Five Points

Driven by jealousy of her husband, Mrs. J. R. Smith, of Douglasville, attacked Mrs. Ina McNeil while Mrs. McNeil stood conversing with Dr. Smith on the sidewalk in front of No. 37 Peachtree street Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Dr. Smith is house physician at the New Kimball hotel ,and has been practicing in Atlanta several years. Mrs. McNeil is said to be a saleswoman in a downtown store.

Both Mrs. McNeil and Dr. Smith declare that the attack by Mrs. McNeil was entirely unprovoked. Mrs. Smith's statement of the matter admits that she was impelled by a sudden fury at seeing the two together.

"By mere chance I happened to meet Mrs. McNeil on the sidewalk there," said Dr. Smith. "She has been a patient of mine. We had not exchanged more than a few commonplace words of greeting when I felt some one brush past me, between me and the show window close to which I was standing. It was Mrs. Smith, my wife. Before I could realize what was happening she had attacked Mrs. McNeil. I did not lift my hand in the matter ,of course, except to separate them as soon as I could and had Mrs. Smith away."

SMITH DENIES ACID.

It was reported that acid was thrown, that something which smelled like carbolic acid had been spattered over Mrs. McNeil's dress and that Dr. Smith, receiving a portion of the acid on his own coat and trousers, changed them.

Dr. Smith denied that any acid had figured in the difficulty. "It's absurd," said he. "Nothing was thrown. Mrs. Smith had a bottle of cough medicine, or something like that in her hand. I think, and the creosote in that probably was what the store clerks smelled.

He exhibited his own white trousers which he said he was wearing at the time and which he still wore. Stains as though of several drops of some liquid appeared on the front of one leg.

"That's it, whatever it is," said he. "All I know is that it is not acid of any kind."

Mrs. Smith was quoted as saying that her husband had been ursing her to return to him, but that she had declared he must test himself first and remain away from Mrs. McNeil.

"And I've also asked Mrs. McNeil to keep away from Robert," she said.

Dr. Smith declared that he had not urged his wife to return to him, and that he had not promised her automobiles or anything else. On the other hand, said he, she had been trying to persuade him toward a reconciliation. She wanted him to knuckle down said he and he refused to do that for anybody.

HE WOULDN'T "KNUCKLE."

"She said I must do this and that, and stay away from Mrs. McNeil," said he. "I told her I'd stay away from everybody but her after she came back to me if she'd come without qualifica-

Mrs. Asa G. Candler "Stranded" Aboard German Train, "Rescued" By Mr. Candler in Speeding Auto

Now She Knows How It Feels to Be a Millionaire's Wife, With No Money, No Ticket, and a Conductor Threatening in a Foreign Tongue to Put Her Off the Train

How does it feel to be a millionaire's wife, yet with no money ,and added to that with a German conductor persistently demanding that you hand over to him a ticket to a given destination or the cash equivalent to a ticket?

Mrs. Asa G. Candler, who is touring Europe now with Mr. Candler, can very definitely describe just what the feeling is. She knows by experience."

While she and Mr. Candler were traveling in Germany they came to a small town where it was necessary to change trains. Mr. Candler took Mrs. Candler to the train ,placed her in the compartment reserved for their use, and then went to look after the luggage. While he was gone, the little foreign engine started a mighty puffing and with screechy whistlings pulled off down the track.

"I tried and tried to tell him in English that he was leaving some of my party," wrote Mrs. Candler, "but he paid no attention to me whatever. He just laughed at me, and kept asking me for my ticket."

Finally a lady in the compartment, who spoke both English and German explained to the conductor that Mrs. Candler had neither ticket nor money, inasmuch as the train had left her husband behind at the last station. The explanation apparently meant little to him, for he appeared unsatisfied.

Mrs. Candler was in desperation by the time the next stop was reached, and peered out the window at the funny little town, wondering what would happen next.

It happened pretty soon.

Mr. Candler dashed into the train dusty and smiling. A man piled in the luggage and all was serene. The millionaire had commandeered an automobile ,and by a quick run of fifty miles across country caught the train at the next stop.

"Oh what a relief it was," said Mrs. Candler, " to look out the window and see him."

BERLIN, July 19.—The German war ministry is preparing a bill to supply the army with new artillery, according to the Militairetsch-Politische Korrespondenz, which usually is well informed on military matters.

From the same source it is learned that the German ministry of marines already has prepared a bill providing a fleet of cruisers for foreign service.

Political Exile Rumor Is Denied by Diaz

(By Associated Press.)

LAREDO, Texas, July 19.—The rumor that political exile is involved in General Felix Diaz's special embassy to Japan to thank that government for its participation in the Mexican centennial is denied in a message from Diaz received here today. The message said:

"Accept mission to Japan solely and exclusively to give thanks for the embassy of that government to our recent centennial. Any other motive is unfounded and entirely false."

The message is interpreted to mean that Diaz will be a presidential candidate.

Americans in Danger, Says Consul at Juarez

(By Associated Press.)

EL PASO, Tex., July 19.—According to the American consul at Juarez, fourteen American men in Madera, Chihuahua, and six families of women and children are in daily danger of an attack by bandits and marauders, and it is said by officials of the Northwestern Railway company that the Mexican federal government has announced its inability to offer them adequate protection.

Particular uneasiness is felt for the safety of the Americans because of their recent activity in running down bandits who robbed ranches and burned property in that neighborhood.

The bandits swore vengeance against all Americans in the district, declaring they would rob their homes and slay them.

The Americans have some rifles and ammunition and will make stand if driven to it. In the meantime they are making efforts to get out of the country.

get together in such harmonious concert of action as these two interviews show. Mr. Dorsey admits that the indictment of Conley will have only a mild but undesirable effect on the state's case against Leo M. Frank."

"Ought the solicitor general for one moment to be influenced in his advice to the grand jury by any consideration of the effect upon anybody's case?

"It is not our understanding that the grand jury is organized to aid the solicitor general in his management of cases in court; their function is a higher one. They investigate every case of probable guilt and return an indictment. It could just as well be argued that the indictment of Frank might have a mild but undesirable effect on Conley's case in case Conley had been first indicted.

THE SOLICITOR'S POSITION.

"The position of the solicitor general in this case from the beginning has been most remarkable. It has been heretofore understood that the solicitor was to try cases sent to him by the grand jury, but in this case, detective like, the solicitor is seeking to determine who shall be indicted forgetting his legal and constitutional functions, he is undertaking to control the action of the grand jury.

"The citizens of this county elected Mr. Dorsey as solicitor general, but Mr. Dorsey has mistaken the purpose of his election. Evidently he believes that he was elected to be also the grand jury.

"The solicitor general does his duty when he tries to the best of his ability cases sent him by the grand jury. The solicitor falls far below the dignity of his office when he inflames public opinion, thereby inducing a conviction, innocent or guilty.

"The solicitor has closed his eyes to these plain truths and has contributed print day by day proclaiming the guilt of Frank and the innocence of the negro, apparently for no purpose but to convict Frank, innocent or guilty, for the gratification of his professional pride.

"So far has the state's counsel forgotten the function of a prosecution, which is only to ascertain the truth and convict the guilty, that Mr. Dorsey's detective assistant, Chief Lanford, in an interview in this morning's paper, use the following language as to the Pinkerton detective, Scott, and Lanford's refusal to allow him to see Conley: 'We did not want to embarrass Scott by requesting him to keep silent and did not want to risk the probability of letting new developments reach Frank's attorneys, therefore we were forced to prevent him from seeing the negro.'

"It seems, therefore, a matter for great endeavor on the part of the state, as the solicitor and his associate detectives see it, to keep whatever facts they rely upon to convict Frank from the defendant and his attorneys and the public.

WHY SO MUCH FEAR?

"If the facts in the solicitor's possession were the truth, why so much fear as to letting them out? Is it possible that the effort is to ambush the defendant by the proof of circumstance on the trial which he has no opportunity to meet or explain? Is it possible that the state's object is to keep the defendant in the dark as to the state's eveidence and to so conduct its case that he will have no opportunity to know th facts relied upon to convict him and no opportunity to clearly meet them and disprove them, if they be false?

"The solicitor has undertaken in this case to hold certain witnesses in custody. He undertook to do this in the case of the negro Conley; but so fearful was he that the negro might dare tell all he knew, that he went through the farce of requesting the superior court to no longer incarcerate Conley and to discharge him, and immediately upon obtaining this order of discharge, he went through the greater farce of having him loosed upon the streets and then immediately and illegally returning him to the city station house, where he now is, carefully watched, counseled and interviewed by the solicitor, his assistant, Mr. Hooper and his detective assistants.

"We have no criticism of the former grand jury, but some things happened before it, as reported, that tend at least to provoke serious inquiry.

"When Leo M. Frank's case was before the grand judy and in the midst of it, Conley made his first confession, forced thereto by the discovery that he could write. It suggested to the solicitor that this confession be brought to the grand judy's attention. That would have been a fair thing to do. It was not done, and rumor has it that Mr. Dorsey directed that it be not done.

"One other thing is almost incredible: according to the public prints, when the solicitor wanted a vacation he was so afraid that the grand judy might act in his absence that he sought to extract a promise from these sworn servants of the state not to indict in his absence.

"When before was it ever suggested to a grand jury that they must await the termination of a pleasure trip before they should indict in any case where indictment was necessary?

IN REPLY TO MR. SMITH.

"Little need be said in reply to lawyer W. M. Smith's interview given in support of the solicitor's position.

"It is remarkable that the solicitor has to rely for support upon an argument made by Conley's counsel. It is, however, appropriate that he should bolster up the solicitor as he depends mightily upon the solicitor to protect his negro Conley. Conley's counsel realizes who is Conley's friend and rushes in print to his rescue.

"We are publishing this interview neither in an effort to have Conley indicted nor in an effort to have him not indicted. That is a matter solely for the grand jury. We are not making any appeal to them of to anybody else as to the effect Conley's indictment would have on the Frank case. So far as we are concerned we feel that the failure of the solicitor general to secure an indictment against a confessed accessory to the crime of murder would make fai more capital in favor of Frank upon his trial, than if he were indicted. We thing any jury, and we thing any community would resent the rank favoritism shown this confessed criminal.

"LUTHER E. ROSSER.
"R. R. ARNOLD."

New Witness Found Who Will Testify for Frank

Both the state and the defense continue with preparations for the great legal battle, which is expected to be staged Monday week. It is said that nearly a hundred witnesses will be subpoenaed for both sides and it is not improbable that this numb r will be augmented if the defense, as it probably will, decides to put Frank's character in issue.

Dozens of prominent citizens who know him, then will be called.

The defense is preparing to prove every statement made by Frank at the inquest about his movem nts on the day of the tragedy, by numerous witnesses. One of these witnesses, who has not previously been known to the case, is Harry J. Hinchley, district manager of the South Atlanta Blow Pipe company, who resides at the Peachtree Inn. Mr. Hinchley states that he saw Frank on April 26, between 1:50 o'clock and 2:05 o'clock on a Washington street car, near the corner of Washington and Hunter streets. Mr. Hinchley was in an automobile which was stopped along side the car. He was out of the city at the time of the inquest, but has recently been located by the d fense, and has agreed to give his testimony on the stand. His statement conforms with the statement of Frank as given during his long examination at the inquest.

Conley's Attorney Does Not Believe He Will Be Indicted

Attorney William M. Smith, counsel for James Conley, has furnished The Journal the following statement for publication:

"One of the least of the evil results of the indictment of Conley, would be to force Conley back to the county jail. He would be immediately arrested, after indictment, under a bench warrant and lodged in the county jail, as a prisoner.

"Of course, it is pretty hard that Conley is now protected from fellows of the Mincey type. You see, since Conley has been held at the station house, it has been impossible to pull off a confession stunt. No one could get to him, so no one could qualify as having had the opportunity to talk with him. Consequently the alleged confession must be dated back prior to Conley's arrest. You can see a possible reason for the delayed report of Mr. Mincey.

"I smelt this Mincey stunt way back yonder when I was fighting to hold Conley at the station house. The physical construction of the county jail and the inadequacy of guards, owing to lack of public funds for this purpose, renders it an impossibility to protect Conley against such fellows as Mincey. If the grand jury indicts Conley, thereby forcing Conley back to the tower I know Sheriff Mangum and his men will do the best possible under all the circumstances, but there will be more Mincey patriots, bearing the Conley confession that can possibly be harmonized in the short time between now and the trial. There will be so many hands in the Conley confession pot, until it will spoil the pie.

"Another thing. It must be embarrassing and really alarming to Mr. Frank, in his defense, not to be posted to date on what Jim Conley might be telling. It is easy to win a game, as a rule, if you know the other fellow's signals. Conley must be made more accessible to interviews, at any cost, is a theory that no doubt appeals strongly. It is difficult for outsiders at the station house to get wise to the whole truth as Conley tells it. It will be comparatively much easier to reach Conley at the county jail. As soon as the grand jury are assembled as soon as they indict Conley, as soon as he is lodged in the county jail, interviewers for information purposes will be Mincey thick.

DOESN'T FEAR JURY.

"The grand jury can mean this up if they want to, in a dozen different ways. I read a list of their names today, and after seeing who they are, I do not believe they will do it. All of them that I know are high-toned, honorable men, in my judgment; and, while they may meet, I have enough confidence in those I know to believe that they will first sift the influences that have been pressing them to act and not be misled by them. I believe a most thorough and painstaking investigation should be made by the grand jury into these influences, if they exist, and that rigorous measure should be adopted, even though it should strike members of the grand jury. If any members of the grand jury have been unduly active in this matter, they should not be spared. Any one who seeks improperly to embarrass the state, in averting the murder of this little girl, should be summarily dealt with."

tions. She's taken the best years of my life away from me already."

For eighteen years he and Mrs. Smith lived together until th ir separation several years ago, said he. Their son are., 16, is in Atlanta with him at the Kimball.

The following written statement was issued by Burton Smith, attorney for Dr. Smith:

"Dr. Smith is in no way to blame for this unfortunate occurrance. He and his wife have been separated for a great many years, and there have been of late efforts at reconciliation. They have one son nearly grown, and on his account Dr. Smith was anxious for a reconciliation. The unfortunate lady is so jealous as to make it almost a malady. Dr. Smith purely by accident met a patient on the street and with her he exchanged a few words. Then the unfortunate trouble occurred. He is unwilling to pass any criticism upon the mother of his son and only regrets her deplorable and unjustifiable jealousy.

MRS. SMITH'S STATEMENT.

Mrs. Smith declared that Dr. Smith had been "running around" with Mrs. McNeil for some time. "We have been separated for several years, but lately the doctor has been urging me to return to him," she said.

"This morning I came to Atlanta from my home in Douglasville. I had heard Dr. Smith was going with Mrs. McNeil again, so I trailed him from the kimball, and when I saw them together I got so mad that I couldn't control myself any longer.

"I admit that I hit Mrs. McNeil and myself any longer.

I would do it again. I gave her a black eye, but she didn't hurt me."

MRS. MCNEIL'S VERSION.

Mrs. McNeil denies that there is any basis for charges against her and Dr. Smith.

"I was standing on the street waiting for a car, and was impatient for it to come as I wanted to get home and dress to go to Piedmont park with a friend to take some pictures.

"As I was waiting, Dr. Smith came by and I spoke. He responded and I asked him if he could give me some medicine like some he gave me once before. He said yes, he thought he could; and about that time I felt someone attack me from behind.

"I was utterly astounded, and at first did not realize that it was meant for me, but after the second or third attack I saw that some one was trying to hurt me. I turned and saw Mrs. Smith and tried to catch her arm.

"It was then she threw something at me me. Whether it was acid or not I do not know, for none of it hurt e." Here she bared her arm and showed it unscarred.

"Dr. Smith called her name, then, and tried to take her away, and I wanted to get away because I was ashamed of the notoriety.

"I came straight home. It was just insane and unreasonable jealousy that prompted Mrs. Smith to do such a thing, of which I am sure she is now ashamed. It was without cause or foundation. I am well-known here, and my husband, who has been dead four years, was a reputable Atlanta business man.

"I have a son growing into young manhood, and I would not do a thing that would hurt his respect for me. And I regret this extremely, both for his sake and because of my aged aunt with whom I live. She feels that the occurrence was disgraceful. And so do I but I could not know that it was going to happen and I was defense ess.

FRIEND OF SMITH'S

"As I understand it, Dr. Smith has been separated from his wife for five years, and when he left her he did so because she told him she did not love him. Once or twice I have urged them to return to each other because they have a son; but certainly my acquaintance with them has been of nothing but a purely friendly nature. Dr. Smith has always behaved in a most gentlemanly manner toward me, and I can see no reason why I should not converse with him pleasantly or speak with him when I meet him, though I would not have done that if I had known it would cause his wife jealousy and bring about such a thing as happened Saturday.

"Several hundred people at Five Points were astonished by the sudden excitement which the affray caused. Mrs. McNeil went at once into the men's furnish-

ATLANTA WHOLESALERS WELCOME COMPETITION

Salesmen of North and East Will Be Greeted at Coming Convention

The Atlanta Merchants and Manufacturers' association, which holds its annual convention here beginning August 4, wishes to correct an impression that might have arisen indicating that the association wants the city council of Atlanta to place a tax on visiting salesmen selling to the consumer.

The association wants no tax on such salesmen and has never considered asking council to make such a law. On the contrary, its members welcome competition from the merchants of the north and east and will be glad to see some of their representatives at the coming convention.

The impression probably arose out of a story which inadvertentdy ascribed an action to the wholesale dealers of the city which should have been ascribed to the retailers.

It is true, say the local wholesalers, that there was some discussion among local retail merchants as to the advisability of a city tax license on merchants who came into Atlanta, established themselves in hotels for a short time, and sold direct to the consumer.

But as far as the wholesale association which is promoting the coming exposition goes, there has never been any discussion of this matter in any meeting of the body. Most of its members are believers in the open market, all of them sell their goods in the open markets of the country, and all of them desire that visiting merchants have every opportunity to compare prices and values with any and all competition.

It is with this desire that they greet all visiting merchants from big cities of the entire country to the August convention. The convention starts Tuesday, August 5, with an address of welcome by Mayor Woodward. Leading topics will be discussed by prominent merchants of the state. On Wednesday the day will be devoted to meeting of committees and inspection of factories and stores.

The convention lasts through Thursday and Friday, and includes in it many social features, such as ball games, theater parties, receptions and of course a barbecue.

WOULD MAKE STOCK CO. OF NEGRO INSURANCE CO.

Union Mutual Association Thrown Into Courts by Opposition of President

The Union Mutual Association, a negro institution, but one of the largest co-operative insurance companies in the south, has been thrown into the courts as a result of an effort to transform it into a stock company.

T. W. Walker, the president of the company, through attorneys Burton Smith, Philip Alston and Henry Troutman, has secured from Judge W. D. Ellis, of the superior court, a temporary order, upholding the element, which wishes to transform the company into a stock organization, from exercising any authority. Under the co-operative system the company is controlled by the policyholders.

The Union Mutual Association is said to have a monthly debit of $16,000, which means that the several thousand policy holders pay that amount into the company every month. The insurance department estimates the value of this debit at $100,000. According to the law the concern can be changed to a stock company by the payment of $25,000 for the stock, if three-fourths of the policyholders vote for the change ,and it is claimed by the element favoring the stock company that the law has been complied with. However ,the insurance department has refused to issue the stock company a license and many of the policyholders are fighting the proposed change ,and the matter probably will be finally settled through the courts. The change would take the control from the policyholders.

Incident to the civil litigation was a criminal charge of perjury brought against H. T. Walker, the president, by Attorney C. P. Goree, who represents the stock company. The warrant was dismissed by Judge J. B. Ridley.

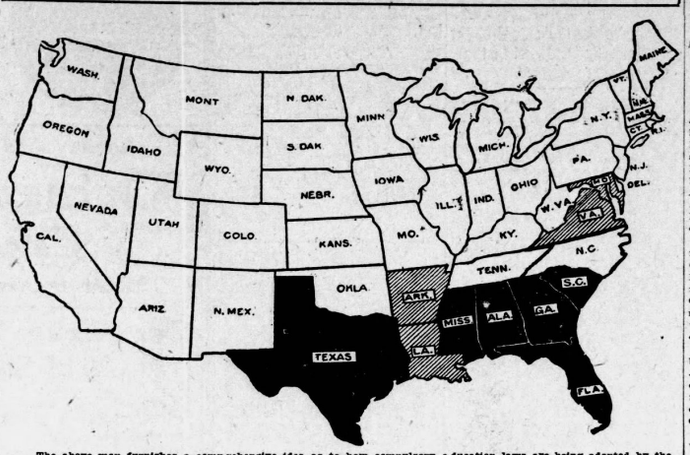
GENERAL ASSEMBLY WILL DOUBTLESS ENACT A COMPULSORY EDUCATION LAW THIS SESSION



The above map furnishes a comprehensive idea as to how compulsory education laws are being adopted by the various states in the union. Those thirty-eight states in outline have compulsory education laws; the four through which diagonal lines are drawn have laws providing a partial system of compulsory education, and the four in black have no laws on the subject. Tennessee and North Carolina recently passed compulsory educational laws.

It is only in six southern states—Georgia, Florida, South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi and Texas—that American parents are allowed to deprive their children of the benefits of the common school education provided for them out of the taxes of the people. Throughout the rest of the union the states have compulsory school attendance laws. Georgia ranks forty-second among the states in the number of children in the schools. About a twelfth of the white population above ten years of age in this state are unable to read and write.

Three years ago a compulsory school attendance bill, supported by many thousand petitioners from all parts of the state, was introduced in the general assembly by Dr. Littleton, of Richmond county, and it lacked only six votes of adoption by the house. Since that time recognition of the need of such a law has been becoming more general. State School Superintendent M. L. Brittain, in his report to the general assembly, has recommended legislation on this line, and bills on the subject have been introduced in the house of representatives by Mr. H. J. Fullbright, of Burke, and Mr. J. O. Adams, of Hall, and in the senate by Judge J. L. Sweat. A unanimous recommendation has been given to the Sweat bill by the senate committee on education, and the same measure has been recommended by the house committee on education as a substitute for the other bills mentioned.

This measure is very much milder than any of the laws of other states on the subject. Children who have had instruction equivalent to that obtained by those who have completed the fourth grade in the public schools—a grade completed by many children under ten years of age—are exempt from the requirements of the bill. Children of that grade have been taught to read and write and have had some instruction in elementary arithmetic. Only twelve weeks' schooling is required in a year, and the time can be so arranged by the school board as not to interfere with farm work or to conflict with the needs of parents. A number of exemptions and excuses are specified in the bill, and the local boards of education are left free, to excuse for any other reason they may deem satisfactory, and teachers may, for the usual reasons, excuse for temporary absence.

So far as the negro problem and interference with agricultural work are concerned, the local boards of education, who are practically given full discretion as to the administration of the law, would not be likely to administer it in a way that would be unsatisfactory to their respective communities.

No prosecution can be instituted under the bill without ten days' notice from the board of education to the parent, and a prosecution can then be prevented by giving a small bond to comply thenceforth with the law as to the child in question. If the parent gives a reason satisfactory to the board the matter will be dropped, and if it is turned over by the board to a court, the extent of the punishment for a first offense is a fine, which may be $20 or less; and the court, in its discretion, may suspend enforcement of the fine if the parent will at once send the child to school, and may remit it entirely if the attendance has been kept up for the required time.

The bill applies to children from eight to twelve years of age, unless exempted or excused, and applied also to children between twelve and fourteen who are not at work. The child labor law already excludes from manufacturing establishments children under ten, and excludes children under twelve, except under specified conditions recognized by this bill; and manufacturers as well as labor organizations favor a law which will require that such children be sent to school. Children of this tender age can easily, without hardship to parents, be spared from farm work a few hours a day for twelve weeks in some part of the year. Cases of poverty, ill health, etc., are dealt with in the bill. The required instruction may be obtained at private schools or at home, instead of at public schools.

This bill has the earnest support of State Superintendent Brittain, who takes the position that the time is not ripe in Georgia for a more rigid law. In his report to the legislature, he says:

"Conditions in our state, in my judgment, would not enable us to enforce a strict compulsory law. It does seem to me, however, that we have waited long enough for legislation on this line. With a reasonable age limit of from eight to twelve years of age, and a term of four or five months, giving boards of education power of excuse in cases of peculiar hardship and circumstances affecting the negroes particularly, it should be possible to secure legislation that will be helpful through moral as well as legal effect, inflict no hardship upon our people, and give us ground upon which to stand for further advancement later. We are in no condition to support or enforce a radical law on this subject, but it is time for Georgia to begin with this work."

A strong advocate of compulsory education has the following to say on the subject:

"Recently North Carolina and Tennessee have adopted laws on this subject. There seems to be no good reason why Georgia should not make a like attempt to reduce its large percentage of white illiteracy. The indifference, ignorance or greed of parents should no longer be allowed to stand in the way of their children learning to read and write. It should be humiliating to every Georgian to think of the low average of education among the masses of the people of this state as compared with all but a few other states; and the fear that legislation of the kind proposed might cause a greater proportion of negroes to learn to read and write should not keep us from doing justice to our white children."

As Investment Diamonds Have Paid 10 Per Cent. Per Annum For Years

This fact is easily shown by tracing diamond history from 1897, since when diamonds have more than doubled in value.

Reasons for these advances are obvious. Fewer stones are being found, and finer stones rarer. Mining machinery has become obsolete on account of the greater depth of the mines. The native miners have recognized their value, and are demanding higher wages, and a radical increase in wages has been demanded and obtained by the diamond cutters.

In December, 1908, we begun calling attention to the probable rapid increase in diamond values, since when there have been several material advances, and during the last few months the Diamond Syndicate made advances on rough diamonds, which increased the value of the finished product about 12%.

Anticipating this advance, we made large contracts with the cutters during the early summer season, and we are giving our customers the benefit of these prices, though it will be necessary for us to increase our prices after our present large stock is exhausted.

Exclusive Diamond Merchants, our whole time is given to the one idea of value. Our large purchases enable us to buy direct from the larger cutters of the world, and our careful grading and classing, together with our positive guarantee of cash return and exchange value, assures your investment.

Our mail order department is a perfect system, and your business and correspondence will be given the most careful attention.

We will be glad to mail you our Diamond Books, Set No. 5, upon request.

MRS. CRAWFORD WILL FIGHT LUMB'S RETURN

Attorneys Smith and Arnold Will Contest Requisition Papers

The effort of Col. J. S. James, representing certain of the "Crawford" heirs," to secure requisition papers for Frederick Lumb, charged with being an acessory before the fact in the alleged murder of J. B. Crawford in 1909, will be vigorously contested by Attorneys Burton Smith and Reuben R. Arnold, who represent Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, the widow, who is charged with the crime.

The hearing of Col. James' request for requisition has been set before Governor John M. Slaton for 9 o'clock Monday morning, and in fighting the requisition, the attorneys for Mrs. Crawford are expected to contend that no crime has even been committed and that J. B. Crawford died a natural death.

While Lumb has never been located by the detectives employed by Col. James, it is known that he has retained counsel in New York, and his attorneys there are said to be in communication with the attorneys of Mrs. Crawford in Atlanta.

Col. James intimates in statements to newspaper reporters that there is a strong probability that others will be involved by the Crawford heirs in the plot which their charge produced the death of the aged and wealthy Atlantian.

While the attorneys for the "heirs" will give no names, they say that probably two additional warrants, charging complicity in the murder case will be drawn.

Mrs. Wilson Sees Game Of Country Baseball

WASHINGTON, July 19.—President Wilson today experienced the excitement of a country baseball game. He happened along in his automobile at La Plata, Md., about 35 miles south of Washington, when he heard a series of wild shouts and cheers. The president thought he could watch the game inconspicuously without being recognized and left the automobile a short distance from the diamond. A thousand curious eyes were turned upon him and feminine rooters almost immediately discovered his identity.

"Its the president," they chorused as they swooped down on him and greeted him. The players paused and the crowd gave three hearty cheers for him. The president learned that the La Plata team was in bitter combat with the Indian Head, Md., team at a tie score. The president watched the contest for half an hour but did not wait for the finish.

The president arrived at the White House just in time for dinner. He had traveled seventy miles. Earlier in the day he played golf. It is expected he will confer with Secretary Wilson, of the department of labor, on Monday to select a successor to Louis F. Post. It is believed the president soon will name a commissioner of labor statistics who will be designated also to act on the new board.

SWEARS OUT WARRANT AGAINST NEGRO WAITER

Joe Wright, colored, head waiter at one of the downtown social clubs, was arrested Saturday night on two warrants sworn out in Justice of the Peace Girardeau's court by H. M. Wright was released under $300 bond on each charge. W. A. Niall flo the Niall-Herring Safe company, went on his bonds.

It is understood that the warrants were a result of a dispute which occurred between Rice and the negro at the club last Sunday evening.

"GOOD WORDS" PRINTS AN EXTRA ON FEDERAL PEN BASEBALL GAME

Pirates, With 4179 and 3835 as the Battery, Win Championship From Tigers With 4409 Hurling

The first baseball extra of "Good Words" was issued from the presses yesterday afternoon at 4:01 o'clock with the news hot off the hat (hot is good) that the Pirates of the prison league were champions of the 1913 spring season at the Atlanta federal penitentiary. The Pirates had just finished drubbing the Tigers to the tune of 13 to 3. The final paragraph of the running story of the day's big game was this:

"Ninth inning. Tigers—three up and three down. AND THE PIRATES ARE CHAMPIONS."

The extras were in circulation before the Pirates had started telling how they did it and what they intend to do in the fall season that already has begun.

A four column full width head over the top of the extra told "The Pirates Win Championship for Spring Season."

The batteries were 4179 and 3835 for the Pirates and 4409 and 3659 for the Tigers. The umpires were 3579 and 2046. The numbers refer to prisoners, whose real names are buried in the record books of Warden Moyer's office.

When the spring season ended, the Pirates, Tigers and Giants of the prison league were tied for first place, each with a percentage of .714. Five other teams trailed the leaders, with the Athletics in last place with .143 per cent. On July 10 the Pirates mopped with the Giants; and yesterday's game, deciding the championship for the Pirates, was between that team and the remaining topnotchers.

Here are the line-ups:

"THIRD INNING.

"Tigers—4409 whacked one to third and goes to second on wide throw. 'Happy' drives one to left for one bag and swipes second on first pitched ball. 'Nine' on third. 4036 is inveigled into fanning at three wide ones. 4083 hits a hot liner to second and is out. Nice catch. 'Yellow,' with a chance to get a place in the Hall of Fame, does the Casey act. ONE HIT. NO RUNS.

"Pirates—3824 balloons a high fly to the infield and gets a safe hit on the Society stunt of the shortstop and third baseman and goes to second on a wild throw. 'Angel' smashes one to left garden, and 'Frankie' scores. Pitcher asleep and 'Angel' steals third. 3823 perambulates to first on a donation. 4022 lifted one to center and out. 4362 hammers a safety to right and 'Angel' and 3823 score. 'Chief' strikes out. 3651 places a Texas leaguer to right and 'Smittie' helps to win his game by a sizzling two-bagger to left and two runs register. He scores on error of third baseman. 2817 strikes out. FIVE HITS. SIX RUNS."

GEORGIA AND HER POLITICS

Senator Hoke Smith Returns To Washington This Morning.

Senator Hoke Smith leaves at noon today for Washington aid the Democrats of the senate in putting through the tariff bill prepared by the finance committee of which he is a member.

The junior senator came to Atlanta in response to an invitation to address the general assembly last Friday and owing to the very large number of his constituents from all portions of the state who wished to confer with him he delayed his return until today.

A suite of three receptions rooms was engaged at the Piedmont hotel by Senator Smith and all day of every day since his arrival these rooms have been thronged with callers.

Senator Smith's address to the general assembly has been widely and favorably commented upon. It was not a spectacular oratorical effort but a forceful and convincing recital of his work in the senate—a simple accounting for his stewardship. His efforts and accomplishments as a United States senator have challenged the admiration and commendation of his fellow Georgians.

A Frank Argument in Favor of Tax Equalization in Georgia.

One of the most frank and at the same time forcible arguments yet made in favor of tax reform is that contained in an editorial in the current issue of the Oglethorpe Echo. Editor Shackelford calls attention to the fact that there are seventeen counties in Georgia that receive more money from the state in pensions and public school funds than they pay in taxes, and he admits that Oglethorpe is among the delinquents. Inequality in the matter of taxes assessments is given as the reason.

The editorial follows:

"There are seventeen counties in Georgit (and it is with shame we report Oglethorpe is one of them) that get more money out of the state treasury in pensions and public school funds than they pay in. It's not Oglethorpe's poverty that makes this thus but is due to the state's lax tax assessing system."

Georgia's New Governor Is Just Now Leading a Strenuous Life.

They are keeping Governor Slaton on the jump these days. What with looking after the affairs of state during a session of the general assembly and attending various functions in various cities he is having his hands full.

The governor recently made two trips to Brunswick, one to inspect the fifth regiment's camp on St. Simons island, and the other to review and address the confederate veterans. Saturday he visited Augusta with the legislature and on Wednesday he will go to LaGrange to attend the banquet to the Georgia Weekly Press association, he having accepted an invitation to deliver an address on this occasion.

Strong Indorsement of Bill to Create County of Barrow.

The bill providing for a constitutional amendment to create Barrow county, with Winder as the county seat, is a proposition with undenied merit, although it is vigorously opposed by some of the citizens residing in the counties affected.

Perhaps the strongest indorsement of this movement is contained in an editorial printed in the current issue of the Commerce Observer, an influential newspaper published in the city of Commerce. This editorial is considered especially significant, because it is printed in a Jackson county paper, and Jackson is one of the counties from which the county of Barrow proposes to take a slice of territory. The other two counties affected are Gwinnett and Walton.

Copies of this editorial have been furnished to the members of the senate, and it undoubtedly has had a good effect in favor of the Barrow county bill. The editorial follows:

"The fate of Barrow county rests in the hands of the senate. Receiving the unanimous approval of the house committee and passing the house by a vote of 128 to 25, then being approved by the senate committee for passage, the Barrow county bill is now ready to be voted on in the senate, the last action to determine the fate of the new county proposition.

"The Observer has said before that the claims in favor of creating Barrow county are so just and convincing that those who view from the standpoint of merit, free from prepjudece, cannot but indorse the proposition. The success of the new county movement thus far is an evidence of its clear-cut, just and substantial features.

"So many able men of the general assembly have heartily indorsed the proposed new county after considering both sides of the case that surely the senate will confirm their judgment and pass the bill, thus bringing the matter to a close. The passage or the Barrow county bill would not commit the senate to other new county propositions. Reason, logic, rightful claims and merit should characterize a new county proposition. Barrow county's creation is asked on these grounds and the state will undoubtedly recognize these principles when the bill comes to a vote."

Governor Colquitt, of Texas, Native Georgian, Given Rebuff by Voters.

Several constitutional amendments, advocated and backed by Governor Colquitt, of Texas, a native Georgian, were defeatd by the voters of the Lone Star state Saturday. Some of these amendments dealt with questions in which the people of Georgia are at present very much interested.

By a vote of 4 to 1 the voters of Texas refused to abolish the fee system of compensating state and county officers. Had this amendment been adopted the state and county officers would have been placed upon a salary basis.

Two other amendments were rejected by even larger votes. One would authorize the issuance of bonds for state institutions and liberalize provisions as to local bonds. Another sought to abolish court terms and provide assignment of district judges to any part of the state.

NEW NICARAGUAN POLICY OUTLINED BY MR. BRYAN

Suggests Virtual Control of Affairs by U. S., as In the Case of Cuba

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 19.—A new policy toward Nicaragua involving the virtual control of the affairs of that republic by the United States through a protectorate similar to that exercised over Cuba, was outlined today by Secretary Bryan, at a private conference with members of the senate foreign relations committee.

Mr. Bryan's proposal, coming as a complete surprise to most of the members of the committee, has been taken by many senators, as the first pronouncement of a general policy on the part of the administration to extend American control over the countries surrounding the Panama canal, and to assure that stability of central American republics and the dominance of the United States of their relations with other great powers.

Secretary Bryan went before a committee with a revised draft of the proposed Nicaraguan trety, negotiated first in the Taft administration, by which the United States would secure exclusive canal rights across Nicaragua and a new naval base, in exchange for a $3,000,000 gold payment.

NEW FEATURE OF TREATY.

As a new feature of the treaty, however, the secretary of state proposed that language similar if not identical with the so-called "Platt amendment," relating to Cuba, be injected in the treaty, giving the United States sweeping control of Nicaraguan affairs and *the power to regulate her foreign rela*tions and her finances.

Under the proposed plan, Nicaragua would agree in substance:

That war should not be declared without the consent of the United States.

That no treaties would be made with foreign governments that would tend to destroy her independence, or that would give those governments a foothold in the republic.

That no public debt would be contracted beyond the ordinary resources of the government, as indicated by the ordinary revenues.

That the United States should have the right to intervene at any time to preserve Nicaraguan independence, or to protect life or property.

That the United States should have the exclusive right to build a canal across Nicaragua and should have a ninety-nine-year lease to a naval base in the Bay of Fonseca and to the Great Corn and Little Corn islands in the Caribbean, with the privilege of removing the lease.

The United States in return should pay Nicaragua $3,000,000 to be used in public works and education.

NICARAGUANS WILLING.

It is understood the Nicaraguan government is willing to enter into the proposed treaty, because of the stability it would give to the present Diaz government and to the proposed reorganization of the fiscal affairs of the republic. It is understod a refunding of the Nicaraguan debt, for which about $15,000,000 is required, does not form a specific part of the negotiations laid today before the senate committee.

Mr. Bryan and members of the committee refused to discuss the nature of the conference further than to say that it took in the whole scope of Nicaraguan affairs. The striking plan suggested by the secretary of state became the subject of informal discussion among members of the committee during the afternoon, and it is believed the proposal will find much support from

Deaths and Funerals

MR. HERBERT PITTMAN.

Mr. Herbert Pittman, aged 22 years, died at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the residence, 1350 Marietta road. The body was removed to Harry G. Poole's chapel and will be taken Sunday morning to Cedartown, Ga., for funeral and interment. He is survived by his mother, five sisters, and three brothers.

MR. D. Q. BRAMLETT.

The body of Mr. D. Q. Bramlett, the former Atlanta man who was killed not long ago at his home in San Francisco, will reach Atlanta Sunday and be removed to Barclay & Brandon's chapel to await funeral arrangements.

WILLIAM L. LATIMER.

William L., the ten-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Latimer, died Saturday afternoon at the residence, 112 McAfee street. The body will be sent to Gainesville, Ga., for funeral and interment.

Both Democrats and Republicans.

Members of the senate tonight professed to believe that should the step be taken in respect to Nicaragua, extending American influence over its affairs to the extent suggested, it would be followed by efforts to negotiate similar treaties with all of the republics in Central America. Many senators strongly favor such a course, contending it is necessary to the permanent safety and control of the Panama canal.

In its original form the Nicaraguan treaty involved only the exclusive grant of canal rights and the grant of a naval base to the United States. Members of the foreign relations committee are not prepared for the further suggestion made by the secretary of state today. After a meeting lasting more than an hour the conference was continued until next Saturday.

The committee refused to act upon the Nicaraguan treaty negotiated by the Taft administration, but has been strongly urged by the Wilson administration to support the proposed compact. The Nicaraguan government is anxious for the consummation of the treaty. It is understood, in the hope that plans can then be made for the refunding of its debt and the reorganization of its fiscal system.

SUGGESTS MILK DRINKING TO REDUCE LIVING COST

Dr. Visanska Says Dime's Worth of Milk Is Better Than 22-Cent Steak

The milk committee of the chamber of commerce, of which Dr. S. A. Visanska is chairman, is making plans to bring Dr. Charles E. North, the well known milk expert of New York, to Atlanta to study the milk situation here.

Believing that one of Atlanta's greatest needs is a pure milk supply, the committee, after investigating the situation thoroughly, presented a comprehensive report to the chamber of commerce, outlining its work and recommending that Dr. North be invited to make a thorough survey in Atlanta.

As soon as the necessary funds can be raised, Dr. North will be invited to make the trip, and the chamber of commerce will appoint committees at an early date to secure the needed money—several hundred dollars.

Dr. North is connected with the famous Harbison Dairies, of Philadelphia, and is a prominent member and one-time officer of the International Milk Dealers' association, for whom he has done much sanitary work. He has also been employed by the health department of New York City and by the United States department of agriculture at Washington. He is a leading authority on all questions concerning milk from the scientific standpoint. He represented the milk commission of New York City at the great dairy show held in Chicago last fall—an exhibition that attracted world-wide attention, and is considered the one man who would render a thoroughly satisfactory report on Atlanta's milk situation.

The milk committee has been in communication with Dr. North, who has stated that he will come for a reasonable amount covering the expenses of the trip and the investigation.

The plans of the milk committee include a number of projects. It first wishes to establish a pure milk supply, and later hopes to have certified milk depots and a scientific dairy which will send out only bottles of milk that have been approved by physicians and sealed with a medical seal.

"Every mother should be interested in the plan," says Dr. Visanska, "for the question of pure milk is one of the most important in the rearing of healthful children. Older people, too, would be benefited by pure milk. There is more nutriment in 10 cents' worth of a good milk than there is in 22 cents' worth of steak, and if people could obtain pure milk and drink more of it in the conclusion of meat, the cost of living might be cut down materially."

CORN CLUBS STIMULATE INTEREST IN FARMING

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

DALTON, Ga., July 19.—Declaring that the corn clubs are resulting in increased attendance in the agricultural schools and colleges, County School Superintendent Elsberry has advanced another great argument for a continuance and broadening out of the club work.

Mr. Stepp states that he has observed conditions in the Whitfield club and has discovered that the fine results attained have spurred the club members to a desire to learn more about farming, with the result that many corn club members are this year attending the agricultural colleges, preparing themselves for lifework on the farm.

CREMONA VIOLIN, MADE IN 1621, OWNED BY LADY IN ATLANTA

MISS SUSIE Le ASEN,
Who is visiting in the city, an dthe old, precious violin made in Brescia, Italy, 292 years ago.

Nearly three centuries ago, a violin maker at Brescia fashioned a fragile instrument in which he sought to imprison the soul of music. Carved, perforated and polished with that high lustre which characterizes the Cremona violin, it was a thing of beauty when it passed from the hands of its maker. Inside the graceful case was inscribed the name "Giovan Paolo Magini," and the date, "Brescia, 1621." It was the signature of one of the earliest of violin makers, a signature worth several thousand dollars nowadays.

Of these only a few are known to be in existence, and it seems almost too good to be true that one of them should be found in Atlanta. Still it seems that a genuine Cremona violin has turned up in the city after 292 years of wandering experience.

It is owned by Miss Susie LeRosen, who is visiting her sister, Mrs. L. T. Patillo, at 230 North Moreland avenue. She is from Shreveport, Louisiana, and bought the violin there in 1890 from Major D. S. Allen, a connoisseur in violins.

As far as he could learn, the old violin passed first from the hands of the maker into the possession of an old Spanish family which cherished the shell-like instrument for a hundred years or more. Descendants of the family, moving into Mexico, took with them the slender old violin, and there for many years it made music like that which one hears in dreams.

Then the violin disappeared. It next made its appearance in Louisiana in the hands of a mechanic who declined to say just how it came into his possession. He loved it, too, like all its owners, and when he had to sell it because of poverty, he did so with tears in his eyes.

When Major Allen was fortunate enough to get it, at a price far below its value, its high polish had been softened to a golden lustre by the many fingers that caressed the instrument as they played. It was nicked in places, and scratched, but when the bow was drawn across the strings the spirit of the Brescian violinmaker spoke again in the soft tones that answered to the touch of loving hands.

In 1890 Major Allen sold the violin to Miss LeRosen and for thirty-three years she has cherished it as her most beloved possession. When it came into her hands it was so old that it had to be repaired. The shell was cracked, the bass bar crumbling with age; so she sent it to a noted violinmaker, who repaired it with such skill that the dents and neatly mended cracks but add charm to the instrument.

Ovide Musin, a violinist famous in his day, played on the old violin when he toured the south, and he pronounced it a genuine Cremona. It has the high F holes, the double perforations, and the high lustre of the Cremona, and there is nothing to indicate that it is not genuine. Miss LeRosen several times has been offered over $1,000 for it, but she did not wish to sell then, nor was the price offered commensurate with the value of a real Cremona of which there are not more than a half dozen in existence.

The old violin seems fated to change hands, it seems, for the time has come when Miss LeRosen will sell the violin to any one who wishes to possess a Cremona, but now, as in the future, it must go to a loving owner, for in all its 283 years it has not remained with those of alien sympathy.

GEORGIA LAW MAKERS ENJOY AUGUSTA JAUNT

Barbecue at Carmichael Fishing Club Featured by Speeches

BY ESTES DOREMUS.
Journal Staff Correspondent.

AUGUSTA, Ga., July 19.—Speeches by Governor John M. Slaton, M. Ashby Jones, pastor of the First Baptist church, and Judge Henry C. Hammond featured the barbecue given to the general assembly of Georgia this afternoon.

After the visit to the state Medical college the guests were taken in automobiles to the historic Carmichael Fishing club, and treated to a barbecue.

The enthusiasm of the visitors was great and the applause following the remarks of Dr. Jones lasted fully five minutes. His speech was purely an appeal from the people of Augusta for what she really thought was due her, and not an argument for more than what had been awarded by the appropriations committee.

The barbecue will go down as a red-letter event in the annals of events at the club. Promptly at 6 o'clock the "special" left for Atlanta, and the legislators are due there at 11 o'clock tonight.

Minister Would Convert Thief Who Entered His House

Returning to Atlanta after an absence of ten days, Rev. Dr. Caleb A. Ridley and his family found that their house had been burglarized just an hour before they re-entered it.

Dr. Ridley is pastor of the Central Baptist church. His home is at 314 South Proyor street. For the past ten days he and his family have been in Monticello, Ga. They came back to Atlanta Saturday and Dr. Ridley unlocked the front door of his home shortly after 2 o'clock.

A few minutes later he noticed that one of the interior doors of the house, communicating with stairs into the basement, was open. The lock had been smashed. An axe was found nearby. It should have been in the back yard. That led to further investigation, and Dr. Ridley discovered that about $60 worth of jewelry, a watch chain and charm, a razor, some clothes, and a few other things were missing. The family began a general inventory to determine what else the intruder had taken.

"We thought you got home about an hour ago," said neighbors, greeting the family. We heard somebody moving around over here, and called, but didn't get an answer."

"That was the burglar!" exclaimed Dr. Ridley. "If he had delayed just a little longer I'd have caught him and converted him."

(Special Dispatch to The Journal).

DALTON, Ga., July 19.—Worried over the sudden disappearance of her grandson, Mrs. B. C. Bivings last night called in assistance, and a search party combed the neighborhood in a fruitless effort to locate the little fellow.

After a long search they returned to the home, determined to start over again, when someone suggested that the result being the little fellow was found suit being the little fellow was found asleep in his room.

LEGISLATIVE GRIND HAS PASSED HALFWAY MARK

And Not a Single Measure of More Than Local Interest Has Been Disposed Of

Monday morning the wheels of the general assembly of the state of Georgia will start their grind on the fourth week of the annual session.

The legislature has been assembled for twenty-eight working days, it has only twenty-two working days left to meet, including Saturdays and the date of adjournment, August 14.

In the twenty-eight days the assembly has passed not a single big measure of general interest, and the only bills approved by both houses have been strictly local ones.

To date the only active legislation done on a really live measure was on the bill providing for the creation of the county of Barrow, with Winder as the county seat. This bill the house passed by a large majority. It went to the constitutional amendments committee of the senate and was returned with a recommendation that it do pass. But a minority report was filed, signed by two members of the committee, an action which indicates that the bill will be contested on the senate floor when it comes up as a special order Wednesday morning.

The opposition and the supporters of the bill are both working actively for and against its passage. It is conceded generally by members of the legislature that the Barrow county bill is the most meritorious county bill introduced at this session and it is believed that it has as fine a chance to pass in the senate as it did in the house. It must go before the people for ratification before the new county is an assured fact.

The house will be busy this week with two problems, general appropriations and tax equalization. The ways and means committee of the house, after considering all the tax bills introduced this session and wrangling over the subject through many meetings, will probably come to a decision early in the week and report back to the house.

In the senate the two main questions at issue next week, besides the Barrow county bill are the bill applying the provisions of the Webb anti-liquor shipping law to Georgia and the bill requiring the Bible to be read in the public schools.

The re-hearing on the latter bill has been set for a continuance Tuesday afternoon. At that time it is expected that this opposition, led by Rabbi David Marx, Dr. C. B. Wilmer, Dr. John E. White and Father Rapier, will make a strong fight to kill the bill entirely. In support of the bill are the Presbyterian ministers, the Methodists, and a number of Baptist preachers.

The Webb law measure has been reported favorably to the senate by unanimous vote of the temperance committee, but it is certain to undergo much discussion before it passes the senate and goes to the house.

The bone of contention is the clause fixing the burden of proof where the legality of a shipment is called into question, on the shipping company if the amount shipped is over three gallons and on the state in cases where it is less.

JAPAN IS DISAPPOINTED OVER AMERICAN REPLY

Situation Strikes Deadlock, Developments in China Closely Watched

TOKYO, July 19.—Deep disappointment is felt in Japan in connection with the American reply to the last two Japanese notes on the subject of the California alien land ownership legislation. This does not accept any of the Japanese contentions that the bill violates the Japanese-American treaty and does not offer any suggestion to a solution of the difficulty.

The situation here has reached a deadlock. Japan has not yet decided on her next step, but is so desirous of maintaining friendly relations that it is not believed she will adopt retaliatory measures.

The Japanese public has been led by the press to the belief that Washington would afford some relief to the situation, and therefore the government's situation has been rendered more difficult. The public generally, however, is absorbed in the development of the Chinese situation. Official advices show that the rebellion in south China has become grave.

LITTLE MARY GREENE DIED YESTERDAY P. M.

Oldest Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Greene Succumbs to Typhoid

Little Mary Greene, who has been ill with typhoid fever for several weeks, died yesterday afternoon at 3:25 at her home on Park avenue. Though Mary had been ill for several weeks, she was better a few days ago and it was thought that all danger was past. Friday, however, she grew worse and on Saturday, however, the frail little body, weakened by the long illness, gave way.

Mary was a dear little girl, sweet, gentle and lovable and more thoughtful of others than a little child usually is. She was only nine years old but had numbers of devoted friends, both young and old, who will feel her loss keenly.

The simple funeral service will be held Monday morning at 11 o'clock at the family residence, 150 Park avenue. Dr. J. B. Robins, of Trinity church, the church Mary attended, and Dr. B. F. Frasier, of St. Paul's, will conduct the service.

Cotton Made New High Record for Movement on Hot Dry Weather

Reports of Record-Breaking Temperature in Georgia Caused Further Nervousness Over the New Crop Outlook in Eastern Belt

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, July 19.—Continued hot weather over the eastern belt with reports of record-breaking temperature in Georgia caused further nervousness over the new crop outlook in the cotton market this morning and prices made new high ground for the movement.

Trading was not active and there was moderate realizing for over the week-end, but offerings were readily taken by shorts, fresh buyers for long account, or trade interests and the close was firm at a net advance of 13 to 8 points. The ruling of the cables did not indicate any particular apprehension of new crop damage abroad, as Liverpool futures were a shade lower than the on the New York close of yesterday.

The increased demand in the English spot market however, made the showing a fairly steady one, and the opening here was 3 points lower on July but generally 1 to 9 points higher. Profit-taking was active enough to cause some irregularity right after the call and a little scattered selling may have been inspired by prospects for cooler weather with probable showers in the eastern belt, but the market soon steadied up, and became firm on the detailed weather reports which showed temperatures ranging up to 108 degrees in one of the Georgia stations with several eastern belt points reporting 105 to 107.

Closing prices were practically the best of the day. Old crop months were relatively quiet and easy during the entire morning notwithstanding further withdrawals from the long certified stock. Private crop reports remained more or less conflicting.

Texas railroads are said to be preparing to handle a record-breaking crop and so far the high temperatures in the eastern belt save brought in very few complaints, but there were scattering report deterioration and those who take a bullish view of the crop situation claim that present conditions will not help the plant through the usually trying month of August.

NEW YORK COTTON LETTER.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The market was sold early by the crop and weather prospect of high temperatures over western belt, but when detailed weather reports were issued showing 22 stations in Georgia with temperatures at 100 or higher, 11 stations in Texas showing temperatures from 100 to 108 degrees and cause of buying some of which was short covering by those who had sold early on bulls and also among buyers and there was little cotton for sale. It believed if such temperatures continue over Sunday, that we will have a further advance, as it believed there is a very large short lines on the market that would cover on such reports. There are several wires in circulation from Texas to the effect that there is considerable deterioration in many parts of the state. Southward tonight is more bullish.—Anderson.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF NEW ORLEANS COTTON MARKET

Prices Were Held Up by the Hot, Dry Weather Over Belt. Closed 13 to 14 Pts. Up

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, July 19.—The price of cotton this week was held up by the hot, dry weather prevailing over the belt. Speculation for a rise, however, was discouraged by the efforts to press the amendment to the tariff bill, putting a tax on future trading in cotton. The net results of the week's business in contracts were an advance of 13 to 14 points. The high prices were made on Saturday and the low prices on Monday and Tuesday. At the highest the trading months were 19 to 21 points over last week's close; at the lowest they were 3 to 4 points under. The range was 21 to 22 points.

During most of the week abnormally dry weather prevailed over the cotton region. Temperatures were practically high and the result was that plants did not make satisfactory growth although some very small plants are being reported with blooms to the very top. This led to reports of forced maturity and to fear of premature opening of bolls. Without question such reports affected trading it is probable that a part of advance in prices would have taken place. Trading was chiefly confined to the new crops months and it was almost entirely a weather market.

The statistics of the week were interesting. There was an increase interest in the old crop months. Still the total for the week were put by Hester at 193,000 bales against 163,000 this week last year and 132,000 in this week ten years ago. This was taken by the bulls as full proof of their contention that mills are doing a large business.

In the spot department prices were unchanged the week through, middling closing at 12 7-16 against 12 7-16 last week and 11 7-8 this week last year. Sales on the spot amounted to 500 bales against 680 last week and 639 this week last year. Sales to arrive amounted to 152 bales against 1,296 last week and 1,168 this week last year.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, July 19.—Cotton futures opened steady, two points down to four points up, congaring with the last prices yesterday. Cables were much lower than due but were offset by the continued dry weather over the cotton region and the promise of fair weather for tomorrow. Reports from Texas were that cotton was opening fast in the south and that premature opening of bolls was feared and would be inevitable with a few days more of drouth and high temperature. Rain finally was mainly in the new crops, although one sate of July was made at an advance of four points over yesterday's closing quotations. The new crop months were up and down around the unch and then fell off to a net decline of one to three points. At the end of the first half hour of business prices were 2 points to 3 points up net.

The detailed weather reports stimulated a wave of buying around the middle of the morning and prices of the new crop months went to new high levels for the year. Texas, Augusta and Oklahoma districts reported average temperatures of 100 degrees or higher, and four other districts reported 100 or over, while the average maximum temperature for the entire belt was 99 degrees. The new crop went to a level of 5 to 6 points over yesterday's last quotations, but profit-taking checked the upward movement.

HAYWARD & CLARK COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, July 19.—This morning's map shows generally fair belt, except cloudy central gulf states. Light local rains. Temperatures were normal in the western states but excessive in central and eastern states. Indications are for cool wave coming on Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and north Louisiana, and cooler tonight over west Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and north Louisiana. Cooler weather will also have reached the Atlantic by Monday.

Liverpool came in futures three points lower than our close, sales of spot 8,000, of which 3,000 done yesterday after hours.

Market prospects for next week depends largely on weather developments. Unless rains come over the belt at an early date, weather will be the force of crop damage and a lower August contract would likely carry the whole market higher.

Liverpool is due to come six points higher Monday on new crops.

The late decline here was based on the belief that the acreage will be largely forced, that damage to the crop is more imaginary than real and because the technical situation is not strong.

New bales are expected to increase rapidly next week.

SAVANNAH GETS COOLER; OTHER GEORGIA REPORTS

(By Associated Press.)

SAVANNAH, Ga., July 19.—Savannah was cooler today than any of its heighbors, but even at that the highest temperature recorded at the weather bureau during the day being 95 degrees at 1 o'clock. The humidity was not great and the day was uncomfortable. Tonight there is a cool breezes that blew shoreward from the Atlantic throughout the day.

Albany reports a temperature today of 103 degrees, relieved late this afternoon by a thunderstorm. At Thomasville the high mark for the day was 98 degrees and at Columbus 100. The records were broken when the mercury climbed to 103 degrees. Rains afforded relief at Americus today, where the temperature for three days reached 107.

SURPLUS RESERVE ITEM SHOWS GOOD INCREASE

The Decrease of $3,423,000 In Loans Not Surprising Owing to Dull Stock Market

NEW YORK, July 19.—The Financier says this week:

The statement of the clearing house banks of the city of New York for the week ending July 19, was considering the expectations of the past six days, favorable on the character. A gain in cash had been anticipated, but any increase in this item arising from operations with interior banks was offset by the export of gold to France. The net result was that the banks lost $646,000 in specie and legals.

A decrease of $3,423,000 in loans was not surprising, owing to stagnant stock market conditions and the repayment of maturing bills obligations. The result was marked also by the offering of some foreign credits in the shape of finance bills in this market, and to a certain extent this effected the statement total.

Net deposits decreased by reason of loan and cash shrinkage 7,752,000, and the net cash reserve liability, with no net change for the week was noted in an increase of $857,400 in surplus, the present excess above the 25 per cent. required minimum standing at $20,572,200.

AUSTIN & RAIT COTTON LETTER.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Cotton—The cotton market shows signs of life now with some possibility of being loosened from the dull routine. The Balkan war and its consequent European complications, tariff reform and railway strike at home and the threatened adverse legislation in the form of the Clarke amendment to the tariff bill. Unless new (and in that event larger and serious) complications arises in Europe, it would seem that the warring Balkan nations have starved themselves into submission with lack of money a sore necessity.

The tariff project will set so much business in motion that the deterring effects on the few it will hurt may possibly be offset by the gain to the whole. The proposed injurious tax on future sales of cotton is shown to be unconstitutional in the opinion of the speech made in the senate by the present Chief Justice White, when in 1892 he represented Louisiana in the upper house. Should the lamp inventor live now it is reasonable to suppose. The most serious question that has developed, however, is the matter of financing, and the lack of financing power in this $1,000,000,000 and by-product crop of ours, if its marketable feature is withdrawn by the extinction of the merchandise bill. Upon this point we realize that over nine-tenths of the enormous business of our world is carried on upon credit, mind, not money, either here or in Europe, what would be their hope? In the first place, bankers wouldn't loan them if they could or raise a cent if they didn't know at each minute what the market for it was and what it is the banker's viewpoint that will undoubtedly cast the deciding vote against it. Fully it would be a bad pass the bill then repeal it after the damage is done. But let each man raise his voice in protest to his Washington senator and representative that there may be no misunderstanding of its not being wanted.

The market has fluctuated narrowly for one or all of the above reasons for some time, but now the weather and development will play the important part that generally is reported from the eastern belt. continue much mixed in character, but a general tendency is noted to report the extremely irregular condition of the crop, from spots ranging all the way from rank to perfect. The extremely high temperatures of the southwest show no abatement, and, while they are tending to decrease talk of boll weevil damage, the precipitation is needed there soon. This crop has been unusual in its opening without any "scares" whatsoever, and it would seem unnatural and impossible very much longer to escape such *a*ppreh*e*nsion. The pessimism prevailing in all market circles has been voiced quite generally in indiscriminate selling and weakness. Values are full, share. With the local contract soon down to almost nothing, it is but natural to suppose that the shorts do? What they will probably do is postpone from day to day their necessary covering and all try to cover at once and cause a tremendous upheaval in all months up to and including the October option. Were it not for this condition the market would undoubtedly have sold much lower with the receipt of favorable crop reports, and it may yet, but on reason we advise selling December and July around present values, but on these many and frequent reactions we advise buying October for rallies and quick turns, the possibility of an extreme move with unfavorable weather. We believe these trading opportunities are being neglected and consider the present a favorable time to buy at times in the past, when interest was greater.

Cottonseed oil—While price changes are rapid, there is no change in the market situation, except possibly that the evident scarcity of oil is more pronounced. Near month options advance by leaps and bounds without attracting any oil, and the general conclusion is that it is not to be had at any price. It seems that the leading refiners have been using a new process for hardening oil by which they are using a much greater proportion of cotton-seed oil than formerly, even with lard steady to rising, they continue their search for cotton-seed oil. There has been altogether too much selling of September and October by reason of their low price on the erroneous belief that they were crop months, but with the possibility of going into the new crop without any supplies, the position of such sellers is dangerous in the extreme. Very strong trade interests continue enormous buyers without apparent desire for concessions, and this market is in position to advance rapidly from now on, especially on options up to and including October. We believe this market offers greater opportunities right now than any other and we remain steadfast in our well-known position of advising purchases of August, later months on a scale up for deferred September and October, and the sale of profits.

COTTON GOSSIP

Times-Democrat says:

One lone report of hot winds, not in Texas, but Oklahoma, was sufficient to set the talent by the ears. The ragged awakened from their Rip Van Winkle sleep of the past several weeks; shorts stood not upon the order of covering, but covered at once. Buying orders poured into the ring from all points of the compass, and brokers, in the pleasurable excitement of executing real business, forgot their worries over the Clarke bill, and the bull feeling fairly hummed with activity. Recently fluctuations in the market have ranged between 11.40 and 11.60 for October. Ring traders had noticed this tendency on the part of the market to halt at 11.60 and were becoming a matter of habit with them to buy around 11.40 for October and to sell around 11.60.

The rule failed to work in yesterday's market, because, with all the selling indulged in early in the day, the point proved to be a bearish crop report by a prominent authority, prices went out of sight, and there was no chance for a rebound did not stop at 11.60 for October, but sailed above that mark, bringing out stop loss orders and "hooking" a few of the ring crowd.

Reliable Texas advices promise abundant early cotton in four weeks, therefore bull interests are concentrating their efforts to advance market by the late crop months, and the supply of new cotton checks or destroys their control. Weather in the belt is most favorable. The idea of damaging drought is manufactured in New York.—Keller.

Map shows cloudy weather, lower central belt, Tennessee and Florida. No rain. Temperatures normal in northwest districts in central and eastern belt. Normal temperatures in Texas and Oklahoma. Indications are for cooler weather in the northwest portion, which probably some showers in Oklahoma and west Texas. Cooler tonight in belt, but continued fair and warm in the Atlantics.

Forecast—Louisiana: Tonight and Sunday generally fair; light northerly winds in the coast.

Arkansas: Tonight and Sunday unsettled; showers in north portion tonight or Sunday; cooler tonight in north portion.

West Texas: Tonight and Sunday generally fair.

Georgia, North Carolina and South Carolina: Generally fair tonight and showers Sunday.

Kentucky: Showers tonight, Sunday fair, cooler.

Tennessee: Local showers tonight or Sunday.

Mississippi: Generally fair tonight and Sunday, except local showers tonight or Sunday, extreme north portion.

Trading very light, market steady; seems to be some gambling on the part of the bears that temperatures in the northwest are encouraging the bears to new extremes.

High temperatures over belt was principal factor in buying this morning, but winds causing uneasiness of bears, looks higher.—Andy.

Friday's official report: High temperature averages: Augusta district 104; Savannah district 102; Texas and Montgomery districts 100; Little Rock district 100; Oklahoma district 104. Such temperatures are injurious, but fortunately the rainfall was distinctly favorable weather coming over Sunday.—Keller.

New Orleans—The market here dropped after close of New York on selling on belief advance in New York is forced. Damage to crop more than counterbalances bull influences. Good prospects for cooler weather over Sunday. —Kofler.

The market started higher on over-night buying orders, but met profit-taking selling by local traders; then rallied again sharply on covering when the Georgia detailed was posted showing from 100 degrees at 22 points, Gwathmey & Co., Cone, Craig, Weld, Springs and Hicks were the leading buyers. Baruch sold 5,000 January and 2,000 May, swap on the bull, for want of buyers and a rumor of rain in Texas. The market was forced to cover on Sunday temperatures and as it is still a very narrow and professional affair, it will be easily influenced either way for 10 to 15 points.

GRAIN GOSSIP

Chicago Board of Ocean says:

Wheat is looked upon as a merchandising proposition. Traders expect to see any good advance met with free selling by the country, while declines are likely to bring export business. There is so little pressure to realize that ultimately from present basis. Corn is a purchase on all breaks. The big traders are up to each day, as the market's action is too uncertain. The local trade is a small one. Oats are firm at the start yesterday and a good many of them were bearish and sold short on the bulge.

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. say: Wheat—Market shows a weaker tone with decidedly lighter country offerings and we feel that until all possible danger from real damage in the northwest is past, prices are not on safe ruling basis.

Corn—Market is a weather proposition and while there is a whole season ahead of wet setting, down and lower temperatures, short sales are likely to make more or less trouble.

Oats—Reports of poor yields are causing some new buying of an investment nature and also new buying on account of short sellers.

Provisions—Market still acts strong.

Snow writes from Kansas City: Across Missouri, in counties lying along the river, corn prospects are not up to the rule where replant badly checked by June frosts and it appears permanently injured. Wheat in Kansas has done no appreciable damage yet, but corn is curling. In the western half of the state conditions are bad. Throughout the state wheat has helped the crop by forcing growth. It is now ripening and will be cut before holding its own since July 1. Wheat yields are heavy. Oats also are heavy. Much of the field will either mowed or abandoned.

Clemens & Co. say: "Our reports this morning on corn from the southwest, practically complete in every part of the section. We estimate an average of 25 bushels per acre in Oklahoma 30 and Texas 70.

Other advices from Nebraska, Missouris and Arkansas and generally through the south. Since the first of the month, our reports show improvement in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota and South Dakota. We estimate a gain during the first of the month of 4 points, equal to a reduction of 30,000,000 bushels, or a gain of 1 per cent on the government basis of 2,812,000 bushels."

BRADSTREET'S REVIEW.

Bradstreet's says of trade:

Trade is quiet as a whole, a condition usual at this season, but despite tariff uncertainty, the volume of business is large, and the rates of money, the needs of nearly 100,000,000 from day to day, with necessary provision for short distances ahead, make for a very volume in the aggregate. Crop reports are to activity come from agricultural sections, while industrial centers, and particularly the east, return relatively the slowest advices.

Labor, aside from a few mines, is well employed, and summer shutdowns in heavy industries are no larger than usual. Crop prospects in the northwest, the central northwest and southwest, are such as to stimulate fall trade preparations. Buying in these sections is cheaper and probably better than a year ago.

Textiles are still the center of the tariff storm, but even here there is a lack of uniformity in trade reports, cotton and silk showing better than wool fabrics and also the latter showing differences as between various classes of that trade.

Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending July 17 aggregate 5,389,408 bushels, against 5,176,612 bushels last week and 1,984,-000 bushels this week a year ago. For the two weeks ending July 17 exports were 8,776,028 bushels, against 4,479,000 bushels in the corresponding period last year. Corn exports for the week were 225,612 bushels, against 31,993 bushels last week and 44,594 bushels in 1912. For the two weeks ending July 17 corn exports were 227,605 bushels, against 170,773 bushels last year.

Business failures for the week ending July 17 were 238, against 207 last week and 183 in the week of 1912.

Favorable Weather Northwest Caused the Decline in Wheat

Some Heavy Selling Was Done on the Idea That the Threatened Harm From Rust Would Be Eluded in Good Time.

CHICAGO, July 19.—Hope that the new spring crop would escape serious damage from rust, took increasing attention today, and lowered the price of wheat. The market closed steady, at 1-8 to 1-4c under last night. Corn finished 1-8 to 1-8 @ 1-4c higher, oats up 1-8 to 1-4c, and provisions varied from 10@ 15c to a decline of 12 1-2c.

Favorable weather northwest disposed the wheat pit to accept a cheerful view of field conditions. The fact that cables were firmer seemed to count for little against statements that velvet chaff was already being cut in South Dakota, and that the North Dakota harvest would be in progress by August 1. In this connection, some heavy selling was done on the idea that the threatened harm from rust would be eluded in good time. Commission houses were moderate buyers on the decline and helped the market to react from the top of the day. Lack of strength of coarse grain also was a factor in checking the wheat bears toward the close.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,518,000 bushels, a year ago 1,119,000 bushels. Seaboard clearances of wheat and flour equalled 223,000 bushels.

Although rain and cooler weather west and southwest eased corn a first, higher prices ruled in the end. It was held that the moisture was not sufficiently general, and there was but little change in the bullish character of dispatches from the districts where damage was alleged.

In oats a special feature was the active buying of December for outside account. The crop in Missouri was said to be almost a failure.

Realizing sales by longs formed the rule in most of the provision options. The main reason was the prospect of a more liberal supply of hogs next week.

COMMERCIAL PAPER WILL BE IN MORE DEMAND SOON

The South Will Have More Money to Lend Between Seasons, Account of Big Crops

Wall Street Journal says: Commercial paper will probably be in more or less general demand by the first of September if developents already under way and indicated in the movement of the crops to market continue to work themselves out. Since the beginning of the current crop year in winter wheat territory farmers have sold probably 15,000,000 bushels of wheat to primary markets and local millies. The absorption of the new crop and of old wheat is prompt and rapid. Stocks are not allowed to accumulate as usual either at Chicago or elsewhere. Both the interior and the foreign markets are taking arrivals at such a rate that warehouses are little more than clearing-points for the shipment of receipts.

Producers are getting about 80c. a bushel in the northwestern states, and some of them a good deal better, while big towns of Texas are paying locally 86c. a bushel for cash wheat, while July at Chicago sells from 87c. to 88c. compared with $1.05 a year ago. Oats will probably move early this year at about 16c. a bushel. The absorbing capacity of the demand side of the market for both feedstuffs and foodstuffs should bring to the country more cash than is needed for immediate debts, and thus swell bank deposits.

Banks in both the winter wheat and cotton territories have learned to appreciate the value of commercial paper as a means of making their funds productive. Formerly much of these surplus funds flowed into grain and security centers, and were utilized in various capacities at lower rates of interest by the correspondent central banks. A Texas banker recently said that he looked for paper which will take up our surplus for not more than four months, from October 1 to October 1. That will carry us to the harvest of 1914, and even when we shall need our resources for laying in spring supplies, purchasing implements and starting the machinery for making another crop of cotton and corn. If our people sell their cotton early, as now seems probable, the demand for commercial paper will be all the earlier."

Such states as Texas and Louisiana will have a surplus to be more money to lend between seasons, because of their big corn and fodder crops. Texas alone is credited with growing 225,000,000 bushels of corn, and Louisiana something like 25,000,000 bushels. The oats and alfalfa crops will be excellent. Louisiana's crop of corn is as promising as ever, and the state will have a good deal to export. Georgia is making a record in this respect this year, to save purchasing corn and meat from the middle and far west. Diversification will help to make the cotton income more fully available for loans on paper and investment.

AUSTIN AND BAIT GRAIN LETTER.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Wheat: This market hangs between offerings from the new harvest and the export demand, with the former overbearing on sharp setbacks and exporters taking all possible, but bidding just below the market. Harvesting is progressing favorably with every indication of heavy offerings on all advances, but the spring wheat territory is likely to furnish reason for anxiety from time to time. Black rust reports appear to be well rounded if not a general situation, and while many are buying this market on theory that the price is cheap we would advise profit taking on fair advances until the European crop situation is such as to bring them into this market without waiting for concessions. At this price we don't care to become bulls however, believing that conservative purchases on the soft spots will show quick and good profits.

Corn and oats: Extremely high temperatures continue over all of the important corn producing states and while it is all right to say that's what corn needs, yet the lack of moisture is becoming menacing. Farm feeding as we have often stated gives corn a value that it hasn't always had when hogs were lower and we believe this great cereal will hold the floors of speculative activities again this season. We have advised to take a conservatively bullish position on all setbacks. Oats have become damaged to such an extent that they are attracting notice. Their setback cannot longer be ignored, neither can it be repaired and it would seem that a crop one-third less than last year is about the best we can expect. Supplies from the vast mammoth crop are a depressing influence at times, but speculation will soon break away from this and follow in anticipating the next crop, which must be bullish.

Provisions: Hogs continue in light supply and advances are regular up to a certain point where contracts are put upon the market by packers as price is too high to invite stocking up with product and it certainly prevents speculation. Next year we may expect low of prices to invite much speculation on the theory of price being cheap, but then it may not prove so profitable, especially if supplies increase. We would buy here for fair advances.—M. F. Austin.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF THE NAVAL STORES MARKET

SAVANNAH, Ga., July 19.—The most interesting event that has happened in the naval stores world this week has been the organization of a giant export company by the factors of Savannah, Jacksonville and Pensacola. The concern will start off with a million dollars capital and it is proposed to will to hold stock of spirits and rosins to prevent the reluction of prices through manipulation of the market. Another development of the week has been the coming to Savannah of a representative of the department of justice to find if there was any violations of anti-trust laws on the part of the big naval stores concerns. He is understood to have decided that there was none. The incorporation of the big concern, however, has not created any great increase in prices and the market has been wanting its way along the well beaten paths of other days. The receipts of both spirits and rosins are behind those of last year, but the prices of both probably are below those of a year ago. The following figures give the statistical situation up to date:

Atlanta and vicinity: Thunder showers tonight or Sunday.

Georgia: Generally fair tonight and Sunday.

Alabama: Generall fair tonight and Sunday, except local showers tonight or Sunday in extreme north portion.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

The minimum temperature at Atlanta last night was only 75, a very high night temperature. At 7 a. m. the temperature was 80 degrees or above over the east gulf and south Atlantic states. The highest temperatures on Friday were atlanta 97 degrees, 96 to 100 degrees, Montgomery and Knoxville 100 degrees, Macon 104, Nashville 104 degrees.

Slight disturbances exist this morning in the New England states and in the extreme southwest. A few stations in the west reported local showers and there were showers at several points in Texas.

An area of high barric pressure has appeared in the northwest, with a considerable moderation in temperature over the Rocky Mountain and plateau regions. The change to somewhat cooler weather will probably advance over the country, giving within a day or two some relief from the prevailing heat. Temperatures over most of the plateau region were under 60 degrees this morning.

Conditions are favorable for thunder showers tonight or Sunday, to be followed by more moderate temperatures.

FUTURE TRADING SHIFTS RISK TO THE SPECULATOR

The Dealer and Spinner Can Eliminate Speculative Risk, This Benefits the Grower

Wall Street Journal says:

It has been shown that by future trading in cotton, if it is properly conducted, means are provided whereby the dealer and the spinner can eliminate, to a considerable extent, the element of speculative risk from their transactions, and that this in turn benefits the grower.

Somebody takes that risk. That somebody is the speculator; that is what the speculator is for. If he did not do this, he would have no right economically, to exist, and from a social standpoint, he would have no right to conduct business on a public exchange.

H. C. Emery, in his work on "Speculation on the Stock and Produce Exchanges of the United States," defines the function of speculation as follows:

"To relieve trade of the risks of fluctuating values by providing a class always ready to take or deliver a property at the market price, and in so doing to direct commodities to their most advantageous uses and the investment of capital into the most profitable channels; to equalize commodities and securities comparative prices for delivery at different times and places.

"Every man in the merchant, from a thorough knowledge of his own business was well prepared to assume its speculative risks. "What was now needed by the trader was the existence of a body of men prepared to relieve him of the speculative element of his business; that is of the risks of distant and future changes, just as he had relieved the producer of his distinctly trading risks. And as the need grew, the speculative class became differentiated from the trading body as the latter had been differentiated from the producing body. * * * Unless formerly each man bore his own risks, there was no call for all traders speculating a little, a special class speculates much."

To a certain extent it may be said that risks offset one another. For instance if one merchant had purchased 1,000 bales of cotton against which he wished to sell a hedge, and if there was another merchant had sold 1,000 bales of cotton ahead, to a spinner, against which he wished to buy a hedge at 12 cents, and the two transactions could be set one against the other by the intervention of the speculator would be unnecessary for this particular transaction. But while this might be true in individual cases once more or less constantly, they are not of themselves sufficient to make a broad market. Instead, the basis for the great bulk of the transactions in the future is in the operations of cotton speculators.

How does the speculator take these risks? He goes into the market and if he desires to sell a contract as hedge, other persons are bidding for future contracts on the exchange as a speculation, the merchant taking his hedge as well as though some other merchant were trying to buy a contract as a hedge. He sells to the one and buys from the other party to the exchange operation is a merchant or a speculator. What he wants is some responsible party to take the other side of his hedge operation. And in the great majority of instances that other party is the speculator.

By making the hedge sale (or purchase as the case may be), the merchant limits the speculative element in his transaction in cotton. But the speculator, as such, has no cotton. Therefore, he assumes the risk that the merchant would otherwise have to bear. That is to say, the merchant transfers the risk in part at least, to the speculator.

It should be repeated that not all of the speculative risk can thus be transferred, but to the extent that it can be transferred to the advantage of the mercantile class, the speculator must stand ready to bear it. And so far as the handling of cotton on the basis ready is concerned, the merchant should be able to escape risk almost completely. That is, as already indicated for the merchant in the ordinary course the future market is not a place for speculation, but a place where he can take advantage of the speculative element in order to relieve the speculative risk in his own business.

If some such service were not rendered there would be no justification whatever for permitting organized future trading in cotton. Without this or some other valuable service to the community future trading in cotton would be open to all the objections of a gaming or bucket shop, or Monte Carlo. Indeed it might be more objectionable since betting on horse races does not affect the price of the necessities of life. But the speculation in cotton unquestionably does influence more or less the price of that commodity.

But while the speculator must stand ready to relieve the merchant of certain risks the speculator has his risks and must look out not to be led into needless risk. He has been forced to take needless risk in the past because of defects in the methods of conducting future trading. This matter will be taken up later.

Another function performed by the speculator, and one of great value is that speculative operations make a broad exchange market. What a broad market means every business man or buyer one who has bought or sold securities or commodities, understands. In a very narrow market sales and purchases are widely between two successive transactions, but in a broad active market the price fluctuations are usually small. This is illustrated time and again on the New York stock exchange. Jersey Central or Lackawanna, which have a limited market may fluctuate 10 20 or even 50 points between two successive sales whereas an active stock like Union Pacific is affected by sales of seldom fluctuates more than a fraction at a time. As will be shown later, however, in the cotton market, even large fluctuations often evident. This has been the source of much complaint against cotton exchanges.

WEEKLY STOCK REVIEW.

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, July 19.—A definite change in the aspect of the stock market occurred this week, following a period of almost unparalleled dullness. The market developed a growing tendency, leading to a spirited upward movement late in the week. The volume of business was not large, represented a decided change in the previous period of stagnation. The improvement in feeling was based on easier monetary conditions and hopes of a ready end to the Balkan war, was perhaps the most direct influence on this market. European bought stocks here and offered short-term money. Offerings of securities here also had an unsettling effect on the home market during the last few days and a corresponding stimulating influence was hoped for with a change for the better abroad.

Trading was largely in the hands of the professional element, the large short interest facilitating the advance. The questions in which Wall street is greatly interested, such as the currency legislation, presented no new phases, and there were few developments of importance bearing upon market values.

Money rates advanced to the highest point of the year, the movement being largely toward the close of the week, causing a slightly easier tone.

CANAL AT COLUMBUS NEARING COMPLETION

Will Give Several Georgia Cities All-Water Route to Panama Canal

COLUMBUS, Ga., July 19.—The government canal, costing a half million dollars, which is to connect the Chattahoochee and lower rivers with St. Andrews bay is to be completed in less than twelve months from date, according to Captain J. W. Singleton, the special government engineer in charge of the work, who states that there is only ten miles more of the canal to cut.

The canal when completed will be about thirty miles in length, all of which the engineers have been forced to cut, and in some sections work has been quite slow owing to the mat of cypress roots and other obstructions. It had been expected that the canal would be completed and ready for use early in the coming year, but the delay is due to the above causes.

The completion of this canal means much for the shippers of Columbus and all of this section of Georgia and Alabama as it will open up an all-water route to the gulf ports, Panama and Oriental ports. Widespread interests centers in the progress of the work and its completion will be anxiously awaited by the business men of the Columbus district.

At the monthly session of the board of trade last evening, the proposed celebration to mark the formal opening of the canal was discussed, and it was agreed that plans for the big event shall proceed at once, but no date for the celebration was determined upon. It is proposed to have a big celebration in Columbus and similar events in all the cities along the banks of the Chattahoochee and lower rivers to the gulf, as has been stated

ABOLISH LATIN AND GREEK, ADVOCATES MISS PARRISH

She and Whitfield County School Principal Have Lively Argument

DALTON, Ga., July 19.—When Miss C. S. Parrish, state school supervisor in charge of the teachers' institute here, repeated a former statement of hers that the high schools and colleges would do well to cut out Greek and Latin and substitute practical subjects instead she brought on a debate between the school teacher, who is a principal of the Columbia high school.

Prof. Copeland warmly championed the dead languages as mind-builders, and insisted that they also made a person brave to fight the battles of life.

Miss Parrish then drew a comparison between the school teacher, who is a college graduate, and the one who had used his time in studying "more practical matters" than Latin and Greek. She stated that in visiting a school taught by a graduate of a certain well-known Georgia college she had found the room untidily kept. Prof. Copeland himself a graduate of the same college, insisted that such a condition was an exception; but Miss Parrish held that in her observation such had been the rule rather than the exception.

"But," she said "we'll give you a chance to redeem your college by acting as chairman of the committee to beautify this room for Friday's exercises."

Yesterday the day appointed for Prof. Copeland to disprove Miss Parrish's statement, he failed to attend the institute and Miss Parrish thereby won "by default," the argument.

WHOLE BULGAR BRIGADE LAY DOWN THEIR ARMS

BUCHAREST, Bugaria, July 19.—An entire Bulgarian brigade of the Ninth division with its commanding general and 12 field guns surrended to a Rumanian flying column yesterday at Fedinandove, between Lom Palanka and Sofia.

The captured brigade was acting as a rear guard and assisting in the retirement of Major General Kutintcheff's division. It was overtaken by the Rumanian cavalry and artillery and surrendered after a brief fight.

MR. BRYAN PREPARES FOR HIS VACATION LECTURES

Florida State University

In the Land of Flowers quite a radical action in the field of higher education was taken by the legislature of 1905, when all the higher institutions, seven in number, were abolished and two institutions established in their stead. These two were the State university for men, at Gainesville, Fla., and the state college, for women, at Tallahassee.

The recent catalogue of this Florida institution shows that sixty-one professors, officers and assistants are employed; and, from the academic degrees and the institutions from which these degrees were received one would judge that the university has set a high standard for its teachers and officers.

The present arrangement of the University of Florida includes five colleges, a graduate school, the agricultural experiment station and the extension division.

There are numerous literary and scientific societies and Greek letter fraternities represented among the students, besides there is a vigorous and influential Y. M. C. A. organization.

Lately the University of Florida has taken a prominent part in southern intercollegiate athletics. The university is a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic association. Next year it has games scheduled with Tulane, Auburn, Georgia Tech, Mercer, University of South Carolina and others.

Young Explorer on Hudson Bay Trip

Christian Leden, a Norwegian explorer, thirty years of age, has reached America on his way toward an expedition to the large unexplored territory west of Hudson Bay for the Royal Museum of Berlin and the University of Norway.

Leden is thirty years old. The principal object of his expedition will be to study Eskimo life in Boothia Peninsula. Leden also will collect amulets, weapons, metals and clothes. A moving picture outfit and apparatus for making phonographic records are part of his equipment.

The expedition is being financed chiefly by the Royal Museum of Berlin. The explorer will live in the Waldorf-Astoria a few days then will go to Montreal. He will start for Winnipeg in July.

Leden said the University of Norway and the Royal Museum of Berlin are eager to get good pictures of native dances, which he has seen, and asserts are highly interesting. One of their dances, Leden said, is not unlike the turkey trot in movement.

Leden expects to return in the autumn of 1914.

Opera Singer Who Delighted Atlanta Pleases Big London Audience

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

LONDON, July 19.—Miss Alma Gluck, the Russian-American singer whom it was one's pleasure to praise warmly on her first London appearance the other day, completely captivated her audience at Queen's hall, when the conditions were more favorable for the appreciation of her art. Among the hosts of new singers, who habitually come forward half-educated or less, here is one who, with exquisite natural gifts, has truly regarded singing as an art.

She has not stopped short at the expressionless production of merely pure tone. She has feeling, emotions to convey; she has learned to convey them with infallible justness and charm. She is a consummate artist, and not only in regard to vocal shades of expression but in all her bearing and gesture an artist to the least inflexion of the eyebrows and to the ends of her fingers. She is a Pavlova of song.

It would be too long to tell all the captivating things of the afternoon. Accompanied by Mr. Efrim Zimbalist, Miss Gluck sang in five languages. One could not be flesh and blood and not have been entranced by Franck's "Wooing of the Rose;" Paladilhe's beautiful "Psyche" was perfectly expressed; in Weingartner's "Love's Festival" there was admirable suggestion of wonder at the lark's rising song. Only her choice of songs with English words was unworthy. Miss Gluck can give a momentary interest to almost anything, but one hopes not to hear again from her the cheap sentimentality of MacDowell's "Long Ago" or the triviality of Spross' "Will o' the Wisp."

LOST MONEY RESTORED BY GIRL WHO FOUND IT

While he was riding a motorcycle along Greenaferry avenue the other afternoon, Waren B. Flaherty, of 213 South Forsyth street, dropped a purse containing $20 dollars in bills. Flaherty says that he had abandoned all hope of getting the money back until he was phoned by Mrs. J. L. Mitchell, who lives at the corner of Greenaferry and Wellington street, and told that her little girl had found the purse.

ALL PARIS ASTIR OVER "MORAL" SIDE OF TANGO

One Young Woman Praises It for Supplying "Jeunes Filles" With Husbands

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

PARIS, July 19.—We are getting quite as moral as you are. As an offset to your "Feeress" letter calling in question the morality and decencies of London ball rooms we have our "Tango" question. Two papers are coincidentally —each, of course, claims priority in the idea—canvassing the opinions of all that is wealthy or witty or wise, and a good deal that is merely notorious in Paris anent the Tango. In the multitude of counsellors there is confusion. Some call it bad and others call it boring.

"I don't mind dancing it myself," writes one gentleman, "but I shouldn't like my wife to dance it," which is at once very frank and very unfair.

Mr. Abel Hermant, whose books and plays show him by no means a prude, finds it "simply disgusting." Signor d'Annunzio, who never wastes any time in answering questions that do not deal with that supremely interesting subject, himself, writes, "I dance the Tango beautifully."

Mlle. Mistinguette, the charming music hall artiste, considers the Tango admirably suited for drawing rooms, as it supplies the "jeunes filles" with husbands. She does not tell us how or why.

By the way, no one seems to know where the Tango comes from. The generally accepted idea is that it was imported from the Argentine, but not long ago a gentleman from that romantic land of milk and honey, or rather of corn and beef contracts, when asked to a Tango tea, excused himself on the grounds that as he had only been a few days in Paris, he had not yet learned the dance.

EMBEZZLEMENT CHARGED TO ALA. TAX COLLECTOR

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 19.—W. S. Oliver, of Evergreen tax collector of Conecuh county for almost a half decade, was arrested this afternoon at Evergreen on two charges of embezzlement. One accoun' alleges that Oliver embezzled or converted to his own use more than $4,000 belonging to the state, and another that he embezzled more than $5,000 which should have gone into the treasury of Conecuh county.

The warrant for Oliver's arrest was sworn out by M. R. Salter treasurer of Conecuh county at instruction from C. R. Bricken, circuit solicitor, who acted under orders from Governor O'Neal.

NEWS OF THE MOVIES

THE ADVANCEMENT OF MOVING PICTURES

When it was suggested a few years ago that America's greatest actors would be seen in motion pictures the idea was ridiculed by the people and the big producers. The big star actors looked upon the moving pictures with scorn and declared that they would never consent to act for the movies. But times have changed, as James K. Hackett, perhaps the most popular actor in America in the last decade, has recently consented, at the earnest solicitations of Daniel Frohman, to star in the silent drama.

Hackett was the idol of every matinee girl in the role of Rupert in "The Prisoner of eZnda." In this role and play he is filmed. He considers this play his masterpiece and wishes to be remembered by the coming generations as Rudolph Rassendyle, like Joseph Jefferson is remembered as Rip Van Winkle.

It is understood that Mr. Frohman has negotiated with the Alcazar thea ter to exhibit this masterpiece in Atlanta.

Auremia, who has mystified thousands at the Montgomery the past past week with singing and a display of the most gorgeous Parisian gowns ever worn on any moving picture stage, is to be retained for another week. Who Auremia is, is uppermost in everyone's mind. Some think Auremia a boy soprano masterading in women's clothes; others differ—you'll have to decide for yourself. The best of film pictures will be shown all week, as usual.

The Vaudette opens the week with three interesting pictures a "Thanhouser," a Keystone comedy, always funny, and a Reliance. During the past week Margaret Snow, an Atlanta girl, was featured in the leading role of a Thanhouser photo play at this theater and will probably be seen in photo plays from now on.

For real melody, "That Texas Quartette," at the Alcazar, is unequaled, and anyone who has not heard them should make the effort.

A new moving picture theater, to be called the Lynch theater, is to be opened shortly on Whitehall street, featuring good music and first-release pictures exclusively.

The Savoy, as usual, will show the best in the film world.

The National Egg Laying Contest for June

PENS nearly all filled for the next Contest to begin December first. America, Canada, England and Australia to be represented. American hen holds the highest individual record to date, but an English pen still leads by 259 eggs.

At least three American hens and three British hens are in a close race to be the first to reach the 200-egg mark in the first eight months of the National Egg Laying contest at Mountain Grove, Mo. An American hen only has ten eggs to lay in fifteen days to make a record of 200 eggs in eight months. All these hens have made a better record so far than Lady Showyou had made at this time last year. The leading pen record thus far this year is about 200 eggs ahead of the leading pen record at this time last year. The English pen of S. C. White Leghorns is 259 eggs in the lead of its nearest competitor. Two of the hens in this pen did not lay an egg in June, and if this continues, some of the other pens may yet easily overtake them.

June was a scorcher in Missouri. Several deaths were reported in different sections of the state as a result of the heat. It was of course, also hard on the hens. We had 133 broody contest hens in broody coops at one time this month. Thirty-eight were put up one day and twenty-five another, and such a large per cent being broody at once cut down our egg yield for June. Other contests which had nearly fifty per cent of their pens composed of Leghorns, had less broody hens of course and made a little higher average for June than we did. Our total yield for June was 10,411 eggs, and the grand total to date is 70,386 eggs. The Leghorns in the North American contest at Storrs, Conn., had made about the same average up to June first, as had the Leghorns in the Missouri contest. The larger breeds in Missouri had made a little higher average than the same breeds in Connecticut as a rule. At the present time, the records are very nearly the same on the average.

The twelve highest pen records to July 1st, being the record of ten hens or pullets for the previous seven months and a half, are as follows:

Pen No. 2, S. C. White Leghorns, England	1,525 eggs
Pen No. 1, Buff Wyandottes, Iowa	1,270 eggs
Pen No. 57, Black Langshan, Missouri	1,248 eggs
Pen No. 20, White Wyandottes, Arkansas	1,222 eggs
Pen No. 26, Buff Wyandottes, Vermont	1,212 eggs
Pen No. 33, Barred Rocks, Illinois	1,192 eggs
Pen No. 11, Black Minorcas, Iowa	1,190 eggs
Pen No. 26, Buff Wyandotte, Missouri	1,192 eggs
Pen No. 8, S. S. White Leghorns, California	1,185 eggs
Pen No 23, Silver Wyandotte, Illinois	1,132 eggs
Pen No. 9, S. C. Brown Leghorns, Missouri	1,180 eggs

A thing which is worthy of our consideration is the fact that Pen No. 11, Black Minorcas, from Iowa, is a pen which was entered in the last year's contest and made a very poor record. The owner was not discouraged and entered the same hens again this year. More than half of them are two years old hens and they were among the leading pens of the month, and tied a pen of Anconas from Missouri for the silver cup for June, each pen laying 212 eggs. A pen of White Leghorns from California also went into the ranks of the first ten pens and improved up the list as will be seen by comparing last month's report and this. The pens which continue to lay a reasonable number of eggs during the hot weather are going to be the hens and pens which win.

Yours truly,

POULTRY FEED

San Francisco, Cal., June 28, 1913.

Mr. J. P. Gentry,
Of Aunt Patsy's Poultry Feed Co.,
Memphis, Tenn.

Dear Sir:

If the freight from Memphis to San Francisco is not more than $1 per cwt., please ship me 50 bags of Aunt Patsy's Poultry Feed, the Egg Producer.

I came to California last fall, from Tennessee, and when I got here the property on which I located had quite a number of hens and a few turkeys; among the turkeys there were a few young ones just hatched and the hens were not laying at all, but with the aid of Aunt Patsy, which I brought with me, I soon had them laying profitably, I raised the young turkeys altogether on an Aunt Patsy, and to my surprise when they were six months old they commenced to lay freely, so you may know that I am pleased with Aunt Patsy's Poultry Feed, and would like for you to get out the above order as soon as possible.

My neighbors are surprised at the great yield of eggs from my hens, and if you could get a reasonable freight rate I have no dobt but that a great deal of your feed could be sold in this state; as the poultry interest here is large, and the people are disgusted with the poor feed on the market.

Very truly,
G. W. FRANCIS.

Ask Your Dealer for Aunt Patsy Poultry Feed, the Egg Producer.

WHAT TO FEED IN ORDER TO SECURE EGGS.

If you want eggs during the latter part of the summer and early fall you must feed your hens on a thoroughly balanced ration, in the shape of a dry mash. We claim Aunt Patsy's Poultry Feed to be the best dry mash on the market; from the fact that it is composed of the highest grade of raw material that can possibly be secured. This feed has no filler or adulterated, cheap stuff, whatever, but contains every ingredient of which the egg itself is composed; and if you will only think a moment, you will agree with me that if you put into the hen's craw the ingredients of which the egg is made, you have a right to expect her digestive organs to convert these ingredients into the egg and to secure a greater yield of eggs from your hen than if you fed her otherwise.

Ask any successful poultryman what he thinks of Aunt Patsy, and give us a trial order.

Very truly,
AUNT PATSY POULTRY FEED CO.

CO-OPERATIVE FARMING

Learn Something---Make Something

TWENTY MILES from Atlanta, railroad station on place, is a farm of 671 acres—300 acres in high state of cultivation. The finest farm in North Georgia for growing fruits, vegetables, corn, cotton, alfalfa, etc., and for raising fine horses, mules, cattle and poultry.

Owner wants to sell to twenty men at sacrifice price, including live stock and implements now on twelve-horse farm. More than half the number already secured. Among them one of the most successful and scientific farmers and cattle and poultry raisers in Georgia, who has contracted to generally supervise the entire place.

This farm has wonderful and natural advantages for developing a community club, where families can spend the summer at small cost and gain instruction in farming and raising live stock.

We need eight more men. Cost will be small, but will yield handsome returns. If you are interested, phone Main 4123, or write to Co-Op. Farm, 66 W. Mitchell St.

FORTUNE TELLING

WE OFFER the corner of Twelfth street and Crescent avenue, 150x150 feet, alley on side and in rear. On this corner are four well-built six-room cottages. The total rental is $150 per month. This property is within 300 feet of Peachtree street. As far as this piece of land is concerned, the owner can become a FORTUNE teller, not in the sense of predicting things, but in speaking of his own land. The FUTURE of Crescent avenue and the adjoining property has been assured, so there is no need to look to the future. The PRESENT is the time that interests us most. The scarcity of good corners in this section is emphasized by the fact that large apartment houses are on almost every similar corner in this neighborhood. What better investment could a man make than on a corner? These houses make good homes and will always stay rented. Why not buy a valuable corner, live in a nice, comfortable home, and collect your income which is on all sides of you, and later, when the FUTURE brings true the value and enhancement predicted now in the PRESENT, you can congratulate yourself on being a truthful FORTUNE teller; or, in other words, an owner of good Atlanta real estate. IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Whitehall Extension Lease and Two Sales Announced. Tenth Street and Other Sales—Bottenfield Agency Announces Long List of Sales—Manufacturers May Select Location Monday—Rent Season Opens — Money Easier. Convention.

A few sales, a lease announcement and other interesting real estate happenings were announced on yesterday.

What is known as the Whitehall extension figured in two or three sales announcements yesterday. This street which has frontage on the Central railroad, will probably become an industrial section such as Walker street.

The Central railroad has agreed to run spur tracks for manufacturerers there, and there has been a good deal of activity on the street of late.

WHITEHALL LEASE.

On Friday it was announced that C. H. Johnson had applied for a permit to build a two-story manufacturing plant on the Whitehall extension. This lot was sold to Mr. Johnson for the Auto Top and Trimming company by R. L. Turman, of the Turman, Black & Calhound agency, last fall. The consideration was around $10,000.

Mr. Johnson has leased, through Mr. Turman to the Auto Top and Trimming company the building for which he asked a permit. The term of the lease is for ten years, and the minimum consideration is $1,800 a year. The property adjoins the General Electric company.

ADJOINING PROPERTY SOLD.

Ben Feld has sold to Dr. Lumbal Roy a frontage of 131 feet by 168 feet to the railroad, on the Whitehall extension, near the Johnson property.

The consideration was $19,100, or about $140 a front foot.

Mr. Feld also sold a lot in the same tract to H. Rodelsperger, of Hawkinsville, 43x168 to the railroad, for $6,000, taking other property as part payment.

TENTH STREET SALE.

Mr. Turman also sold for A. H. Goodwin to W. A. Edwards a lot on Tenth street facing Piedmont park, between Bedford place and Taft street, 59x10, for $3,150.

MECHANIC STREET SALE.

Charles Jacobs has sold to Ike Minsk, 18 Mechanic street for an aggregate of $11,600.

This property consists of a dwelling on a lot 150 feet east of Huisey street, the lot being 46x100.

SOUTH SIDE SALE.

James Hanjaras has sold to B. Kramer the northwest corner of Martin and Rawson streets, 86x113. The consideration was not named.

BOTTENFIELD SALES.

L. P. Bottenfield agency sold a small tract for subdivision that will be put on the market later. The price was $6,000.

L. P. Bottenfield sold through J. E. Pritchett one small tract located on the Mount Perrin road for $1,650.

William and George McKenzie sold through J. D. Rieves, of the L. P. Bottenfield agency, two small acreage tracts located on the Mount Perrin road for $3,000.

L. P. Bottenfield agency sold through E. F. Culpepper to R. T. Harralson for Mrs. Lula Mitchell a house and lot at the corner of Ormond and Fraser streets, for $2,000.

The L. P. Bottenfield agency sold through E. F. Culpepper to Dixon Andrews a house and lot at 130 Tift avenue for $2,400.

The L. C. Bottenfield agency sales for the past week reached nearly $50,000. They were as follows:

PEACHTREE HIGHLANDS SALES.

Lot No. 3, Block E	$ 950.00
Lot No. 4, Block E	950.00

MANUFACTURERS' BUILDING

The manufacturers will probably decide on the location of their building at a meeting to be held Monday morning at 11:30 o'clock.

Brooks Morgan, chairman of the building committee, said yesterday that no selection had been made, but he intimated that his committee thought favorably of one proposal. He would not say what this proposal was.

J. R. Smith has offered to erect a building for the manufacturers on his large lot at Walton and Bartow streets. He has had plans drawn for a structure to cost $100,000, and has submitted the plans and a finished drawing to the manufacturers.

The plans provide for about a six-story building, to be thoroughly fireproof throughout. The plans are by J. R. MacEachron. They call for large glass windows on the exterior, made of material which light penetrates but keeps out sunlight. As the manufacturers want display rooms this effect was specially designed for that purpose.

RENTING AND LEASES

The renting and lease season is opening with a rush, and agencies which specialize on this business are working overtime. This condition is due to the fact that nearly all leases are made to end in September, and tenants have got to be supplied accordingly.

Several important business leases have been signed up and should be announced this week. Two affect central locations. Two involve locations further out, with buildings. One involves a building to cost around $75,000.

Houses continue to be scarce, and this applies also to apartments. The renting situation, with the possible exception of some stores located too far out, could hardly be better.

MONEY SHOWS EASE

Money is showing an easier tendency. One loan agent said yesterday that he had placed two residence loans during the week at 6 per cent, these on houses some distance out and not in a very active section.

Another agent threw considerable light on the situation.

"I have plenty of customers with money to lend," he said. "The trouble is not with the supply of money, but with the fact that the holders think they can get 8 per cent.

"But so far I haven't been able to place a single loan at 8 per cent. This would indicate that the borrowers don't seem to be hard up enough to go the high rate. This means that the lenders will have to give in and accept lower rates. There is already a good deal of evidence that they are doing this."

One of the large insurance companies, which dropped out recently because of the demand for loans from its policyholders, intimated to its local agents lately that it had about caught up, and might be back in the market for real estate loans around the first of the month.

REALTY CONVENTION.

The sixth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges, to be held at Winnipeg, Manitoba, July 28, 29 and 30, and which will be largely attended by real estate men from Atlanta, is expected to be the biggest assemblage of real estate dealers ever held in America. From 1,000 to 1,500 delegates will be present, representing every state in the United States and many of the provinces of Canada.

The convention is to be held in the

HYDRO-AEROPLANE TO FLY AT CHARLESTON THIS WEEK

Isle of Palms Management Arranges Free Exhibitions by Wonderful New Machine

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

ISLE OF PALMS S. C. July 19.—The hydro-aeroplane is the very latest idea in the world of aviation, and the people of the south will have a chance to see a new Curtiss machine of this type fly over land and sea here this week. W. S. Luckey, of New York City, having arrived to give two exhibitions daily at the Isle of Palms, on Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

The Isle of Palms management, appreciating the largest attendance this season ever enjoyed by the popular Carolina resort, has at large expense secured the services of one of the leading birdmen in the country to entertain the friends of the resort this week, and the very nature of the exhibition means that thousands of people will enjoy a sport that they have never before seen, as the guests of the Isle of Palms owners.

The hydro-aeroplane is the flying machine that has revolutionized naval aviation. Before it was invented commodorne arrangements had to be made for launching into the air the ordinary aeroplane which rose from the deck of a battleship with difficulty and landed with greater difficulty. The hydro-aeroplane has changed all that, and the United States, England, Germany, Japan, Italy and France have been quick to accept the Curtiss model.

Mr. Luckey tuned up his wonderful little machine yesterday at the Isle of Palms, in preparation for his first flight Thursday morning. He will make two flights daily while here, going to Charleston from the isle of Palms in or returning at 10:30 with the mail, and coming back along with the ferry boat and train trips. His machine is equipped both with water and land gear, permitting him to rush along over the surface of the ocean, rise up like a duck, leap over ships or bridges and descend to the water again, or to sweep along the broad ocean beach, to rise in flight over a mile high, and attain a speed of 90 miles an hour without difficulty.

Three passengers can be carried on the Luckey flying machine, Mrs. Luckey who is here with her husband, often takes flying trips. If any visitors here this week wish to try a flight they will be given the glad hand by the aviator.

A COGENT PLEA FOR EXTENDING THE STATE ROAD TO THE SEA

Pironus H. Bell Reviews the Western and Atlantic Situation and Shows the Value, Feasibility of Linking the Road With a Port

Editor The Journal: While earnest attention is being devoted to the present condition and future uses of the Western and Atlantic railroad, by reason of the recommendations in the message of the former chief executive of Georgia to the present general assembly, which was an argument against the proposal to extend the road to a Georgia seaport and a plea for a new lease of about thirty years' duration.

I presume it is appropriate for me to do this, because this message constitutes the only labored argument against the proposal to extend the road to the sea I have seen in print in the twelve years which the proposition has been discussed by the people of Georgia, and also to condemn original ideas of my own, owing the building of this extension and the proposal of changes in the passenger terminals of the road in Atlanta.

It is to be doubted, very much, if it had not been proposed to build to the sea, anybody in Georgia would have thought about matters connected with the new lease of the road until about the time the present incumbent president that there may be a majority sentiment in favor of placing the road on a lasting independent basis by going to the seaport, there would be much hurry on the part of some for opportunity to obtain control, for under the present lease twenty years prior to expiration of the present lease term. Common sense would dictate that any thought of a new lease should be postponed for at least four years, if that should need attention.

The proposals of the final message are (1) Extend the Western and Atlantic by a branch of thirty-five miles to Shell Mound on the Tennessee River and connect with roads between Georgia and Tennessee so that Shell Mound and the river there will be on Georgia soil, at a cost of $3,000,000, or canalize Chickamauga creek at $1,000,000 to connect with the Tennessee river near Boyce station, about eight miles from Chattanooga, and (2) Lease to railroad companies originating beyond the Georgia line will become, as alleged, intra-state commerce, and hence come under control of our railroad commission; and (3) Lease our state road again, for another generation, preparing the details of the new contract now, or at least in the year 1914.

The reply to these suggestions is, that we are already at the Tennessee river at Boyce, near Chattanooga, and do not need to spend large sums for other connections with that stream. Besides, it has been suggested that the city of Chattanooga would give us a more valuable connection with the river in the city or very near, in exchange for land to open up Broad street there.

The futility of the Shell Mound "coup" is readily seen when we reflect that any Tennessee congressman could defeat the project when this "agreement or contract between states" to exchange lands was considered by congress, as it would have to be, on a motion for "consent;" or that any east Tennessee lawyer on behalf of cities or shippers discriminated against could show that upriver commerce really intended for delivery at points within Georgia was, in fact, subject matter of interstate commerce, whether Shell Mound were in Georgia or Tennessee. The supreme court of the United States would undoubtedly regard such arrangement an evasion and a subterfuge, working a legal fraud on Chattanooga and other Tennessee interests.

But in proposing to build this unnecessary branch for the state road the writer of the message contends that the thirty miles outside of the five miles of mountain tunnels can be built at a cost of $20,000 to $25,000 a mile over the rugged chains of mountain ranges in the counties of Chattooga, Walker and Dade. And yet, when the main purpose of the message, the defeat of an extension to the sea, is considered we find the contention that a railroad from Atlanta to the Atlantic 276 miles long, two-thirds of which is on the level coastal plain of Georgia and the balance over undulating territory would cost $15,000,000, or about $54,000 a mile, and hinting that it might reach $70,000 a mile, while raising the spectre of a public debt of $20,000,000 should the "fixed financial policy of the state."

In my contentions about extending our road to an Atlantic port one fourth of soil I have argued that the cost should not exceed $6,000,000 (which is the average of the above Shell Mound estimate), if built with free labor and that the use of convict labor by the state would reduce this from 20 to 40 per cent. My estimate was based upon common knowledge and on a letter from an accomplished civil engineer who has built many miles of road in both the north and south Georgia, and upon the verbal statement of another, equally as experienced, that any one who "secured the contract to build the extension for $6,000,000 would become a very rich man."

We all know that "round table" estimates of this kind are of little conclusive value. We know that the only way to ascertain the cost of a railroad is to make a survey in the field and work out the notes and itemize and sum up the value of the donations made to the "right of way man." My own opinion is, that the terminals and depots would be built and donated to the state, without cost. In this matter of terminals we ought we not to hope that we should be met in the spirit of Samuel Mitchell, of Pike county, who in 1842 gave what is now the magnificent terminal properties of our road in Atlanta (and other property), to us free from his deed of gift, "in consideration of the desire which I feel for the interests of the State of Georgia and with a desire to promote every improvement that may conduce to the welfare of the people of said state?"

The Message seems to assume that some one has proposed to "abandon" or "dismantle" terminal facilities of our road at Chattanooga and Atlanta.

The proposition about a change in the terminals at Chattanooga, made and urged by Hon. Hooper Alexander, was that the state should buy a large tract of suburban land for switching yards for about $65,000, so as to relieve the $4,000,000 worth of absolutely central land about eight acres, we own in Chattanooga from use as a mere storage ground for "empty cars" and thus retain this splendid property for business uses that would pay a revenue of $150,000 a year to our state treasury. And in this connection I do not doubt that such central property would be used for purposes similar to those which the Southern and Central railroad make in Atlanta for similar property and which the Louisville and Nashville Railroad company is profiting by in their five-story depots and their produce houses on Central avenue and Butler street in Atlanta. The occupancy of the buildings on our land in Chattanooga would be by shippers and patrons of our road.

The Message indorses the Bleckley plan. When the plan was proposed Mr. Editor, I wrote you that I thought it was beautiful, moved by author to be a most accomplished architect, but that one objection to it was placing the state road passenger depot permanently on its present site, and making a tunnel out of the space between Pryor street and Forsyth street; that I thought the passenger station of our state road in Atlanta should be at and west of Central city bridge, thus affording easy and convenient transfer of passengers and baggage to and from the Terminal station at Mitchell streets and Madison avenue, thus saving about eight blocks' ride or walk for the general traveling public. Besides, another objection is it would dedicate, without pay to the state at least $4,000,000 worth of the state's property to uses that can be better preserved without the plaza and by a plan which is here proposed, that instead of "dismantling," and by "renaming" the state's freight facilities in Atlanta, will bring about the greatest measure of good to all, the state, the city of Atlanta, the transfer and shipping public, and the owners of the property abutting both sides of what is now Atlanta's "gulch" or ravine of Central canyon.

This plan is to have the passenger depot of the W. & A. in Atlanta at and west of Forsyth street bridge, tear up all tracks from that point to Forsyth street and pave with a modern pavement. The state would thus reclaim say 200 by 1,000 feet of property. Front on Forsyth street worth say $4,000,000, and also the present site of our passenger depot. After allowing streets on each three buildings, say three to five stories, 100x300 each, could be built, and should produce a revenue under ground rent lease of from $100,000 to $200,000 per annum or more. A similar sum could perhaps be obtained from the present depot site. Under this plan the city of Atlanta could afford to pay the Central Railroad company for the land used by them for sidetrack purposes, thus acquiring a new street in her center, and that railroad company ought to be willing to sell because, when the abutting property owners, after lines have expired or were adjusted would cease using their stores and basements for freight depot purposes and convert them into plate glass fronts, that company could have no railroad use for such sidetracks. As to freight terminals for the state road in Atlanta, the above plan and the utilizing of other property not necessary for railroad purposes consisting of twenty or more acres from Atlanta to Chattanooga, and in Chattanooga, would furnish "assets" to provide and replace those freight terminal facilities we formerly had in Atlanta that have been "dismantled" and "abandoned" since the present lease of the road.

In conclusion, I wish to add to the many reasons that have been advanced for extending our State road to the sea by or before the year 1920 one more argument that has not been emphasized. Our present road has always been, and will always be until the ocean connections of her own used to transport freights into Georgia to the extent of 80 per cent at least of its tonnage, and the freight charges have been paid by the people of Georgia. In other words, as we consume 80 per cent of the product that are carried by this road, we pay 80 per cent of the rentals that fin their way to our state treasury.

Now, if the road were extended to the ocean, it would become the instrument of carrying freight for consumption by peoples between the ports of Georgia at both ends and while rendering the people of other states and of foreign countries a service, would also help draw on outside resources for the benefit of our treasury and the upbuilding of our institutions.

I do not doubt that if the business talent of our citizens can but be enlisted to solve the financial problem of the extension of the State road to the sea, aiming to complete the work before the expiration of the present lease, their "will" will find a convenient "way," and then Georgia will enter upon a new era of greatness, welfare and glory.

SHORTAGE SAID TO HAVE CLOSED LAFAYETTE BANK

Sensational Developments Expected to Follow Detailed Report of Affair

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—While absolute silence is being maintained by Acting Comptroller of Currency Kane in regard to the closing of the First National bank, of LaFayette, Ga., so far as the details are concerned it is stated that the direct cause of the troubles of the institution is a large shortage. No details have as yet been received from Bank Examiner Thomas J. Dunlap, it is asserted, and as soon as his complete report is received, it is intimated that startling developments will follow. It is said that the shortage will be at least $30 000, also that the bank was closed with the approval of the directors, the latter having made the institution insolvent.

R. N. Dickerson is president, and F. A. Hunt, Jr., cashier. Acting Comptroller Kane said that the shortage was believed to be due to embezzlement or defalcation.

The last examination of the bank was made May 23, and it was then all right. The statement in answer to the comptroller's call of June 4 also showed the bank to be in good condition and it is believed that the shortage occurred since that time. The bank had a capital stock of $50,000 and a surplus of $8,500.

Sensational developments are expected to follow the filing of the detailed report.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY HEAD DISCUSSES BOLL WEEVIL

Railroads' Warnings to Farmers Doing Much to Prevent Spread, He Says

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

WASHINGTON, July 19.—President Finley, of the Southern Railway company, speaking today of conditions in the territory east of the Mississippi river into which the Mexican cotton boll weevil has spread, said:

"The boll weevil has appeared in cotton fields along the lines of the Southern Railway company and its associated companies in Mississippi and western Alabama. Owing to a view to obtaining first-hand information as to conditions, I have had one of my assistants visit the infested territory in company with the manager of our department of farm improvement work, who is giving his personal attention to direc ing the efforts we are making to aid in controlling the weevil.

Generally speaking, the weevil is present in much of the territory west of a line from Shelby county, Tennessee, running diagonally across the s ates of Mississippi and Alabama to the southeast corner of Georgia. Probably owing to the overflow followed by cold weather, the weevil has been found relatively few localities in that part of the Mississippi delta traversed by our lines.

"At every point visited in the infested territory a determined and intelligent fight is being made against the weevil. The farmers are being aided and advised in this by the s ate agricultural commissioners, the agents of the United States department of agriculture, and by our department of farm improvement work. The fight was begun as soon as the weevils which survived the winter began to appear in the fields. While the cotton was small it was possible to find and destroy large numbers of the weevils. With the growth of the plant it has become increasingly difficult to find the insects and the fight is now being carried on by gathering and burning the squares in which the female weevil has deposited eggs so as to reduce the second generation to a minimum. These squares are easily found as, soon after an egg has been laid, the square flares and turns yellow, later falling to the ground. The object of this is to keep down the number of weevils maturing during the fruiting season. It is important that, at the same time, the crop shall be pushed by rapid and shallow cultivation.

"I am advised that it is the opinion of men familiar with the weevil that these methods of control are proving fully as effective in Alabama and Mississippi as they have been west of the Mississippi river, where, in many localities, more cotton is grown with the weevil than before its appearance. Present indications are that the destruction of cotton by the boll weevil will not be disastrous in any locality along our lines; that where the advice of the government agents and of our department of farm improvement work is followed good crops will be made, and that, where farmers are doing the best work, production will be fairly up to normal. Cotton acreage has been reduced to some extent, the acreage in corn and other crops being increased. Increased attention is being given to live stock, and our live stock agents are receiving inquiries from farmers in the boll weevil territory as to where registered cattle of the beef breeds can be obtained. From a view to obtaining reliable information as to conditions, I have had one of my assistants visit the infested territory in company with the manager of our department of farm improvement work, who is giving his personal attention to directing the efforts we are making to aid in controlling the weevil.

"Men familiar with the fight against the weevil west of the Mississippi believe that this season's work will demonstrate to the farmers east of the river that, by the adoption of the methods inaugurated by the late Dr. Seaman A. Knapp and advocated by our department of farm improvement work, cotton can be produced profitably east of the river under boll weevil conditions, and that with the impetus given to diversified farming, crop rotation and live stock raising, the insect will not seriously injure the farmers of the southeastern states.

"It is gratifying to know that the appearance of the weevil at points on our lines has not brought about the conditions of panic that followed its spread into some other localities. I believe that some credit for this must be taken by the managements of the southern railway company and its associated companies for having inaugurated the work of advising farmers how to deal with the weevil in advance of its appearance. Our work in this respect has been made successful by the helpful attitude of farmers, merchants, bankers and professional men and by the cordial co-operation extended to us by the state agricultural colleges and by the United States department of agriculture. The manager of the assistant manager of the weevil territory, and the field agents of our departments of farm-improvement work are doing their utmost to meet the requests of farmers for assistance and advice. It is our purpose, after this season's crop has been made, to continue to give special attention to the territory in which the weevil is present and to the territory to which it may spread in order that the farmers may be prepared to combat it effectively."

Each Dealing Machine Will Pick Victim From Behind Barred Doors

(By Associated Press.)

SALT LAKE CITY, July 19.—In the presence of electrical experts, federal officers and detectives here today demonstrated what was decla ed to be perhaps the most remarkable death-dealing machine invented in rec nt years.

The invention, it is said, can be tuned on to the saving of life by preventing train or ship collisions.

Electricians took the machine into a steel and concrete vault, in an office building. Another part of the contrivance, on which was mounted a bell and an incandescent globe, was placed in a closed room across a hall. Then the electric current of the machine was turned on. On the unattached box at other room the bell rang and the lamp glowed brightly.

In his acknowledged letter to Miss Jamburger Cummings sent a diagram of his invention, saying he would place a suit case of nitro-glycerine in her room and explode it from a distance. The demonstration today said the electrical experts, proved that he could have accomplished this feat.
